Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. What is the best possible acknowledgement to an introduction?

A. Under all possible circumstances, the reply to an introduction may be "How do you do?" And, of course, this should be accompanied by a smile.

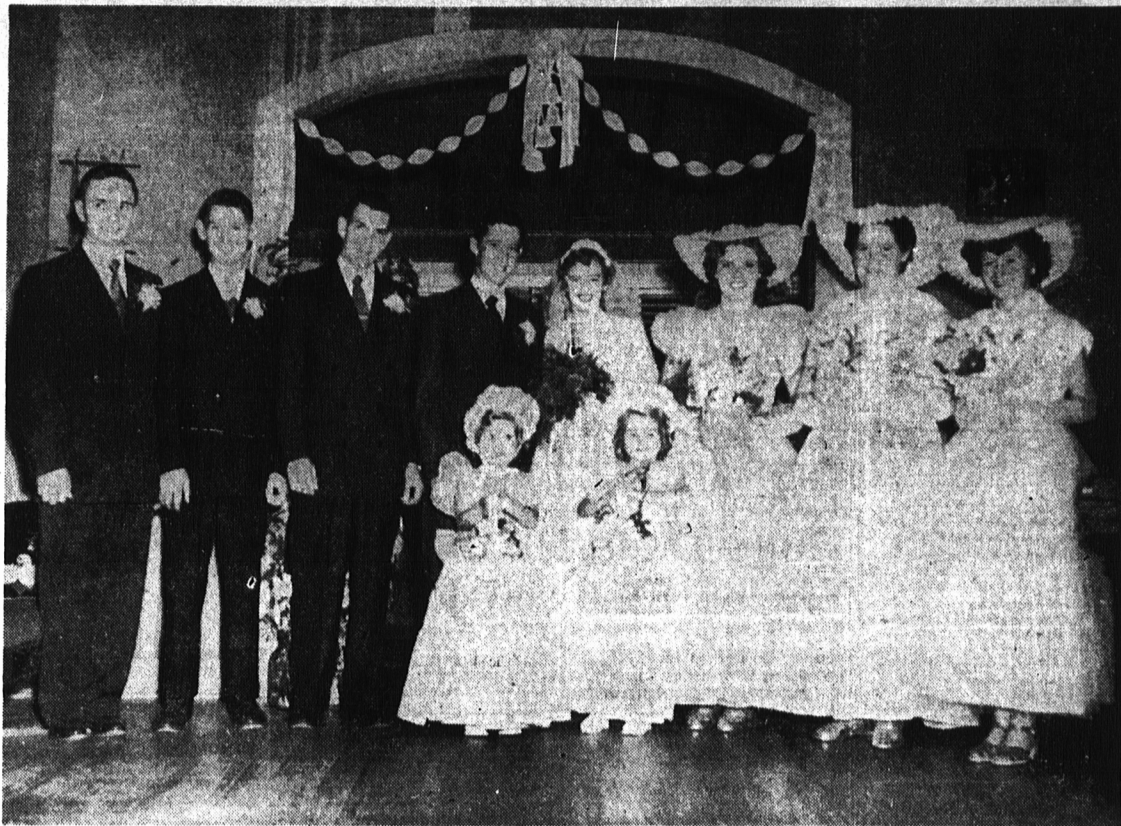

Q. How long after one's return home from a week-end visit should one wait before writing the bread-and-butter letter to the hostess?

A. One should not "wait" at all. This letter is a "must" and should be written as soon as possible upon one's return home.

Q. I have a woman friend who is always extolling the virtues of her son. Do you consider it good form to praise any member of one's own family?

A. This is considered almost as bad form as praising oneself.

Double Ring Ceremony Feature Of Pretty Fall Wedding

Hunter River United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding when at 6 o'clock, September 18, the Rev. Howard Christie united in marriage Wanda Joan, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford W. Bernard, and Elmer Louis, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril V. Smith, all of Hunter River.

Lighted candles, baskets of gladioli and autumn flowers formed a beautiful background for the double ring service. The guest pews were marked with tiny bouquets of white alysium, sweet peas and ribbon.

The wedding music was played by Mr. Donald Hill of New Glasgow, and during the signing of the register, Miss Eleanor Brown sang sweetly, "O Perfect Love."

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage, was a picture of girlish loveliness in a floor length gown of white satin, fashioned with strapless bodice, with a jacket of chantilly lace. The long sleeves had deep cuffs of pleated net and the dress had a Peter Pan collar. Her floor length veil was of illusion and fell from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and her only jewellery was a rhinestone necklace, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Allan Smith, aunt of the bride, was matron of honour, and wore a Nile green gown of satin with net, picture hat and mitts of matching net, and carried a bouquet of mauve and white gladioli.

