U. N. Doing Big Job Despite Partial Failure

(Associated Press News Analyst) Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, is visiting the capitals of Europe...

Life is not charged with the duty of a peacemaker, but he is charged with the duty of promoting the United Nations and keeping it together.

The fourth anniversary of the General Assembly's first meeting, and the fifth anniversary of the San Francisco meeting...

The apparent insolubility of the conflict between East and West has led to questioning of the value of having a United Nations organization at all.

The U. N., however, has served and does serve some important purposes. It is a mobilization point for world public opinion...

It has become the agency for such activity as feeding the world's indigent children and the Arab refugees in Palestine...

It is a meeting place where diplomats can exchange ideas, seek areas of agreement...

Even before President Truman enunciated his point-four program the U. N. was making surveys to see what could be done to help the economies of backward areas.

Tower Of London Displays Armor Of Black Prince

LONDON, April 25 (CP)—For a brief period during April and May, Tower of London visitors are being shown the armor of Edward, the Black Prince.

For almost 600 years—with but one previous visit to the Tower—the armor has been hanging over the Prince's tomb in Canterbury Cathedral.

The armor was sent to the Tower in 1894 after having been carried before the bier at his funeral. The Prince died in 1374 after turning over his French dominions to John of Gaunt.

First Cleaned in 1894 It consists of the Prince's crested helmet, shield of arms, coat of arms, gauntlets and sword scabbard.

The present setting was worked by the Royal School of Needlework with resistant fibre specially prepared.

A lion atop the Prince's helmet has been restored to its original gilt, as have the gauntlets, made of a type of medieval brass.

Fashion King Takes London's Breath Away

LONDON, April 25 (Reuters)—Fashion king Christian Dior of Paris took London's breath away today with his fabulously expensive 92-dress spring collection.

The "new look" man had come at the invitation of a British fashion expert, Mrs. Doris Langley-Moore, who proposes to start a museum of fashion from the proceeds of the three shows today.

Only two of the dresses, which range in price from £100 to £500, had not been shown before.

Both were in British cottons delivered to Paris only 10 days ago.

One was in white sheer organza with a flower pattern. The other was in pale blue organza with a design of Victorian figures etched in black pencil-line on the blue background.

Dior showed cartwheel hats, horseshoe collars and 40-yard evening gowns. Skirts were short and slim and tuks abounded everywhere on the dresses.

His favorite new shade is tangerine. Dior denied rumors that he intended to invade the London fashion world by founding a fashion house here.

VILLAGE LICENCES REDWATER, Alta. (CP)—A bylaw requiring all businesses to obtain village licences has been given final reading. At present the village issues no licences but council must approve the establishment of new businesses.

LOWESTOFF, England (CP)—A hotel here is to be converted into flats for policemen at a cost of 19,500 pounds ($60,450).

The Neighbors

"Why, Greg! I haven't seen you for two weeks and three days! I'd forgotten you existed!"

BY KEN REYNOLDS

It is a meeting place where diplomats can exchange ideas, seek areas of agreement between their countries on a less formal basis than is possible in foreign ministries.

Even before President Truman enunciated his point-four program the U. N. was making surveys to see what could be done to help the economies of backward areas.

It now is to become one of the agencies for implementation of point-four.

It has become a forum for the expression of world opinion on the human rights—the dignity of the individual, anti-genocide, freedom of the press, and a lot of other ideas which many people consider too abstract, but which must lie at the foundation of any real world co-operation.
