Fishermen's
and therefore in the name of all fishermen that we make this submission today.

By its nature the fishing profession is one of high risk. Where such risk is undertaken high returns ordinarily compensate those venturing its pursuit. At the moment, however, our fishing industry is not sufficiently robust to enable us to recover from our losses and severe losses. This condition we do not see as normal but rather one due to a lack of technical development and prudent planning.

We are indeed hopeful now that this situation has been taken in hand by our Provincial Government in its Department of Industry and Natural Resources.

During the afternoon a Dakota aircraft carrying eight children who had arrived at the station with the greatest number of invitation leaflets that had been scattered by the R.C.A.F. over P.E.I. were taken up on an hour long flight over the province.

Also along on this flight were three children from the two Homes near Charlottetown as well as members of the press. On the ground free supervised pony rides for the children was provided by the R.C.A.F.

Summerside stores were closed for the afternoon and their staffs joined the crowds that came from almost every direction and community on the Island.

Special Hardships
The present lobster season, as is very well known to you, has been one of special hardships to the fishermen. During the first two weeks of May very few lobsters were landed because of unfavorable weather conditions.

Although in the past our Governments have given assistance that would form a pattern to follow in this instance, we want our staff to be well understood—we fishermen, look upon direct relief as far from ideal. We feel it takes away initiative which is so vital in building a stable industry. In its results it does not lend itself to be constructive, permanent and stable.

And so, we refuse to come before any Government with a bare-faced proposition to the effect that it is the responsibility of the Government to replace every lost or damaged lobster trap or boat on the shore. At the present time, however, since so many fishermen have lost so much we feel that some immediate assistance is sorely needed to help fishermen replace fleets of normal size. This is the initial assistance we would seek.

Just how this should or can be done, we at present, are not prepared to suggest in detail but we are willing to sit down in joint committee, to study and plan some equitable method of dealing with the problem in a way that is possible of implementation. On our own we cannot cope with the situation, and so of necessity it must be a joint effort.

As we see it, two things are necessary—necessary funds and administration. As to the first we would suggest that a "Disaster Fund" be set up to which the fishermen would contribute their share on a check-off basis. As to the second—administration, this could be joint or autonomous. And this is where we consider our Association to be of lasting service.

Offers Co-operation
Our Association could (1) help in the collection of funds and (2) act as a referee of claims. In this way we would avoid political patronage and insure impartiality. Such a proposal we realize may take time to study and implement, but we feel it is a step towards to effect something constructive in the best interest of the small fisherman who will always have a necessary role to play in the industry, regardless of large scale operation or development. While in the present crisis there seems to be no alternative other than some direct and immediate assistance, we would like to see this coupled conditionally to the setting up of a more permanent and constructive system of safeguarding us against such disasters.

Finally, in the name of the Prince Edward Island Fishermen's Association, we wish to take this opportunity to extend appreciation to the Fisheries Development Committee for the contribution you are

Plane Ride Highlights Day For Group Of Kiddies At S'ide On Saturday

A free ride over Prince Edward Island in a Dakota aircraft for 12 delighted children was undoubtedly for them the highlight of Air Force Day at R.C.A.F. station Summerside on Saturday.

Ranging in age from 6 to 16, only one had previously been up in an aircraft but each of them thoroughly enjoyed the new and thrilling experience of seeing Prince Edward Island from high up in the air.

A day or so previously to Air Force Day, planes from the Summerside station dropped leaflets over several communities on P.E.I. inviting the people to attend the big air show. The leaflets also stated that to at least six persons turning in the greatest number of leaflets would go the reward of a flight over P.E.I.

The keen interest displayed in the contest influenced the authorities to allow two more winners to the six who were originally promised the free ride, and these eight, with three children from Albert and St. Vincent's Homes, and two other persons who accompanied the younger children, together with members of the press, made up the civilian members of this most enjoyable flight.

Winners of the leaflet contest were: Elwyn Jelly of O'Leary, with 1367 leaflets out of 2000 that had been dropped over that village; Lee Sudsury, 14 of Kingsville with 963; Francis Weir, 14 of Souris, with 919; Gordon Heustis 14, of Summerside with 863; Eugene Callaghan, 16, Alberton, with 770; Frankie Larkin, 16, Montague with 600; Melvin Gaudet, 16, Summerside, with 289; and Garry Arsenault, 6, Summerside, with 188; and he was accompanied by Mae Arsenault, 14.

The three other children were: Priscilla McEwen, 13, and Melvin Gallant, 16, both from St. Vincent's Home; and Wallie Prowse from Mt. Herbert Home.

On hand to see the passengers board the big plane were a few hundred people who detached themselves from the thousands close by, whose interest was divided between the take-off and the other interesting activities that were constantly taking place.

Leaving the ground with the smoothness and grace of a bird, the plane headed in over Summerside and safety belts were fastened giving the young passengers the opportunity to move about and look out the windows on either side of the plane.

