Top Economic Challenge Called Inflation Control

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's major economic challenge in 1966 is to control inflation while allowing for expansion, the National Industrial Conference Board's Canadian Economic Forum has reported.

The forum, composed of one United States economist and nine from companies in Canada, predicted continued economic growth for Canada in 1966, but at a slower pace than this year.

It said in a statement the gross national product should grow by six to seven per cent, "significantly below the 1965 pace."

Herbert Byleveld, director of research for the board, said many members believe "gentle restraint" will help curb inflation.

"The theme of prosperity without inflation has variations," he said. "Inflation can be caused by 'demand-pull' or 'cost-push', and some respondents (to a forum survey) are particularly concerned with rising costs.

POLICIES ARE NATIONAL

"Furthermore, fiscal and monetary policies are national in scope, while economic conditions vary from region to region."

The board describes itself as an independent non-profit research institution, with head office in New York and Canadian office in Montreal.

Looking at specific sectors of the economy, the forum predicted these developments in 1966:

Consumer spending, which accounts for more than 60 per cent of the gross national product, is expected to show a gain of between six and seven per cent.

The panel said, however, tightened credit could put a damper on some of this growth, especially in automobile production.

A rise of between six and eight per cent was anticipated in government expenditures, slightly less then the rise this year. The panel said some restraint "at the federal level is hoped for, since the local government spending can be expected to continue rising."

The forum said 1966 capital spending by business should rise by between eight and 10 per cent "which would be considerably below this year's vigorous rate."

Exports were expected to grow by six or seven per cent which would match this year's pace. The panel said the United States will continue to account for most of Canada's growth in non-agricultural exports.

Imports should grow by five to six per cent, the panel agreed.

A three- or four-per-cent lift was expected in industrial production, which covers about one-third of the total national output.

The forum looks for a slightly higher unemployment rate by the end of 1966. Few major changes were anticipated "with labor shortages already fairly widespread."

London Bobby Wins 28th Ballroom Dancing Trophy

By EDY GILMORE

LONON (AP) — A high-helmeted bobbie, who patrols one of the world's best known street addresses, has given the boot to the cliche that all policemen are flat-footed.

Raymond Rouse, Police Constable No. 124, whose beat is the sidewalk outside 10 owning Street, has just won his 28th trophy for ballroom dancing.

Ten Downing Street is, of course, the official London residence of British prime ministers.

With the wife of Prime Minister Wilson watching on television, Constable Rouse danced to one of his greatest triumphs Monday night.

WAS A GREAT DAY

Monday, in fact, was one of his greatest days.

From 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Rouse, 25, patrolled outside No. 10.

At 5 p.m., he strolled 300 yards to Cannon Row police station, beside Scotland Yard, signed off duty and went home to suburban Dulwich.

Off came the police uniform and the helmet and on went a pleated shirt, a cummerbund and a tuxedo.

Minutes later, he was on his way to the Orchid Ballroom at Purley, where he partnered 19-year-old Iris Bane in a Latin American dance before several million BBC-TV viewers.

TOOK ALL POINTS

With Iris, he won the maximum points a couple could win.

Next, he partnered 19-year-old Jill Day in a formation dance.

Once more the policeman and his partner won the ultimate in points.

Watching the performance were many of Rouse's police friends, enjoying a tea break in the police canteen at Cannon Row.

Also looking in, at 10 Downing Street, was Mrs. Wilson.

"Earlier in the day one of the boys outside No. 10 had told Mrs. Wilson that Constable Rouse would be dancing that evening on TV," a police spokesman said. "She promised to look in on his big night."

Rouse has been interested in ballroom dancing for eight years and dance masters regard him as one of the best in Britain.

B.C. Engineers Win Reputation On India Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia engineer, recently returned from a project in India, says B.C. engineers are winning an enviable reputation overseas.

Fred G. Pearce, chief engineer, Vancouver Iron and Engineering Works Ltd., says the province's consulting engineers in the fields of hydro - electric development and pulp and paper mill construction are catching the attention of foreign countries.

Mr. Pearce's firm recently completed the installation of two Vancouver - made turbines, penstocks and associated hydraulic valves for a 130,000-kilowatt hydro-electric project at Kundah on the west coast of India.

A force of 27 welders and supervisors from B.C. worked on the two-year project.

Vancouver Iron and Engineering Works also will manufacture and install penstocks in a hydro development in Ceylon known as the Maskeliya Oya project.

The Kundah project, paid for partly by Canada under the Colombo Plan, will supply additional power for irrigation and manufacturing in the state of Madras, the most industrialized part of India.

Mr. Pearce said in an interview that in pulp and paper mill construction, the Vancouver firms Sandwell and Co., and H A Simons, Ltd. are broadening their international reputation—the former with projects in Pakistan, India and South America, and the latter in the United States and Sweden.

BIDDING QUIZ

You have the following hands neither side vulnerable.

♠ K92 ♥ 6 ♦ KJ854 ♣ AQ73

1. Your partner opens the bidding with One Club, to which you respond One Diamond. Partner bids Three Clubs. What would you bid?

2. You open the bidding with One Diamond and partner responds Two Notrump. When you then bid Three Clubs, partner bids Three Notrump. What would you bid now?

3. Your left-hand opponent bids One Heart, your partner bids One Spade, and your right-hand opponent bids Two Hearts. What would you bid now?

4. Your partner opens the bbidding with Three Hearts. Next player passes. What would you bid now?

1. Four notrump. It looks as though you have a grand slam if partner has three aces, and the best way of finding out about this is by using Blackwood. There is little risk attached to the Blackwood bid, since partner is sure to have either two o three aces for his jump bid. If the response is five hearts, showing only two aces, you bid six clubs.

2. Pass. Of course, partner may go down, since your hand is not ideal for notrump, but there is nothing you should do at this point to try to prevent this from happening. You have warned partner against notrump by bidding three clubs, and you have to accept his judgment, that a nine-trick game in notrump has a better chance of succeeding than an eleven-trick game in a minor suit.

Partner will not be surprised by the singleton. The three club bid warned him of this possibility.

3. Four spades. You can't bid less if you have any respect at all for partner's overcalls. Of course, you'd like to have another spade for the jump raise, but despite this, you must still bid game. You shouldn't worry too much about trumps, because the one spade overcall practically guaranteed at least a five-card suit.

No good purpose can be served by mentioning either diamonds or clubs. This might complicate the issue and lead to a wrong contract. A three spade bid would also be improper because this would invite but not force partner to bid again.

4. Pass. One of the easiest rules to follow is that it takes two opening bids to make a game. While you have an opening bid of your own (weakened, of course, by the misfit in hearts) you also know that partner has much less than a regular opening bid; otherwise, he would not have preempted. The probability is that partner will make three hearts or go down one.
