THE REAL RESPONSIBILITY

It may soothe a player's ego to lay the blame for defeat on his "horrible luck," as South did in the following deal, but it is a great deal more profitable for that player to examine his own responsibility and, as a possible result, to correct his own errors.

Pass Dble. Pass Par-
Pass

West, as he explained later, was tempted to double the opening preemptive bid for a takeout, but with so much of his strength in the opposing suit, he thought it wiser to pass at this stage and double a game bid if it came.

West's opening lead was the club king. Dummy's ace was played, and before touching trumps South took the precaution of leading a spade to the ace and ruffing the spade king. When he then led a trump and East showed out, South was not greatly disturbed apparently, he could not lose more than two trump tricks and the diamond ace.

Winning the first trump lead, West chose the only return that made sense, namely, his top diamond. Declarer called for the queen from dummy, and East struck a solid blow for his side by holding up the ace and ruffing with the jack.

Certainly, the particular character of the diamond trick should have put South on his guard, but it did not—he led dummy's last trump. West won again, and now he returned his second diamond. East won and led a third round of diamonds—and South could not prevent West's blank nine of trumps from winning the setting trick.

To repeat, South should have paid more attention to what was pending in diamonds, and in-

Moths in Rugs

If moths get into a rug, cover the place with a wet towel. Apply a hot iron until the towel is dry. This kills both the moths and the eggs. Then sprinkle with salt every week before sweeping.

A Precaution

An excellent investment for every home is a small flashlight kept in the medicine cabinet, to prevent the wrong bottle from being taken when the room is dark or dimly lighted.

The Stars Say

By Estrellita

For Tomorrow
TEMPERAMENTAL and emotional tendencies may be prevalent under present aspects, so go out of your way to be tactful and gracious, if you would avoid unpleasantness.

Be wary of strangers, too—especially in financial dealings. Do not become involved in questionable schemes, and let no one persuade you to risk your hard-earned cash on "get-rich-quick" ideas. Paradoxically, the same lunar aspects which suggest wariness in monetary and business matters do favor romance and courtship; also travel and plans for environmental changes.

For the Birthday
If tomorrow is your birthday, you have good reason for optimism now since the problems which have beset you—both in your business and personal life—should be currently righting themselves.

You will have to guard against restlessness, however. Born under the sign of Gemini, your love of variety is such that your inclination is to start a dozen projects at once, finishing none of them. Try to curb this instinct and concentrate on essentials. In this way, you can carry out your best ideas successfully and with less anxiety and nervous tension.

With the success of your plans, you should acquire new confidence in yourself and the courage and will to go on to still greater heights early in 1955. Finances should prosper for the balance of the year. Both travel and romance are favored after July 1.

A child born on this day will be mercurial in temperament, talented and pleasure-loving. Instead of continuing his trump leading, he should have been very pleased at the opportunity to lead the club jack and discard his own second diamond as a "communication breaker."

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I drive away red ants?

A. Use camphor gum, or pieces of cotton dipped in spirits of camphor and place about the haunts except near food. Or, spray with oil of sassafras, or strew whole or ground cloves about the pantry shelves. One may also pour kerosene into the ground, outside of the house to prevent ants from entering.

Q. How can I remove spots from wall paper?

A. Place a sheet of blotting paper and a warm iron over it over the grease spots on the wall paper. Care should be taken that the iron is not too hot.

Q. How can I remedy an oily skin?

A. Wash daily with hot castile soap suds. Follow this by rinsing in hot, then in cold water.

DOROTHY DIX

Wife's Plight

DEAR MISS DIX: Due to his mother's death, my husband was brought up by an older sister. He loves her very much, as he should, but since our marriage, 17 years ago, he has never been able to make a major decision for himself. Any plans we make must be put before my sister-in-law and her father for approval. We have our own business, which was largely financed by my husband's family and, though I have worked hard and help build it, I know actually very little about the financial standing, prospects etc.

My sister-in-law handles all these details. I can't even draw money for current expenses without her authorization. With her, the business comes first, so I get very little money for necessities, much less for clothing and amusements. We have four children, so you can readily see that running the budget is not easy. If I say anything to my husband he says it isn't fair to put him in the middle. I think that he, too, is a bit resentful of the way his sister has taken things over, though he won't admit it.

