

Feature High Waistline, Disputed Hemline In Paris

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS (AP)—This is the season of the high waistline and the disputed hemline. It is the season of the little black dress, the big fur collar, and the gold lame evening coat.

If the Paris fall and winter fashion season might be compared to a bridge game, young Yves Saint-Laurent of Dior's won the set with his curve line and surprising midcalf hems; Pierre Cardin and Lanvin Castillo also took tricks.

But the game may go to the Spanish mystery man, Cristobal Balenciaga, who is considered the creative genius of fashion.

Set on its ear when Saint-Laurent brought skirts down by five inches Thursday, the fashion world did a flip-flop Friday, when it heard the electrifying whisper: "Balenciaga keeps hems short."

"SECRET SOON LEAKS"

"The man everybody copies" had just shown to the buyers, and his big secret was not long in leaking.

Since Balenciaga will not give the press a peep-in for another 3 weeks, the Dior show officially remained the sensation of the season.

Saint-Laurent's curve line was based on down-curved shoulders, a high curving waistline, medium full skirts with a slightly-curved-in hem.

He denied, with some justification, an Empire outlook, but every where else the influence was rampant.

Visible success No. 2 was Pierre Cardin's mushroom silhouette, achieved with a huge puffed-over collar and tapering torso.

ALL FOR CASTILLO

And everybody — or almost everybody — liked the flamboyant styles of Lanvin Castillo. His diamond-shaped woman was pulled up with a drawing under the bust, wide in the hipline, and gathered up again at a narrow knee-length hemline.

Red was probably the season's No. 2 color. Also well up in the running were mauves and purples, blues, greens, brown and winter white.

Favored materials were a new loosely woven looped mohair, velvet surfaced woollens and velvet lace, thick silk crepes, satin, and gold lames. Sables collared a lot of coats, and even lined some sumptuously.

The belt was back, but not where it used to be. Almost without exception, it was anchored under the bustline or below the shoulder blades.

NECKLINES DIP

Necklines went in for dizzy dips, particularly at Dior and Balmain. The pop-over decolletage was said to be underwritten with an interior device, but really looked hardly safe.

Nobody actually dared cinch the waistline in again, but several made gestures towards a fitted line, among them newcomers Matta and Goma and old-timers Desses and Griffe.

Hats that go with the new styles are tall fezzes overturned bows, jaunty cockades, or puffycrowned mushroom or champagne cork shapes. Several designers showed a feathery bit of nonsense atop the head, dropping black veils to the hemline to swath the figure in mystery.

POLITICAL THEME?

Some French newspapers saw a political influence in the season's fashions. They compared the new Empire line of de Gaulle's day with the old one of Napoleon's time.

But what most women want to know is still a moot question: Where, oh where is the hemline?

Canada Should Double Its Dwellings In Next 15 Years

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada in the next 15 years must double its present stock of 4,000,000 houses, Stewart Bates, president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said Thursday.

"There are 6,000,000 Canadian children at school today," he told the final meeting of this session of the Senate finance committee.

"They will require more than 3,000,000 homes. It is as simple as that."

Describing the need for homes as Canada's major problem, the head of the federal housing agency said there must be an increase in the present annual rate of home construction.

An estimated 150,000 homes would be started in Canada in 1958. This rate would have to be increased if Canada was to meet the needs of future families, clear slum areas and replace old housing.

MANY HOMES SHABBY

About 1,200,000 houses had been built in Canada since the end of the Second World War. However, many Canadians still lived under deplorable conditions.

An immense proportion of Canadian housing was substandard.

Of the 4,000,000 homes in the country, some 1,000,000 were more than 50 years old and 500,000 were in need of major repair.

Mr. Bates said facilities exist under the National Housing Act to remove slum areas. The federal government would pay 50 per cent of the cost of such projects with the remainder borne by provincial and municipal governments.

Unfortunately only four cities—Toronto, Montreal, St. John's, Nfld., and Halifax—had taken advantage of the legislation. He hoped that more municipalities would seek this type of federal housing assistance.

ATOMS FOR CHINA?

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Vice-Premier Nieh Jung-chen Saturday urged Communist China to master the newest techniques in thermo-nuclear reaction and space exploration, the New China News Agency said. In an article in the Communist party organ People's Daily, Nieh said "we must focus our efforts on stepping up research work in the newest branches of modern science and technology."

ALLISON MacLEOD

For the past 45 years Allison MacLeod has been associated with the automobile industry. Since 1942 he has been the local dealer in Pontiac, Buick and GMC Trucks, prior to this he held the dealership for Ford and Lincoln Cars.

In 1948 he purchased the old MacLean property at Cumberland and Kent Streets and erected thereon the present modern building which houses the firm of Allison MacLeod Limited.

Besides his car business, Allison deals in Imperial Esso products.

Associated with Allison in the business is his son Earl, who became president when he entered the firm on termination of his army career. Earl served in the Canadian Army from 1940 to 1954 and saw action with the 8th Canadian Reconnaissance Regiment, 2nd Canadian Division in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. He was awarded the Military Cross for outstanding duty in action while serving in Holland on November 1944.

Earl is married to the former Eva Irlam. They have three children. He is a member of the Kivawis Curling Club and Charlottetown Yacht Club.

Assisting with the maintenance of the mechanical and Imperial outlet are: Bill Long, Service Manager; Clarence MacPhail, Parts Manager, both of whom have been with the firm for four years, and 12 other qualified mechanics.

The latest in servicing equipment assures the public of prompt, efficient service with a minimum of delay.

Stop in and see for yourself why this big Esso outlet is known from coast to coast.
