A HIT AT THE TIMES.—Bred by steam-powers! screamed Mrs. Partington, as she heard Isaac commence a paragraph about making bread by steam.

Isaac exclaimed that it was a new mode of making bread. She looked at him steadily for a moment, when, taking a thumb and finger full, she put the cover on the box, resumed her knitting, and told Isaac to go on which he did.

PAYING PROMPTLY.—"If there is any place in this world where I like to ransack business more than another," said Mrs. Partington, with animation, "it is from the corner of her handkerchief a sum of money she had just received."

The old lady had presented a check for a quarter's pension-money, received on account of Paul, who, in the "last war," served a fortnight in fortifying Boston harbor, and got mortar in his eyes, which hurt his "visionary organs" so that he took to glasses.

GUITAR IN THE HEAD.—Mrs. Partington's neighbor, Mrs. Sharp, complained one morning of a ringing in her ears. "It must be owing to the guitar in your head, dear," said the old lady. She knew every sort of human ailment, and like the down-east doctor, was death on fits.

There was no doubt she was telling what was true, but there were some who questioned it in a gentle cough. We don't doubt its truth.

A SINGULAR FACT.—"There are very fat critters," remarked Mrs. Partington, as she stood viewing a yoke of splendid steers.

"Yes'm," replied the father, "and would you believe it, mum, they were fattened on nothin' but oat straw, and it had n't been thrashed, neither."

"You don't say so!" said she, and, for a moment, doubt of the probability of beef animals. It injures a cow to give milk after she begins to make bag, and as the time of the very beginning of bag making is indefinite, it is well to milk up to within four or five weeks of calving, and then dry off rapidly and stop.

"I want to see some of your gimblets," said a greenhorn one day, as he entered a hardware store. The dealer took down several articles, neither of which suited. "Well, then what kind do you want? here is almost every variety."

A young lady alighting from a stage-coach, a ribbon fell from her bonnet into the bottom of the carriage. "You have left your bow behind," remarked a lady passenger. "No I haven't, he's gone a fishing," innocently exclaimed the damsel.

A gentleman having occasion to call on a lawyer, found his office very hot. He remarked the great heat of the apartment, and said "it was hot as an oven."

"So it ought to be," replied the lawyer, "for 'tis here I make my bread."

A physician gives it as his opinion that the brain is not injured by intemperate drinking, as is generally supposed; for, he adds, "a man given to intemperance in that way, cannot have any brains."

"What! tipsy again?" "No, my dear, not tipsy, but a little slippery. Some scoundrel has been rubbing my boots till they are as smooth as a pane of glass."

"Why do you always buy a second class ticket?" asked a gentleman of a miser. "Because there is no third-class ticket," was the miser's reply.

Cuffy said he'd rather die in a railroad smash up than in a steamship bust up for this reason: "If you gets off and smashed up there you is! but if you gets blowed up on the boat, what is you?"

A tender-hearted father, swearing the peace against three sons thus concluded: "The only one of my sons who shows me any real filial affection is my youngest son Isobad, for he never strikes me when I'm down."

STRANGER—"Here, boy, where does this road go to?" "Boy—I don't know where it goes to, but you can always find it here about this time of day."

If the French people should give Louis Napoleon notice to leave the throne of France, why would his dismissal be like a certain part of a soldier's accoutrements? Because it would be a Nap-sack.

A cockney who has not been long in this country thinks the (hair) must be very thin on the top of Bald mountain.

Why are ships called female? Because they "come in stays" and are often attached to the buoys.

Why is the cradle of a ship the safest place to be, when she goes ashore? Because the cradle is used to rocks.

Why is it wicked for a person who has a bad cough, to go to church? Because he is coughing (is scoffing) while the minister is preaching.

There are two eventful periods in the life of a woman; one when she wonders who she will have, the other when she wonders who will have her.

Agricultural.

SOFT-SHELED EGGS.—An English poultry manager suggests the following treatment:

When a hen lays this sort of egg, not habitually, the occurrence is generally accompanied with hard or full crop. In that case, it is owing to indigestion, to be treated with one or two teaspoonfuls of English gin. One cause is said to be over-feeding when fowls are too fat. These eggs are generally dropped from the roost and if it is not too high from the floor, or if they fall on straw, may be saved entire, and used for puddings.

Probably the medicinal effect of American gin would be quite as efficacious as that of "English." We give his statement for what it is worth, with the remark that the trouble is usually considered due to lack of lime in the food, and this is supplied by giving the hens shells, bones and other forms of lime.

Buildings.—Timber may be prepared for new buildings, or for alterations and repair on old ones, and if the weather favors, the frames may be raised, and the building go on. A few handfuls of salt, or a little old brine, put about the posts of sheds, corn cribs, gates, etc., which are likely to be heated out of place by the frost, will prevent it, in most cases certainly until the salt washes away.

Working Stock should not stand idle; find some work for them, and if possible gradually increase it, that they shall not feel plowing and other hard work by and by. Both horses and oxen, used on the road must be kept sharp shod, to prevent slipping and disabling themselves on the ice, and it is an excellent plan to feed roots with the grain given to both horses and cattle or any other animals.

Colts.—Pet and handle constantly, giving sugar or bits of root. There is often leisure for breaking colts at this season to both saddle and harness. There is seldom need of whipping. Coaxing with carrots or sugar will go twice as far. The results are more lasting and all for good. Whipping may produce a beneficial result for the time being, but the after effect is only evil except with hard cases which nothing else will effect.

Cows.—Most farmers dry their cows early, in order to save the labour of milking. This is poor policy, unless the cows are valuable chiefly as producers of beef animals. It injures a cow to give milk after she begins to make bag, and as the time of the very beginning of bag making is indefinite, it is well to milk up to within four or five weeks of calving, and then dry off rapidly and stop. The calf is larger at birth for having the nutriment which would otherwise be withdrawn in the milk, but a very large calf often endangers the life of the cow.

To CURE A KICKING COW.—Nothing is so good as a strong strap (three feet long, with a buckle at one end, passed around both hind legs, just above the gambrel joint. It crosses between the legs so as not to slip down, and when drawn up tight brings the legs pretty close together. Strapping up the fore leg, compelling her to stand on the other three, will usually suffice, but a determined kicker will sometimes stand on two long enough to do mischief with one of the other legs.

Sheep.—The strongest should be by themselves, weak ewes and lambs by themselves, so that the allowance of grain or oil-cake shall be evenly distributed. There is profit in very early lambs, but buildings and everything must be adapted to raising them with their rapid growth unchecked by exposure to the weather, yet encouraged by fresh air and sufficient room for healthy exercise.

Stears also may be broken to the yoke and to labor. This is usually an easy matter and it is an excellent thing to have the sight of the yoke and bow in the hands from the first associated with salt or turnip. Yoking will be easy ever after.

If an accurate fit, a stylish cut, and superior workmanship can ensure custom, he flatters himself he shall not be without patronage from the easy and discerning. Every trade requires brains, and none more so than the art of cutting and making up a garment to fit every variety of the human form; but some people seem to imagine that a requires no more judgment to cut a suit than to sew a log—an erroneous idea, the effects of which are seen in the countless and ill-fitting garments we every day behold in the streets. There is no earthly reason to prevent us Provincialists from being as elegantly and fashionably dressed as the Americans, and the subscriber will use his best endeavors to reach a "consummation so devoutly to be wished."