ANSWER: There is a happy medium between being a Milquetoast type and a tyrant; if you show your husband tactfully how to find it, he could work things out quite nicely. It should be up to your husband—not his sister—to approve any money you need for the business. If conditions warrant, you are certainly entitled to enough to cover expenses.

RIGHT TO BUSINESS DETAILS

Your sister-in-law, as major financial backer of the firm, is not overstepping bounds in expecting to know all details of the business, and in assisting in its management. She has an investment to protect, and if she's doing an adequate job of it you have no grounds for complaint. However, your husband should not permit her, or his father, to ignore the fact that the project is his idea, that he is its guiding spirit, and expects to maintain his place at the helm under any circumstances. There's no reason why a clarification of this situation should involve difficulties with his family. Business as such; feminine tears, petty jealousies, or self-importance have no place in the picture. If either you or your sister-in-law bring personal feelings into focus, you're both wrong. Your husband and his sister should work together in a businesslike manner. You should be well aware of the standing of the company, but it would be far better if you did not interfere in the actual conduct of the firm. Keep to the sidelines, but make sure the money due you is forthcoming.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been going steady for eight months with a boy my age—17. Lately, however, he's been paying quite a bit of attention to an attractive junior who is quite wealthy. I think the romance is being encouraged by his mother.

ANSWER: You may be blushing the boy's mother for something that isn't her fault. Your friend may be sincerely interested in the other girl, he may just like her casually, or you may be imagining the whole thing. Why not ask him, in a tactful way, whether he prefers her to you, so that you may go back on the "available" list if his affections are really being directed elsewhere?

MRS. GORDON MACMILLAN A COUNTRY GARDEN

So, some tempestuous morn in early June,
When the year's primal burst of bloom is o'er,
Before the roses and the longest day—
When garden-walks and all the grassy floor,
With blossoms, red and white, of fallen May,
And chestnut-flowers are strewn—
So have I heard the cuckoo's parting cry,
From the wet field, through the next garden trees,
Come with the volleying rain and tossing breeze:
The bloom is gone, and with the bloom go I.

There are several lovely gardens to visit. In daffodil time, I enjoyed seeing a beautiful sight in Prince George County. It was a new garden made in a couple of years by young people. Almost all of their youth and enthusiasm, but happy for them and all who would enjoy this garden in the years to come. We admired the lovely old trees, the grand view from the large windows of the wide river and the Strait beyond. The way the evergreen hedge was growing and the shrubs. To look at the long perennial borders was to see healthy plants of many varieties grown from seed and continuous bloom was assured by the perennials for the different seasons. Small fruits were not forgotten in this garden and long rows of the old-fashioned black currants were thriving. Much work and planning had gone into this garden and much satisfaction and joy will be had in it. I feel sure. While we were admiring all these things, the mother cat upset a box of Watermelon seeds in the sun-porch and on top of a heap of rocks left there for cement. So it was goodby watermelons in that particular flat.

Coming home to my own weedy garden I found some good fragrant plants. Daphne with delightfully scented star-shaped, blush pink flowers. Sweet Briar Rose with the wonderful fragrant leaves especially after rain. Nepeta in the rock-garden with the soft blue flowers and covered with bees. Now the Columbine is in bloom. The Iceland Poppy and the Trollius and Dicentra (Bleeding Heart).

