LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.
The Temperance Movement.
DEAR SIR,—One of the most important affairs in creation is the temperance movement. Thinking men are deeply exercised as to the best means by which intemperance can be suppressed. The platform, the pulpit and the press, in many instances, do their share of the work nobly; and yet in spite of every effort, the vice of drunkenness holds its grip, like the coils of a serpent, upon a seriously large portion of the community.
To me, it seems the point to be discussed is, not whether the Scott Act, or the new License Act of the Dominion, is the more desirable. I propose to leave that question alone and take facts just as they are. The Scott Act is, to-day, the law of the Province. That law is daily and hourly violated. In many localities it is openly and defiantly violated; and yet "we wonder at crime."
The law is said to punish those who break it. The thief cannot steal with impunity, be discovered, and remain unpunished. We know of no properly constituted Government or Society which would allow such a state of affairs. He is a criminal, because he is a law-breaker; just as the rumseller is a criminal, because he too is a law-breaker. In fact of the two, the rumseller is the greatest thief. The street pad, or the midnight burglar, may rob their victims of a certain portion of their worldly goods, but the rumseller will smile upon you while your money lasts, and rob you of brain and heart, mind, and health, and reputation, and heaven. He will look at your ragged clothes, take your last ten cents, and wear broadcloth. He will deal out that which fires the brain, and then fire his victim out, should he show too plainly the result of his hellish work. Rumsellers can manufacture drunkards, but your respectable (?) rumseller wants to see no drunkard at his bar. If the customer happens to be—well we will say respectable, and the owner of a respectable purse, possible he may "sleep his drunk off" upstairs, but should he just be one of the common sort, he may go to the devil or a poor cell, or if he happens to fall off a wagon and break his neck, so much the better, "dead men tell no tales." The mother, the wife, the sister, the daughter and the child, may weep at home, the cry of hunger, but what cares the rumseller?
He may be the owner of a gilded bar; fat and slick with the world's content. His wife, or mother, or sister, or child, know no want. They can appear respectable in silk and feathers, wear a smile, and go to church. A rumseller too can go to church—God help the church! He will attend regularly, look pious, listen patiently, and pray, oh how devoutly. He will hear the sound of the gospel; the voice of the church at every service. His clergyman will threaten, warn or entreat, and the rumseller will still sell rum. Yes the law-breaker, this criminal, will perform a certain amount of religious duties, approach the sacraments, and still sell rum. He will visit the chamber of death, and attend the funeral of his victims; mourn over the loss of a good customer; wind up with a show of sympathy, and exclaim, "poor fellow, I always told him he was too fond of the drop," and yet he sold him the rum which dropped him God only knows where; and he will still sell rum. Ah, if it be true that no drunkard can inherit heaven, I should like to know where the despicable wretch will go, who sold him the stuff which robbed him of his manhood, and doomed his immortal soul.

was posted up in the corridors of the Seaside Hotel, thereby intimating a well filled house. This omen luckily proved to be propitious, for long before the hour the seats in the drawing room were all "booked."

A varied collection in figure and face, some young, some old, all content with the place and pleased with each other. It was really the case, and the popular manager actually found himself in the embarrassing position of being unable to keep pace with the demand for seats. The distinguished company of amateurs who took part in the concert, were of various nationalities, China, Scotland, Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa and Kingston, all sent their various representatives in order to afford pleasure, amusement and instruction to the guests at the Seaside Hotel. The following programme was submitted to the audience.
"First Amateur Concert, Seaside Hotel."
1. Instrumental Solo.
2. Recitation, "Lord G. G. Byrons Waterloo."
3. Aloultie, "Canadian Song." 4. Comic and Tragic Interlude.
5. Trio with Guitar accompaniment.
6. Instrumental Solo.
7. Mirth provoking dialogue, first appearance of the Chinese ducses.

It would indeed, be invidious to make individual criticism, but we cannot refrain from stating the important fact, that the palm of the evening was easily carried off by the fair sex.
A very startling innovation was the appearance of the representative from China, in the role of a ducses. In closing this brief sketch of the proceedings, we cannot help saying that the artists throughout, performed their various parts admirably, and we are in duty bound to admit that the first appearance of the company was decidedly crowned with overwhelming success.

Suez Canal Negotiations.
The Tribune's London special says: The agitation against the Suez negotiations has considerably waned. Though fury and resentment have greatly lessened, still it is doubtful whether the Government can carry the project. It is believed they will not attempt it unless Sir Charles Rivers Wilson's overtures to deLesseps result in more favorable financial conditions. The Government refrain from deciding upon their future action till Sir Charles Rivers Wilson's return. They will announce the result on Monday. If, as is now expected, de Lesseps declines the concessions, the Government will abandon the scheme. In view of de Lesseps' refusal, two projects are already in the air. One is to refer the question to a royal commission, and thereby minimize the Ministerial discredit; the other proposal is to internation-alize the canal by England financing the arrangement. The chief objections to Mr.
Gladstone's project rest on the legal construction of the concessions. The Government's view is supported by the Lord Chancellor, Attorney General, Solicitor General, legal advisers of the foreign office, French lawyers and legal advisers of the Khedive. All these authorities agree in declaring that de Lesseps possesses the monopoly to put a canal through the isthmus. A contrary opinion is held by Horace Davey Underwood and Sir Hardings Gifford. The general feeling is that the Government were too hasty in admitting de Lesseps' monopoly, since when the canal was projected, a second waterway was never expected, and, therefore, was unpro-vided for in the concessions. The opposition to the Government's scheme originated among the commercial classes, but the Tories are now taking advantage of it, making the subject a party question. The general feeling of the country is divided, as it was in the case of the Channel tunnel, but with equal feeling against the project.

Aquatic.
Ross remarked after the late race that Hanlan was "a small steam engine."
The fifteenth annual regatta of the North-Western Amateur Rowing Association was held recently at Muskegon, Mich.
The annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Amateur Rowing Association will be held at Pullman, Ill. Twenty-seven crews have entered for the four-oared shell race.
There is a suspicion abroad that the Hal-fax scullers Hamm and Conley, have been "playing off" in their recent races with a view to good betting against Hanlan and Lee.
It is said that the reason for Hanlan's display of temper at Ogdensburg was that it had come to his knowledge that Courtney had previously been boasting in bar-rooms that he would pick a quarrel with Hanlan, and so get him off his base before the race took place.
A village in Styria was recently burned while the inhabitants were absent from their homes, to give a welcome to the Emperor of Austria. It has been discovered that Irredentists from the Eudine set the village on fire, and five of the incendiaries have been arrested.
