Automation Urged Upon Textile Trade

ST. BASILE, Que. (CP)—The Canadian textile industry may soon find production gains harder to achieve and more expensive unless it takes full advantage of trends toward automation, Francois E. Cleyn, new chairman of the Canadian Textile Institute, said during the weekend.

He told members of the Textile Graduates Society here Saturday that "if Canadian mills are to take advantage of the most advanced machinery, they must be prepared to meet two basic prerequisites. These are: Greater standardization of equipment and greater production volume."

To meet either of these two conditions planners should consult with both labor and government Mr. Cleyn said.