Bridesmaids were Miss Eleanor Smith, sister of the groom and Mr. John Bernard, aunt of the bride.

Their gowns were fashioned alike and were yellow taffeta and net. Their picture hats and mitts were of matching net, and their bouquets were of gladioli and fern. The two little flower girls, Margaret Smith and Marilyn Bernard, were dressed alike in green and yellow organza with matching bonnets and carried baskets of mixed flowers.

Mr. Lester L. Smith was his nephew's groomsman. The ushers were Mr. Clark Smith, brother of the groom and Mr. John Bernard, uncle of the bride.

For her daughters wedding Mrs. Bernard chose a navy suit with grey accessories and wore a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Smith, the groom's mother, wore a cocoa brown dress with brown and white accessories and a corsage of yellow gladioli.

The reception was held at Shining Waters Lodge, Cavendish for eighty guests. The tables were prettily decorated with dainty bouquets of mixed flowers, and centering the bride's table was a three tier cake. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Christie, and was fittingly responded to by the groom. Several guests were heard in short speeches.

Following the reception the bride and groom left on a short honeymoon spent in Truro and Halifax. For travelling the bride wore a suit of burnished topaz gabardine with brown accessories and a corsage of roses.

To the bridesmaids, matron of honour and soloist, the bride's gifts were necklaces, and to the flower girls, gold bracelets. The groom's gifts to the groomsman and ushers were gold tie pines.

An unusual feature of the wedding was the presence of four grandmothers and three grandfathers, the fourth grandfather being absent due to illness.

A host of friends will join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Smith many years of happiness.

On Thursday evening, October 2nd, a large crowd gathered in the Masonic Hall, Hunter River, to tender a post nuptial shower to Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

The bride and groom were escorted to two prettily decorated chairs by Eleanor Brown and Lester Smith. The many lovely gifts were opened by Berna Nicholson and Elda Clow while the accompanying verses and good wishes were read by Eleanor Brown and Grace Nicholson. Peggy Burns and Mildred Bernard arranged the gifts on the table.

Elmer, on behalf of his bride, thanked the girls who had planned the shower and expressed his hope that every one present would enjoy the remainder of the evening.

All joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Dancing was enjoyed to the lively music furnished by the Doiron Brothers.

By an Island Farmer's Wife

I have had so many requests for the information on soap and detergents given in the April bulletin that I have decided to give the highlights in my column today.

There are four different types of packaged soaps and detergents now available for your use and these are made up so that they will look after almost any type of household washing jobs.

(1) First of all there is the pure soap which comes in flakes, powder or bar, e.g., Maple Leaf Flakes, Ivory Snow, Ivory Flakes, Princess Flakes and Lux. Nothing can touch pure soap for washing delicate personal and household items if you have soft water—but how many have soft water?

(2) The built up soap which contains an alkaline compound to aid in the removal of heavy soil, a "whiter than white" fluorescent dye and soap. These are: Thrift, Domino, A & P, Quix, Chipso, Rinso, Oxydol and Supersuds. These are especially good for heavy or greasy soil on cottons and linens. They are not recommended, however.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By an Island Farmer's Wife

At length, and we fancy, all in good time, our farmers have taken up the sowing of turnips, the endeavour which brings the year's harvesting of fruit to a close. Now indeed the sowing and planting of spring has completed its fruit bringing his gains and rewards to the farmer... Pull mows and granaries, cellars over-flowing with yield of garden and field.

"Let me think," Gage stood a long moment in this basement, sniffing with puzzled expression this evening, "What do I smell that's so good? Potatoes, mangel, turnips," he named them over. "Oh I know," he nodded smiling. "It's the apples!"

Rising betimes now so that James' words may "make the best use of the day," the farmers came this week to their field-work. Eyes lifting more than once to scan the skies, looking there for ominous weather signals, yet hoping to find instead warrant of continued fine days to speed their work o' field to a close.

How Can I... By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I prevent taffy and other sticky candies from becoming soft? A. By wrapping each piece in waxed paper and storing it in a covered tin or glass jar. A fruit jar with a firm lid is most satisfactory.

Q. How can I remove chewing gum from clothing? A. The white of an egg will remove chewing gum that has become stuck to clothing. Rub the egg white on the gum and it may be removed without leaving a spot.

That Body Of Yours

FEEDING THE CRITICALLY ILL

One of the reasons that critically ill in protein, such as meat, eggs, fish, are given in attractive menus. It is because of poor appetite and apparent fatigue or tiredness of the organs of digestion. As nourishing food, easily digested, enriches the blood and gives strength, foods rich in protein, such as meat, eggs, fish, are given in attractive menus.

