South dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

WEST: ♠ Q64, ♥ 1073, ♦ Q98, ♣ 10872. EAST: ♠ 852, ♥ 965, ♦ KJ75, ♣ AKJ.

South West North East 2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

The bidding:

Opening lead—two of clubs. Despite the uncertainties which the defenders face during the play, it is nearly always possible for them to reason out the best defensive tactics.

North-South were playing weak two bids, which accounts for South's opening of two spades. North stretched a point to raise to four with a singleton trump, but he was relying on a good six-card suit for the vulnerable two bid.

East won the club lead with the king and cashed the ace, catching declarer's queen. The fate of the contract now rested with East who had to make the seemingly dangerous return of a diamond to defeat the hand. He had no way of knowing whether partner or declarer had the queen.

East did return a diamond and West's queen forced the ace. Declarer now could no longer make the contract. He finessed the jack of spades, losing to the queen, and a diamond back put South down one.

Let's examine East's diamond play to see whether it was luck or logic that defeated the contract. The "safe" return of the jack of clubs, to force declarer to use a trump, would have given South the contract.

If East, reasonably enough, assumes South started with six spades and two clubs, declarer must then have five cards in the red suits.

Since these five red cards are fully protected by dummy's five high-card winners, it cannot matter if it turns out that South has the queen of diamonds and gains a diamond trick as a result of the return. It would only be giving declarer an extra diamond trick for which he had no use.

From this viewpoint, therefore, a diamond return can do no harm. But if South does not have the diamond queen, meaning that West has it, a diamond return can easily prove to be decisive, as turned out to be the actual case.

A diamond trick has to be established before West receives his assumed trump trick. The seemingly dangerous return was not as reckless as it superficially appeared to be.

Million Dollar Fund Planned To Aid Loggers

MONTREAL (CP)—Roger Provost, a vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, says the CLC plans to raise a $1,000,000 fund to help striking loggers in Newfoundland.

Mr. Provost, also president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said the CLC plans to raise the money by assessing each congress member $1. The congress is the parent Canadian labor body with about 1,000,000 members.

Mr. Provost also urged CLC members to end telegrams to Prime Minister Diefenbaker, asking the government to disallow Newfoundland legislation barring the IWA as bargaining agent for loggers.
