ISAAC PITMAN.

The Work for Which Her Majesty the Queen Knighted Him.

Queen Victoria probably never conferred knighthood on a man more worthy of the honor than Isaac Pitman, whose system of phonography—with its many improvements by others—is now practised by the majority of shorthand writers of the English language. There were many authors or teachers of different systems preceding Pitman's:

Timothy Bright, about 1587, continued by Peter Bales, 1590; John Willis, 1602; Edmond Willis, 1618; Skelton, 1620; Cartwright, 1642; Rich, 1646; Mason, 1672; Gurney, 1740; Byrom, 1767; Mavor, 1780; Taylor, 1786, and Lewis, 1812. It was not until 1837 that the system of Isaac Pitman was published, which was immediately declared to be far superior than any other.

His first treatise on shorthand, "Stenographic Soundhand," appeared in 1837, and he thus became the originator of the spelling reform, to which and the propagation of his system of phonetic shorthand he devoted his entire attention since 1843, when the Phonetic Society was established. His system of shorthand was renamed in 1840 and entitled "Phonography, or Writing by Sound," and his "Phonographic Reporters' Companion" appeared in 1846.

Mr. Pitman's "Phonetic Institute" at Bath is really a phonetic printing office and a publishing house for the despatch of phonetic books to all parts of the world. He edits and prints the Phonetic Journal. Besides printing his own instruction books for teaching phonetic shorthand, Mr. Pitman has issued a little library of about eight volumes, printed entirely in shorthand, ranging from the Bible to "Rasselas." Mr. Pitman has received several medals and other testimonials from various parts of the world in recognition of his system and of his labors for the reformation of English orthography.

Isaac Pitman was born in Trowbridge, Wilts, England, January 4, 1813. He was obliged to leave school at the age of twelve years, and entered the counting house of a clothing manufacturer. After a six years' service as a clerk he received five months' training in the Normal College of the British and Foreign School Society, and was in 1831 appointed master of the British school at Barton-on-Humber. He established the British school at Wotton-Under-Edge in 1836.

A "Pull" That Did Not Go.

Having been brought up in the Methodist church, Hatton found himself as first assistant postmaster-general, subjected to many a religious "pull" from persons introducing themselves to his notice as members of the same communion. One of these persons was a minister who had not held a settled charge for several years, but had combined itinerant preaching with the duties of an inspector under the postoffice department. When Hatton came in, several subordinate functionaries were marked for removal, among others this one. He hurried about, and by one means and another secured letters from prominent church dignataries asking for his retention. He applied first to Postmaster-General Howe, who turned him over to his first assistant. "I believe I have written you asking for your resignation?" said Hatton, quietly, in response to the visitor's introductory remarks.

"You have, sir, and I am here to ask if you cannot withdraw your request on the strength of all these credentials?"

"No, sir, I cannot. I have made up my mind, and you will have to go."

The applicant assumed his most solemn air and tone.

"Brother Hatton," said he, "you are a Methodist, are you not?"

"I certainly am."

"And I am a preacher in the Methodist church. If you deprive me of this office, the church all over the country will regard it as a studied insult and a deliberate blow at Methodism."

"Ah, my friend, there you do our church a gross injustice," answered Hatton, coolly. "Since I have been raised to one of the most prominent positions in this department, I take it that the Methodists are satisfied. They certainly would not ask for everything; and as I can serve the church better as first assistant postmaster-general than you can serve it as an inspector, you will have to get out, for I shan't. Good morning, Brother Smith."—Kate Field's Washington.

An Artistic Room.

There is a house in Chicago with a boudoir that has gained the reputation of being the loveliest and most artistic room in America, and that is much more than having a grand room or a costly one. The "heavenliness" of this room is due to its wall paper, which is a sky blue, with here and there a drift of tiny white clouds. The effect is charming, and the delicate idea is carried out in the most minute detail; the furniture is spidery and white, the carpet a sky blue, velvet, has exactly the same design as the wall paper, so the idea of the sky reflected in a pool of water is perfect. This effect is heightened by tall palms here and there around the wall, and all around the room, close to the wall, are ferns, feathery maiden hair, and tall lilies. Detroit Free Press.

Haggard is Patriotic.

Rider Haggard, at the opening dinner of the Anglo-African Writers' Club in London, in his speech recalled the fact that on the annexation of the Transvaal he hoisted the British flag over it with his own hand. He bestowed great praise upon Mr. Cecil Rhodes, and made a strong speech, which he said he knew to be rank jingoism. In this respect he said: "My sin is ever before me, but all the same, while I have a voice to speak, a pen to write, or any power wherewith I may hope to move the hearts of men, I mean to go on sinning, for to me at least the English name is the most glorious name in history, and the English flag the most splendid that ever flew above the peoples of the earth."

Trees Curiously Fed With Moisture.

The most remarkable tree yet discovered flourishes in the Island of Fierro, one of the largest of the Canary group. This island is so dry that not even a rivulet is to be found within its boundaries, yet there grows a species of tree the leaves of which are narrow and long and continue green throughout the year. There is also a constant cloud surrounding the tree, which is condensed, and, falling in drops, keeps the cisterns placed under it constantly full. In this manner the natives of Fierro obtain water, and as the supply is limited the population must of necessity be limited also.—Philadelphia Press.

Theatre-Goers as a Class.

Habitual theatre-goers are a curious class; a class said not to comprise two per cent. of the people; a class shallow in heart, and of quick, but lazy intellect. And the people, the great big people, of course, still expect (whether they may or not in 1950) to see the player wear his heart upon his sleeve; in its visual nos nce they are puzzled.—Scribner's Magazine.

Chester Looms was Crippled with Kidney Disease—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured him—They were Never Known to Fail.

NEWCOMB MILLS, June 18.—Chester Looms, a well known farmer living near here, has for years been afflicted with kidney disease, so badly that he could not sit in a buggy to drive to town. As he is 69 years old he despaired of a cure. He tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured him. He has not done any farm work for years, but he helped to put in this spring's crops, and anyone who goes to see him to-day will find him betwee the plough-handles instead of laid out on a bed or an easy chair as he used to be. .....
