Federal Survey Party Reports Rugged Trip

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal survey party making a 300-mile trek across the frozen wastes of Labrador is battling the worst winter conditions ever experienced in the recorded history of federal surveying.

A report received Friday from William MacLellan, 37-year-old head of the party, says that since mid-January the surveyors have been stalled by temperatures ranging from 40 to 50 degrees below zero, winds of 25 to 50 miles an hour and snow eight to 10 feet deep.

"The weather has been hellish," Mr. MacLellan said in a report to the mapping branch of the technical surveys department.

The report was picked up by a plane from Shefferville, Que., on a regular supply flight to the survey party.

"Winds have been almost steadily in the 40-to 50-mile-an-hour range," the report says. "Temperatures have been in the 25-to-50-below range."

The flesh wind-chill factor under such conditions is in the range of 100 degrees below zero.

WORST WEATHER EVER

A spokesman for the mapping branch in Ottawa said the weather and other conditions under which the party is operating are the worst in the history of the branch.

Mr. MacLellan, John Brown and Henry Happy, Ottawa surveyors on the party, and the seven other members of the expedition all are suffering frostbite to the face.

Besides bad weather, the party has been plagued by equipment breakdowns. The engines on the party's five motorized toboggans all proved defective and have had to be replaced with new ones.

Until the new engines were received, the party had been able to travel only 25 miles. Under ordinary winter conditions, the party would have been able to travel three or four times as far in that distance.

The objective of the party is to travel from the northern tip of Michikamau Lake, about 100 miles east of Shefferville, to Hopedale on Labrador's northeast coast. The trip is being made to record elevations for use later with aerial photographs in the production of resources maps of the area.

Mr. MacLellan reports that during one 11-day period the party was immobile due to extreme cold. Temperatures in their tents dropped during the night to 40 degrees below zero. All food was frozen except the eggs, which were kept warm in a sleeping bag.

Mutual Life Reports Sales Increase Of $32 Million In '62

WATERLOO, ONT. — An increase of $32 million in sales of new life insurance over 1961 was reported at the 93rd annual meeting of policyholders of the Mutual Life of Canada. Sales totalled $432 million. Increases in force rose by nine per cent to a total of $3,754 million.

President E. A. Rieder, reported that surplus earnings were $19.9 million. A total of $16 million was paid in dividends in 1962 compared to $14.3 million in 1961. Another increase in dividends has been announced.

Assets increased by $51.5 million to a total of $774.0 million. Mortgage investments comprise 46 per cent of total assets, and bonds 42 per cent. The net interest rate earned was 5.35 per cent compared to 5.22 per cent in 1961.

Mr. Rieder pointed out that the company administers $171 million of "medicare" insurance benefits. Growth has been substantial and persistent.

NEEDS BEING MET

Mr. Rieder said: "There would seem to be no reason for government to contemplate adding to its burden by taking over all of this business just to look after the small percentage of people who are at present unable to secure these benefits for themselves.

"The Canadian Health Insurance Association has proposed a concrete and workable alternative which will make 'medicare' coverage available through our private enterprise system to all Canadians regardless of health and economic position."

It was pointed out that Canada's net foreign debt has been growing by approximately one billion dollars a year, and that "living beyond our means" in this sense is not equivalent to enjoying an exceptionally high standard of living.

Average per capita income in Canada, which probably measures relative living standards, fairly well, is about two-thirds of that of the United States.

The gap may widen, the speaker said, since the Canadian dollar has depreciated considerably in terms of American currency; "our tariffs have been raised, and there is now a proposal to reduce income taxes in the United States". As this gap increases, Canada begins to "bleed," losing trained and aggressive people to the United States.

EFFORTS APPLAUDED

Restrictive measures to cure the international deficit could further lower Canada's relative standard of living, he said, in contending "we must rely principally on greater exports to earn the foreign exchange to service our debts and eventually buy back our industries."

Mr. Rieder applauded the efforts of government and industry to make more sales abroad, and to make consumers here more aware of the excellence and competitiveness of Canadian products.

In 1962 Canada experienced its first real crisis since the war in the form of a run on the Canadian dollar and the refusal of Canadian voters to give any party the vote of confidence necessary to form a stable government, Mr. Rieder said. He added that today Canada needs a government capable of uniting the nation — one that will foster the changed attitude of business and labour toward co-operation between them, and with government, in planning for economic growth and prosperity.

Mr. Rieder stated that national defence and foreign policy should be resolved outside the area of partisan controversy. Political divisions should reflect differences of opinion on matters of economic policy and social welfare, particularly the role of government in these areas.

Rossiter, Minister of Industry and Natural Resources of the Province of Prince Edward Island, have expropriated the land hereinafter described under powers conferred by the Expropriation Act being Chapter 53, I have cause to be deposited a P.E.I.
