Shaking Quakers Not Finished Yet

NEW YORK (AP) — The Shakers may not be dying out after all, new believers may give it new life.
For years historians have been summing up studies of the Shakers, sometimes known as the shaking Quakers, with the sorrowful conclusion that they would all be dead and gone in a few years.
The predictions seemed reasonable. The sect, officially the United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing, had been steadily declining in numbers.
A score of prosperous colonies from New England into Kentucky and Indiana, after surviving fearful persecution, had been reduced to five.

What's more, the sect never had the means of ensuring survival through offspring, because the Shaker religion forbids a marriage.
The brother in the sect died last year. Until recently there were only two dozen elderly sisters left to carry on.

WOMEN JOIN
But now two women have become novitiates at one of the last two Shaker communities, Sabbathday Lake, near Canterbury, N.H. The Maine colony said the Shakers are philosophical about the future.
"We feel that the Shakers have been given a mission to do. If God feels it has been completed then that is his will. If the mission is to continue He will provide," said the mother of the sect who led the little founding band to the U.S. from England in 1774.

Never large in numbers, the Shakers reached their peak in the 1850s with about 6,000 members.
They have been disproportionately influential, however, because of their morality, industry — they invented the clothes pin, for one small example — industry, devotion to education, and thrift.
They shun drink and tobacco. Their diet omits flesh meat and fish. Shaker men and women are not supposed to even shake hands.
Aspirants trying to join one of the sect's communities are subjected to a rigorous examination by the sect's leaders, including a test of their ability to endure physical hardship, such as carrying a heavy load of bricks or stones.

William Plummer, leader of a New Hampshire community, announced, without a service at Harvard, Mass., in 1972.
"Several of the young people, both men and women, began to shake and tremble in a most terrible fashion . . . the motions proceeded from the head to the hands, and the whole body, with such power as if limb would give from limb. The house trembled as if there were an earthquake."
LARRY LERACH
Shakers are best remembered now for their legacy of clean-lined, unadorned and functional, built in strict accord with religious law which held that ornamentation was ostentatious and worldly.
"The result," the National Geographic Society has reported, "was an austere beauty."
Edward Deming Andrews and Faith Chittenden, authoritarians and writers on the Shakers, have credited them with inventing among other things, a screw-propeller, a rotary harrow, a threshing machine, the circular saw and the common clothes pin.

Canadians Seen At End Of Easy Road

MURRAY BAY, Que. (CP) — Canadians have reached the end of the easy road, Neil J. McKinnon, president of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said here in an address to the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada.
"Our problems," Mr. McKinnon stated, "have been building up not just over recent years but over many past years of high spending and high consumption financed in part by internal debt and foreign capital."
The need for intelligent planning is clear, Mr. McKinnon definitely shown a strong desire to obtain the equipment, said the Canadian officials. They also liked the proposed terms.

A decision was expected within three months at the most.

CONTRACT BRIDGE
By R. JAY BECKER
good player. The mere thought of a finesse should stir up a chess player's imagination in search for a way of avoiding the finesse.
For example, look at this hand. On the surface, it seems that declarer will have to rely on a successful spade finesse to make the contract. However, there is a decided possibility of making the slam even though West has the king of spades, and clubs declarer nothing to investigate this possibility before attempting the finesse.
Accordingly, he wins the club lead with the ace and catches the K-Q of hearts and A-K of diamonds. He notes that West plays the 3 of diamonds as that suit is led. Declarer next enters dummy with the king of clubs and plays the five of clubs.
East cannot afford to step up with the queen because if he does he will be playing a jack and promote the nine into a trick, so he plays low on the diamond.
South does not ruff the diamond because there is a strong possibility that West is started with only a Q-J-K-Q of diamonds. He discards a spade low instead. West is forced to win the trick with the ace and cannot make a play that does not give declarer the rest of the trick.
This line of play succeeds because the diamonds are favorably divided, but note that if the diamond distribution were unfavorable, South would still have the spade finesse to fall back on.
The diamond finesse is a great asset because it greatly increases his chances of making the slam by first sounding out the diamond suit.
