The Wall Flower
GEORGE ADVISES
Chapter 67

At first Pan looked at Gloria speechless. She had never seen her like this.

For Gloria who rarely had much color, had gone such a curious white. Probably she seemed whiter than she was, because of the contrast of her black hair and eyes. And there she stood in her gay and beautiful negligee, the yellow telegram at her feet, and that curious set expression.

"At first Pan thought of the child. Then she remembered the husband she had never seen, that Gloria had left because he was so impossible to live with.

"Frank's dead and Santley's cabled me," Gloria repeated.

"Pan took charge. She pushed Gloria down on the couch and went back to the bathroom to rummage in the medicine cabinet for smelling salts. Sometimes Gloria used these for headaches.

"Don't!" Gloria murmured.

"I'm not going to faint—not this time. He's made me faint at various times during his life, his death won't have that effect."

(Nevertheless, she took the bottle and sniffed at it. Pan thought black coffee might help. Gloria could revive like a wild flower when it rains, with the aid of a little coffee. She was, like all volatile people, too easily stimulated.

So the girl went back to the kitchen. The cook had long since retired to bed and her not too gentle snores came through the thin door of her room.

She started coffee, making it doubly strong. She went back and slipped into Frank's room to be sure he was asleep, and to see if he had kicked off his covers.

"Poor Frankie," she thought. "Will he be sad because of his father's death? But of course he won't, how could he, couldn't possibly remember him? Children aren't conventional grown-ups."

She wondered whether Gloria was conventional enough to feel she should miss Frank? If there was sorrow, it would be conventional sorrow, she was sure. Gloria was too level headed for that. And she must hate him, he had been a brute.

She glanced at the child again and went out. Frankie must have inherited his blonde hair from his father. His face was the shape of Gloria's, he was not flushed and rosy as most children are when asleep, he was pale, and his little face looked half-worried.

She wondered whether the coffee would ever help. She remembered the proverb about the watched pot, and went out of the kitchen. But not in the living room, she could not intrude upon Gloria just now. Then she suddenly picked up the telephone and called George.

"Frank's dead and Santley cabled me," Gloria repeated.

"It's so silly," Gloria said again, and again. "To go to pieces like this, George. I'm not the going-to-pieces sort. I don't need smelling salts to bring me to. But I feel— as though someone had struck me full in the face. I don't know what to do."

"Do? Do just as you've planned right along. Santley—or some of his friends—have doubtless been looking after him and will look after the funeral. Anyway you can't help, you couldn't get there it's 3000 miles."

"I know," Gloria's voice came again. "Funerals! They're so beastly. George. Mourners who aren't mourning, black creps that's only mockery, a hole in the ground—damp and cold—and worse—"

"Never mind the gruesome details, it's what we all come to," George put on a matter of fact tone.

"Frank had a horror of cold, damp dark things. He couldn't endure even walking into a cellar. He said, when he talked of death that he wanted to be cremated—that's clean at least. But you have to sign a paper for it in English—could I cable?"

"Nonsense," George said sharply for her voice was getting hysterical.

YOUNG WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Letter Points Way Towards Relief—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ontario. — "I suffered from the time I was a school-girl, until I had taken your medicine, with pain in my left side and with cramps, growing worse each year until I was all run down. I was so bad at times that I was unfit for work. I tried several doctors and patent medicines and was only relieved for a short time. Some of the doctors wanted to have an operation but my father objected. Finally I learned through my mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how thankful I am that I tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps and feel as if it has saved my life. You may use my letter to help other women as I am glad to recommend the medicine."

led," she said, unconsciously repeating Gloria's phrase.

"Good Lord," she heard, and then, "All right, I'll come around." As he hung up she heard him explaining to his aunt.

When the coffee was ready, Pan poured out two cups and carried them in on a tray. She felt she needed a stimulant too. Gloria was still sitting on the couch staring at the yellow fateful bit of paper.

"I—wanted to do something. But I never can do anything to help—only domestic things like this."

"Darling child! I do appreciate it though." And to show her appreciation Gloria drank the entire cupful of coffee.

"It did help, at least the curious tinge left her face, she was merely white when George came. And white suited her quality of skin, which was fine grained and firm, and reminded one of polished marble."

"Pan told me," George said, coming over and taking her hand. He stood above the couch and held the limp white hand as he talked.

"Pan slipped out of the room, neither noticed her going. But their voices carried in the tiny flat, and she heard.

"It's so silly," Gloria said again, and again. "To go to pieces like this, George. I'm not the going-to-pieces sort. I don't need smelling salts to bring me to. But I feel— as though someone had struck me full in the face. I don't know what to do."

COOTE AT LONDON

LONDON, Ont. June 15.—The British will have to come in and recapture the country, take it back from barbarism. This is the solution of the Irish question which was given by Hon. William Coote, D. L., member of Tyrone and Fermanagh in the Ulster parliament and member for South Tyrone in the Imperial parliament, who addressed a large audience in the Masonic temple last night on the position of Ulster in the Irish crisis.

BIG STRAWBERRY GROWERS LIKE MEN AS PICKERS

J. T. Wilson of the Nelson district in British Columbia is credited by Farm and Home with having produced $3,000 worth of strawberries from two and a half acres, and says he is hoping to equal that record this year. Mr. Wilson has found that the most economical and satisfactory pickers are the row, his pickers straddling the row, bending forward from the hips and never touching knees to the ground.

Presbyterian Non-Unionists Hold Meeting

WINNIPEG, June 15.—A meeting of the Presbyterian Church Association, which is made up of Presbyterians who desire under present conditions to continue the Presbyterian church in Canada as it is constituted and to postpone or avert the proposed union with other denominations was held today under the chairmanship of Rev. Principal Fraser, of Montreal.

A statement issued says: "On behalf of all who think with us in the question of organic union we renege our declaration of purpose under present conditions to continue the Presbyterian church in Canada with all the rights and privileges thereto appertaining. "At the same time we are desirous of having a full investigation made into all the legal and executive questions involved in the matter of organic union in order that the whole church may have all the facts at hand before taking any further steps."

The meeting was private.

Presbyterian Colleges

Co-operation of the Presbyterian colleges as well as increased co-operation with churches negotiating for church union in the training of theological students was urged in the report of education committee, presented at this morning's sederunt of the Presbyterian general assembly by Dr. D. M. Ramsay, of Toronto. The financial depression at present prevailing in the church was stressed.

The case for the lay members of the church was laid before the commissioners by Dr. A. C. MacRae, of Calgary, who said laymen wanted to know why the Presbyterian church spent $215,000 in one year training 100 odd theological students, while the Methodist college assembly by Dr. D. M. Ramsay, of Toronto. The financial depression at present prevailing in the church was stressed.

BACK TO CANADA AT 82

LONDON, June 15.—Among the passengers in the White Star liner Canada, which left Liverpool on Saturday were Mr. Liverman Ramsay and his wife.

(Mr. Ramsay is 82 and his wife 78 but they are emigrating to Vancouver, British Columbia. Mr. Ramsay intends building a house there and then to run a poultry farm. "I came to England in 1914," he said "but three years after the armistice there is no sign of a good time coming and the income tax has proved the last straw."

CHILD'S HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

If you want to keep your child's hair looking its best be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just plain Mulisfed coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulisfed in a cup of glass with a little warm water, is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which rinses out easily removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and the hair is soft and silky, bright lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulisfed coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure you get the genuine. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

The resolution adds that the immigration of imperial ex-service men and their families is too important to allow it to be stopped.

GUARDING BRITISH MINISTERS FROM IRISH EXTREMISTS