With fascinated expressions the faces of the youngsters peered out in every direction, admiring the magnificent scene that lay below them, where could be seen the beautiful pattern of red and green surrounded on both the north and south coasts by the blue water extending out beyond.

Passing over St. Eleanors and Summerside, Kensington could be seen on the left, as the big plane headed for Borden where down below could be seen the two car-ferries tied at the pier which extended out into the harbour, and in the distance could be seen the cape of land in New Brunswick with the village of Cape Tormentine at the nearest point to P.E.I.

Continuing on over Cape Traverse, Tryon, Crapaud, Bonshaw, to Charlottetown which was circled a view or two to give everyone a good view of the Island's capital, then continued some distance further east and across the Island to the north shore, where the pilot again altered course and followed the coastline towards Summerside where, before heading for the airport, he circled Malpeque Bay.

Flight Lieutenant Erard, the public relations officer at the Summerside station, accompanied the group and made the trip doubly enjoyable for the young passengers who he took, one at a time, up to the cockpit of the aircraft where he introduced each of them to the pilot, Flying Officer Boon, and the co-pilot, Flying Officer Laxson.

Then they set in the co-pilot's seat, put on their oxygen masks and talked with the pilot through the intercom, then listened to the Summerside control tower frequency, and listened in to the communication between various aircraft and the Summerside control tower.

Flight Lieutenant Everard pointed out prominent features of the Island—ocean, bays, rivers, highways, towns. When asked if they could recognize the different places, most of them could.

When asked to guess the altitude at which the plane was flying, all but one guessed 5,000—actually they were at the height of 1 mile during most of the trip.

Little Garry Arsenault, 6, sitting down on the co-pilot's seat could not see out the window, but sitting on the pilot's knee barely managed to look over the window edge, and went beaming back to his seat.

For young Wallie Prowse, from the Mt. Herbert Home, a Boy Scout, it was a big day—(1) He shook hands with the Lieutenant Governor, (2) it was his birthday, and (3) he had the aircraft ride over Prince Edward Island—8.

LONDON (CP)—Smallest picture among 400 at an exhibition of Fine Arts was a senescent, slightly larger than a postage stamp. Exhibitors all engaged in publishing or advertising, ranged from a hopeful office boy to famous poster artists.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Firemen had to cope with a big pet collie dog, tethered on a long chain at the back of the restaurant, when they battled a fire in apartments above a barbecue shop here which caused damage of more than $10,000.

Children From Homes Attend Air Force Day

Exactly two freckles on a slightly tilted little nose, merry blue eyes, auburn red hair, gleaming in the sunlight captured the heart of the Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, and not only his, but the heart and the heart of course, the heart of the Airforce.

When, where, why? Saturday, 14 June, 1952, Air Force Day at Summerside. The R.C.A.F. on Saturday was host to the people of Canada, R.C.A.F. station Summerside was host to the people of Prince Edward Island, the R.C.A.F. personnel of the station were host to the children of Saint Vincent and Mount Herbert Homes.

When the clock read five p.m., a sleek Air Force bus rolled up to a group of starchy-eyed, weary, but happy children. Curly locks which a few hours before had been tenderly groomed were now windswept, cheeks that had glistened from generous applications of soap and water now showed unmistakable signs of candy bars, soft drinks, ice cream and hot dogs.

As the children sank back into the soft cushions of the bus, the alert Air Force driver quickly let the bus doors hiss open to admit a number of Air Force officers who came in to say goodbye and thank you to their wonderful little guests. And wonderful indeed they were.

Later in the day we interviewed Flying Officer Ken Metheral and Flying Officer Norm Davis, both of whom are solid family men.

Both were profuse in their praise of the splendid manners of the little charges.

Group Captain A. G. Kenyon, C.D., commanding officer of R. C. A. F. Station Summerside remarked in an interview that the Air Force today had received perhaps one of the greatest compliments in its history.

He went on to relate that one of the St. Vincent's boys when asked what he thought of the Air Force—quietly and deliberately said "I think the Air Force is almost as good as the Scouts". We know the R.C.A.F. will live up to that compliment from their young guest—8.

"OUR VERY OWN" AT THE CAPITOL
—The shocked reaction to the discovery of her origin by an adopted child keynotes the family drama of "Our Very Own," Samuel Goldwyn's latest film production which stars Ann Blyth, Farley Granger and Joan Evans.

Miss Blyth plays the eldest of three girls in a typical American family, unaware of the fact that she alone is not of its flesh and blood. The jealousy of a younger sister, who accidentally discovers the secret and reveals it, brings about the dramatic complications of the story.

Granger portrays the heroine's boy friend, and Miss Evans the troubling sister. Jane Wyatt and Donald Cook portray the foster parents. Ann Dvorak is cast as Miss Blyth's real mother, who is indifferent to a reunion with her. David Miller directed the film, which RKO Radio is distributing. F. Hugh Herbert wrote the story and screenplay.
