SOLITARY MUSINGS.

When the wild hath morn, solemn and grand... And the sea sings a chorus of deep tones... When the river slips calm, and with mirror's breast...

MRS. WANSLOW.

An experienced Nurse, in the attendance of Physicians, presents to the attention of Mothers, her

SOOTHING SYRUP.

For Children Teething. For the relief of Colic, Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, &c.

New-York, July 10th, 1853, B.3. Bowery.

Dear Sir, We cheerfully comply with the request of a friend to insert the following letter which we are assured is a true and correct copy of the original.

Dear Sir—I am happy to be able to certify to the efficacy of Mr. Wanslow's Soothing Syrup, the truth of which I can attest to in English.

When I was first introduced to the use of this medicine, I was told that it would not permit any of the family to do so, I purchased a bottle of Soothing Syrup, in order to test the remedy.

My child was afflicted with the colic, and the medicine, its effect upon him was like magic, he soon recovered, and I have since used it in every case.

When the breeze comes purfumed from fields away... And the lily's arched by heavenly power... Thus alone I would wander, alone to admire...

On those meadows of glory, where Christ ever reigns... The flowers never fading, the plains of delight... When the angels breathe sing in rapturous strains...

And join in the full swell of that heavenly song... RUTH RUSTICK.

VARITIES.

Every man speaks with an intention to be understood, and seldom happens but that he understands himself better, though he conveys his meaning to another, if content to be understood, he did not seek to be admired, but when once he begins to contrive how his sentiments may be received, not with most case to his reader, but with most advantage to himself, he then transfers his consideration from words to sounds, from sentences to periods; and as he grows more elegant, becomes less intelligible.

"Which my lady, do you think the merriest place in the world?" "That which is the least apprehended, that surrounds the earth, I should think."

"And why so?" "Because I am told that there, all bodies lose their gravity."

"If exercise promotes health, those who collect odd bills for the editors should be among the longest lived people in the world."

"A widow once said to her daughter—'I wish you were an age older, so I might be rich enough to dream of a husband.'"

"The Lover and the Husband.—'You give a pleasant twing of your fingers as you saunter along the street, and say, but so loud as to be overheard, 'She is mine!'"

"You wonder if Frank ever loved Nelly one half as well as you love Madge? You feel sure he never did, you can hardly believe it. Madge has never been betrothed before now by scores of enamored men, and borne off, like the Sabian women in Romish history. You chuckle over your own superiority, and then, as you are groping for a sixpence. 'You read over the marriage service—thinking of the time when you will take her hand and slip the ring on her finger, and then you say to the clergyman—'richer—for poorer—for better—for worse. A great deal of 'worse' there will be about it, you think."

"The weeks leap with a bound, and the months roll on, grow long when you approach that day which is to make your years. There are no flowers rare enough to make bouquets for her; diamonds are too dim for her to wear; and time is as tame."

"—And after marriage, the weeks are even shorter before you: you wonder why on earth all single men in the world do not run tumultuously to the altar."

"You wonder if the people in the omnibus know that you and Madge are just married; and if the driver knows that the shining pair are all in one? You wonder if you would be so happy again? You grow tired of heart and purpose. Smiles seem many, and the married life is a dream. You even wear them before!"
