THE KLEENER'S KLOSET

Ed Orlowski--Duffy

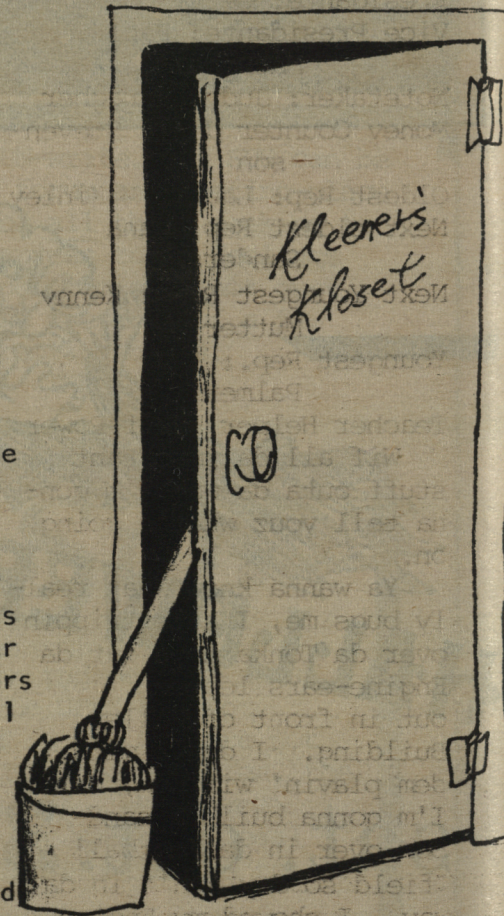

The life of a mop can be very dull, well, as dull as an unsharpened knife. It would be the advantage of every mop on campus to explore the what-goes-on, on the floor and in the halls of Engineering, they's have a jolly good mopping time of it, but, their vocabulary might change a bit, that's expected though, in the halls of higher learnings.

Mopette, the two Billy brushes, and Long Blue (Long Blue is the ratty looking blue-handled general purpose, all-splash no lip wringer kisser type mop that just sits in the hall at times) were all standing in the hall peek-a-boo, hide-and-go-seek alcove, talking about grubbie things that mops talk about on first floor Duffy (home base of the Engineers ball game). When all of the mop handles just stood on end with open jaw clamps. Mopette said "what have we here!" "I don't know!" the Billy brush twins said simultaneously. Oh boy! look out when Long Blue starts humming, he's unpredictable (long Blues the ratty looking blue-handled general purpose all splash no lip wringer kisser type mop that just sits in the hall at times) Blue said...."Its half a peps bottle cut length wise, and its rolling down the wheelchair ramp!"

Mopette...."Leave

it to the Enginners Long Blue, they can do anything! The mops were all a hairy gasp (with a little sand thrown in too), as the bottle did a staggering unbelievable feat.... as the bottle gained momentum, it rolled right between the Billy Brush brothers, who were in utter dis-belief of what they were seeing, and as the bottle butted against the rolled edge of the terazza floor, a bell-like tinkle could be heard, it came to a complete standstill here, and then, as if someone gave it a nudge, which startled Long Blue (Long Blue is the ratty looking blue handled general purpose all splash no lip, wringer kisser type mop that just sits in the hall at times), and made him arch the whippetlets of his eye (this seldom if ever happens), the silly half peps bottle that was cut in half, length-wise, started to roll towards the wheelchair ramp again, when it got to the ramp proper, it gave a little humpy-jump, and started up the ramp again, all the engineers at the top of the ramp all started cheering, and the bottle went right to the top of the ramp all by itself. You could see on their faces that they were just as surprised as we were, and the clincher was when all the Engineers cleared an alignment all the way to the door, and the half peps bottle that was cut lengthwise, made a funny buzzing sound and the door opened all by itself, it wnet outside, and over in the direction of the Robertson Library. The conversation which the mops and mopheads had could'nt be heard because of all the cheering of the Engineers, but it was as clear as the janitor's bucket of water that those Engineers had done it again, they had done almost the impossible, and we in the mopping business saw it with our own arched eyes of our singing whippetlets. Long Blue (Long Blue is the ratty looking blue handled general purpose all splash no lip, wringer kisser type mop that just sits in the hall at times) said to mopette. "Now!, I believe in the story of the 'little Ginger-Bread Man'".
