THE LATEST OF TICKERS

URNS OUT PAGES OF WELL PRINTED NEWS DESPATCHES.

Something About the Wonderful New Telegraph Instrument Called the Essick Ticker—How It Will Revolutionize Present Methods.

The Essick telegraph machine is coming into actual service. These instruments, called "tickers" for the sake of convenience, have been placed in various places where men are wont to congregate, and from each of them there will roll until nearly midnight an endless page of type-written "copy" containing news of the day and night from all over the world.

A man may stroll into his favorite resort, whether club, hotel or cafe, and by glancing over the neat manuscript unfolded before him by the new "ticker" find out what has happened, what is happening and what is likely to happen during the day. He may learn that Li Hung Chang has lost another battle and more peace feelers; that what has gone up or down; that the Chicagoans have won another game which is not probable; that certain stocks are high or low—and so on to the end. Everything in the way of news will be ticked off by the instruments as soon as it is received through sources that are the best and most reliable.

From a central point the news is sent out to the "tickers" and is duly recorded by them in as perfect typographical shape as we could wish.

The paper ribbon that comes from the Essick machine is not the narrow and tender tape turned out by the old stock "tickers" that print one continuous line; it is thick white paper, nearly half a foot in width, and the matter printed on it is in either paragraph or tabular form, according to the nature of the news. A section clipped from an Essick machine may be torn out and pasted on a sheet of the same size that had been run through a regular typewriter. The manner of its operation only will be outlined here.

At headquarters a young woman sits at a keyhole exactly like that to be found in the ordinary typewriter. This is electrically connected with the "tickers" each of which has a metal wheel bearing the letters of the alphabet, numerals, etc. When the young woman at the transmitter thumps the letter A, or any other letter, the wheel, which is inked automatically, promptly prints that letter on the white roll. And so it continues, the lines being printed as they are to be read, from left to right, as in a newspaper. The shifting of the paper is done automatically, and one person, the one who plays at the keyboard at headquarters, operates all the "tickers" simultaneously. They may number a thousand and some of them may be twenty miles or more away, but all record the events of the day at one and the same moment. The machine is about four feet high and occupies floor space about a foot square.

No extended account of any event, and of the greatest importance, will be sent out by the company. The information will be in the shape of bulletins containing the pith of the news. On momentous occasions, such as a general election, fuller reports will be furnished the "tickers" and they will be operated all night, or until most people have gone to bed.

Special attention will be devoted to stock and bond transactions on the Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, London and Liverpool exchanges; to grain trading in the primary and secondary markets of America and Europe; and to current financial and commercial gossip.

The new "ticker" may be seen in operation next Tuesday at the Union League Club and at all the leading hotels of the city. They are being put into many places and are bound to attract a great deal of attention not only on account of their novelty, but also because of their practicability. Chicago is the first city in the country to have such an elaborate system of "tickers" which furnish little news of interest outside of the commercial and financial world. The local machines are to furnish information for the benefit or edification of everybody. The charge made for the use of one of the Essick "tickers" is a very moderate one.—Chicago Herald.

Queen Elizabeth's Wardrobe.

The wardrobe of Queen Elizabeth must have been about the most varied and extensive ever recorded in royal annals, to judge from a list of her wearing apparel recently gathered from the state papers. When the maiden queen was 68, and might therefore have been supposed to have outlived some of her youthful vanity, she possessed ninety-nine complete official costumes, 100 French gowns, 100 robes with train and sixty-seven without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 neckties, not to mention such trifles as ninety-six mantles, eighty-five dressing gowns and twenty-seven fans. With all these dresses, however, it is curious to note that Queen Elizabeth owned only nine pairs of shoes. When she died in 1603, 3000 articles of apparel were found in her wardrobe duly catalogued.—Newcastle Chronicle.

Queer Marriage Ceremony.

A curious marriage ceremony is that observed by the Negritos. These people are said to be the remnants of a race of ancient pygmies, and still exist in the interior of the Philippine Islands, where they live after their primitive fashion, and preserve their ancient customs and traditions unmolested and unnoticed. When two Negritos are united, the whole tribe is assembled, and the affianced pair climb two trees growing near to each other; the elders then bend the branches until the heads of the couple meet. When the heads have thus come into contact, the marriage is legally accomplished, and great rejoicings take place, a fantastic dance completing the ceremony.

A Strong Hand Brings Deliverance.

Paine's Celery Compound Releases and Cures.

Few men or women, made captives and prisoners by dyspepsia, have ever suffered so much pain and agony as fell to the lot of Mr. Ambrose Budd, of Shanty Bay, near Barrie, Ont.

Thirty-five years in the toils of cruel disease, meeting with failures and disappointments from medicines that promised to cure, but which proved utterly worthless, is worse in some respects than being confined in a walled dungeon.

Mr. Budd's efforts to escape from suffering and sickness were all in vain until he laid hold of that mighty and powerful deliverer, Paine's Celery Compound. His escape from death, and his complete cure, is known to hundreds in his district, and has given Paine's Celery Compound a name and reputation as a true life-giver, that will never fade from the memory of Mr. Budd. He has communicated the facts of his case for publication. He says:—

"For the benefit of sufferers I gladly give my experience with Paine's Celery Compound. After suffering from dyspepsia for thirty-five years, and meeting with many failures with other medicines, I decided to use Paine's Celery Compound, having heard of so many wonderful cures effected by it. The Compound, after I used it for a time, produced miraculous results, and banished my troubles.

"From a condition of helplessness—being unable to sleep or eat—I now feel well and strong. I am astonished at the results, as my trouble was an old and chronic one. I have recommended Paine's Celery Compound to some of my neighbors, and in every case it has given satisfaction. I will always strongly recommend its use when I have opportunity."