Eleanor Sinclair Rhode has written many garden books and one of her finest is "The Scented Garden". In her introduction she writes: "The old Roman Via Cassia, one of the most important highways of Europe, and northward beyond the bridge of which the central part is 2,000 years old, a road, corresponding to the ancient Via Flaminia, leads to Prima Porta and to all that remains of the Villa Livia. Here the Empress had a summer retreat whence she could see, as one can see today, a wonderful view of the Tiber Basin, stretching away to the blue Sabine Hills. Nothing remains of this villa save the spacious 'garden room', with its barrel-vaulted roof and the walls, adorned all round with a singularly beautiful fresco representing a scented garden. Although painted 1,900 years ago this wonderful fresco is in an exceptionally good state of preservation, for it is no ordinary fresco painting, with the colour laid on the wet plaster. The colour was worked in with wax, and it is probable it is the work of a master hand. Here we have depicted for us in arresting beauty an early morning scene in a scented garden of well-nigh two thousand years ago, and its fascination is in no small part due to the skill with which the artist has given a sense of distance. Indeed, one feels one is actually in the garden. On every wall the garden is depicted in two parts—in the foreground a part planted with low-growing flowers fenced with wooden trellis-work in front, and on the further side with a small exquisitely patterned screen in stonework. Beyond this lies the garden proper. The early morning breeze stirs the trees, and the mist is rising from the ground. What a wonderful scene it is! Orange trees laden with fruit and flowers, oleanders, palms, pomegranates, olive trees roses and carnations as they were two thousand years ago, and many other flowers. And the butterflies and birds! The more one looks at this garden scene, and it is surely one of the loveliest, though one of the least known, ever depicted, the more one wishes to see it. So great is the artist's skill that not merely does one gaze through his magic casement into a scented garden of 2,000 years ago, but one is transported into the heart of it."

Next week we shall continue our study of this lovely book.

SEVEN LAYER DINNER

1 to 2-inch layer of potatoes
A layer of onions
A layer of carrots
Sprinkle 1/4 cup uncooked rice over the three layers. Add 1 tin of peas and liquid as well as one pound of pork sausage arranged on top. Pour 1 tin of tomato soup diluted with 1 tin water over all. Season. Bake (covered) in medium oven for 1 hour.
Turn sausage and leave casserole uncovered for 1 more hour of baking. Use a large casserole.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT MENTAL ILLNESS

Dr. William Menninger noted, the famous Menninger Clinic, Topeka, Kansas, made a study of some 10,000 natives of the Marshall Islands. Their pattern of living, in contrast to ours, is simple, noncompetitive and non-aggressive. In this relatively care free society, Dr. Menninger found, men and women were safe from the more serious breakdowns which are so frequent among us. In fact, no such breakdowns were found among them. They take their pleasures in leisurely fashion. What do we learn from such a contrast between our mode of living and that of these islanders?

Dr. Menninger advances the theory that they are free from inner conflicts and have no need to escape from a rigid, repressive environment, explaining the absence among them of the types of mental and emotional disturbances that are so sad a reflection of our rigid and repressive society. It is because of these rigid standards of conduct in these apparently normal lives of ours that we are so often disturbed and confused.

Dr. Menninger states further that the normal, healthy person is the one who, under such imposed standards, is able to control his primitive urges and yet avoid undue tension inside. It frequently happens, though, that the individual is not able of his own efforts to bear the inner tensions brought on by conflicts so strong that most of his time and energy are being taken up by them and he finds himself unable to function in his ordinary way. He breaks down or becomes mentally ill!

What are the causes of such breakdowns? It is thought that the causes of these emotional disturbances lie in early childhood experiences. The unreleased tensions of that period in varying degree hinder the normal development of the adolescent youth. Adults, who, as children, lived in emotionally unhealthy environments, with no normal healthy outlets for the resulting tensions, show a tendency to remain blocked, what is called "fixated" at that stage of their development, at which the disturbance occurred. Even when they are mature, some of them still continue to behave in some respects as they used to behave when they were infants or small children—temper tantrums, selfishness—and so prevent full maturity.

What is needed for these improperly developed children and adults? Dr. Menninger states that maturity is the great need of our time. It is the only strength that can enable human beings to withstand the pressures of present-day complex living. We must avoid being "fixated" at immature levels of development.

Next week we shall continue our study of this lovely book.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

A fog had risen before us this morning and was wrapping in soft gray the hills when we came to the kitchen. The orchard-blossoms were damp as was the mauve of the lilacs about . . . But what a rich toll of fragrance it excited, to scent the yards with a heavenly distillation of perfume, one of season to be remembered with certain nostalgia along many a year . . . It comes in now through a night-opening of the window, bound about engagingly with the fond notes of a pond-lily. And June we think is a bewitching month, full of a hundred enchantments. . . .