I have written before of the hundreds of medical students from Edinburgh University Medical School who flew into parts of Europe and fed those starving people with amino acids, which are the important food elements in protein foods. The results of these special food elements in building up the strength and blood of these patients was amazing.

Further information on the great benefit derived from amino acids is reported by Drs. J. Elliott, D. W. Smith, J. J. Griffiths and others in Archives of Surgery, Chicago. These research physicians give a preliminary report on a four-year study of the nutritional management of

Kid Gloves

To mend a rip in a kid glove satisfactorily, buttonhole around the edge of the tear before drawing together, then oversew the buttonhole. The repair will be substantial.

Breakfast Food

Try popping some popcorn without grease or salt, then rubbing it through the food chopper. Serve with sugar and cream. It is both economical and healthful.

White Furs

If white furs are kept wrapped in blue tissue paper when they are not being used, it will prevent them from turning yellow.

For Tomorrow

UNDER an adverse aspect between Sol and Luna, it would be wise to make the day one of complete relaxation, even surcease from any form of arduous exertion. Merely puttering around the place, or the car, the desk, might prove taxing to lethargic energies. A depleted physical condition, low spirits, other negative or inert forces, might beget "Dead Sea fruit." Take it easy. Loaf.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may not be pepped up to any active or exciting state of feelings or ambitions, being low in spirits and nil in energies. While the health may demand particular attention the inner emotions and ambitions might be benefited by a complete program of relaxation and revitalization through rest and inertia. In any event, the situation is not ominous. Nature simply needs some

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Parents' Query Is Girl Too Young To Be Engaged?

DEAR MISS DIX: Our daughter is just 19. She met a young man at a dance last April, and since that time has been dating him four and five nights a week; the other nights it's phone conversations. They plan to announce their engagement shortly. My husband and I both think she should go out with other young men and enjoy herself before settling down. The boy is only 21, and has been out of service six months. We can't talk to her on this subject without an argument. She won't talk, just pouts and sulks. We have nothing against the lad, only we think they are too young.

My daughter has a good job, contributes some money to the house but has plenty left for clothes and pleasure. She wants for nothing. We are very interested in her future and certainly don't want to see her make a mistake so early in life.

WORRIED PARENTS

ANSWER: I heartily agree with you on the theory that young people should not go steady at too early an age, and should postpone an engagement until they are mature enough to realize the responsibilities of marriage. However, it is quite another thing to convince the young people, as more than one family can testify. Apparently you have exhausted every argument at your command, and the futility of your efforts is proof enough that youth is headstrong in its determination to heed no advice. Positive forbidding is the only course that can be used to keep young people apart and, if your household has not been accustomed to forthright discipline, that won't work. In fact, it's a doubtful solution in any case. If you can use persuasion to postpone the engagement for another year, it's about the most you can do. Actually, the important thing is to have the wedding date set far enough in the future so that the boy will be equipped with a job. You might point out the fact that in order to get along in this highly competitive world, he is going to need a good education. Having already done his bit in service at the age of 21, he probably hasn't acquired much formal education along the way, and there is no gainsaying the fact that its lack will be sorely felt when he plans a career.

It's often impossible to force a girl to have other dates when she is convinced she has found the "one and only." Don't waste your breath trying. Just see that she circulates enough, with her friend so that she doesn't lose all social contacts. Perhaps she will meet someone else who attracts her attention.

If she is determined to go ahead with the engagement, accept it as gracefully as possible and don't worry. There isn't much you can do, and since the boy himself has your approval, that is a very important point. The marriage can be postponed more readily since it involves expense and planning. By the time they are ready for the wedding, you will doubtless accept the fact that they are meant for each other.

DEAR MISS DIX: My wife's people live in the same apartment house as we do. They are very opinionated and nothing I do seems to please them. They are in our apartment every night when I get home and all through the week-end. I have asked my wife to request that they restrict their visits to the daytime when I'm not around, but she says I'm unreasonable.

J. WI

ANSWER: Every man has a right to his own home at the end of a day's work and, since your in-laws are around all day, I certainly think your wife could be considerate enough to let you have peace at night.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 18, engaged to be married, but wonder sometimes if our marriage could be a success. My fiance drinks quite a bit and is very worldly, whereas I have been brought up in a quiet, unassuming home. He seems to admire our manner of living, but makes no attempt to change his ways.

WORRIED

ANSWER: You have forecast your own future with admirable fidelity. Married to this man, you'll spend your evenings home alone with the children while he goes out for what he considers his rightful good time. Like the prospect? No? Then break the engagement.