"No grain-sowing today," James offered with a sigh at breakfast. On school days this is not a meal to be lingered over, not with lunches to prepare and a little fellow with elusive socks and cap and pencils and scribbles to be made ready as well!

"Then," Rob smiled, "This is the very day for you and me to make that excursion I was speaking of."

Given the convenient season for it, Rob had been planning to travel a distance in the hope that he might be able to replace to his liking with a younger animal the red herd-sure so recently sold. James weighed the matter a moment. "It mightn't do a fellow any harm to see how the farming's doing in other parts of the Island," he nodded. And so before long the little truck was off on what since proved to be a lengthy and interesting trek . . . It so happened as they continued westward they moved out of a rather cheerless dampish day into an interval of clear weather and some sunshine, conditions we in this vicinity lacked during their absence.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Leo

Q. Is it good manners to use the handkerchief while at the dinner table?

A. This is not so much a question of "good manners" as of "necessity." When one absolutely has to use a handkerchief, one should try to use it as inconspicuously and noiselessly as possible.

Q. When a man is sitting at a cocktail bar, is it necessary that he tip the bar man?

A. While not exactly necessary, it still seems to be expected in many places—especially when one's change is returned to one in a small tray.

Q. Where should a host's wife sit when they are taking a visiting couple driving?

A. She and the visiting wife should sit together in the back seat.

They returned when the evening-milking was over, a chore for the first time carried out by two boys and a woman with a little energy expended. We watched the jars of the milker fill with the creamy drawn milk, heard the hum of a separator not turned by a hand. And again were grateful for the turn of events which had given the farmsteads about, the slim silver line of wire leading in from the highway to make play of more than one once-exacting item of the chores.

Gage too little yet to be pressed into much service of the farm brought his school-home work to the stable. And there on a milk-stool, the cats dining from the pan at his feet, he read aloud his story for tomorrow. Getting lost in the recital to pause as small fellows will, to wonder and chuckle perhaps, or be sad over the outcome.

Against the windows the shadows deepened, shades of the twilight which presently returned our farmers to this home—but without any tangible token of the excursion. Only with nice memories of the places visited and the distant countryside they saw.

Until tomorrow — — — Diary

Noted Beauty Authority Advises

"Don't Fool With Pimples"

by MARCELLA HOLMES (Former Beauty Editor of "Glamour" Magazine)

"As a beauty editor many people have asked me, 'what should I do for pimples?' I always say, don't try just anything on them! Acne-type pimples are a serious condition that if neglected can permanently mar your looks. So use a medication specifically developed for pimples, and not multiple skin creams or ointments that are claimed to be 'also good for pimples'."

"You see, general purpose creams and ointments do not provide in a fast-drying greaseless base the special medical ingredients so necessary in the treatment of pimples. But fortunately, today, there's a scientific medicated formulation developed especially to clear pimples, that has proven its effectiveness in actual use by thousands in Canada and the U. S. It is called CLEARASIL."

New-Type Greaseless "Base"

"The special medications in the CLEARASIL formula are contained in a new-type oil-free 'base'. This new 'base' material is not only greaseless but is also oil-absorbing, actually helps remove excess oil from skin that authorities agree is a major factor in acne. In fact, CLEARASIL has such remarkable drying action that it clears and dries pimples surprisingly fast.

"CLEARASIL is antiseptic, stopping growth of bacteria that may cause and spread pimples. And since it is non-greasy, staines, it may be left on day and night for uninterrupted medication."

Skin-Colored—Hides Pimples
"This new CLEARASIL medication is skin-colored to hide pimples while it works, and to end the embarrassment of pimples instantly.

"So again I advise, don't fool with pimples. General purpose creams and ointments have their proper uses, but don't depend on them for treatment of pimples. Treat this specific condition with a special pimple medication."

Reader's Digest reported on clinical tests using CLEARASIL type medication. CLEARASIL has helped so many boys, girls and adults that it is now the largest-selling special pimple medication in America. It must work for you or money back. Only 69¢. Large economy size $1.19. At all drugists. Get CLEARASIL today.
