Both these Sisters are affiliated with ultra modern high schools with a registration of one thousand pupils each. The schools have just been opened within the past year. Sister Mary Polycarp teaches senior English and Sister Mary St. Catherine is the manager of the book store.

While in Charlottetown the Sisters are spending considerable time at the Notre Dame Academy. They are the house guests of Sister Mary Polycarp's sister, Miss Anna J. Macinnis, 136 Dorchester Street.

Miss Helen Yeo and Miss Bessie Prowse, who sailed June 20th from Montreal on the Franconia, arrived six days later in England. They had a very rough trip going over having rain almost all the time and fog. They also saw several icebergs.

Despite the weather they very much enjoyed the trip and the many shipboard activities. Going over at the same time were Mr. Hovis and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Beverley R. Armstrong, Rotherham, New Brunswick. The Armstrongs arrived in Wales on the 26th.

Miss Yeo is now visiting various schools in London under the guidance of the Ministry of Education and Miss Prowse is travelling on the continent.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Granddaughter's Cakes Milton's Poems Enjoyed

"Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet
With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun,
When first on this delightful land he spreads
His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit and flower,
Glistening with dew; fragrant the fertile earth
After soft showers; and sweet the coming of
Of grateful evening mild; then silent night,
And these, the gems of heaven, her starry train."
We think John Milton must have written these lines of his Evening in Paradise at the close of just such a beautiful and inspiring day as was this Island one they fit so aptly. Well described. And in the day's sweetness was the busy flash and color of birds' wings, the bright of summer flowerings, the greens of shrub and tree and field, the lazy drone of pattering bees, the soft lows of the herd coming down the farm-lane to the milking.
"Gathering, eh?" Mack commented coming by this morning to find Granddaughter trying her hand at making a batch of cookies.
"Some day she'll be glad she can bake," we predicted.
"Don't you know?" James chuckled to Mack with a subtle suggestion "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach."
"The way to the world's heart—its comfort, an any rate"—we amended, knowing by lengthy experience how deft of hand and quick and wise to the ways of planning and preparing and serving meals a housewife, indeed most of the distasteful side of mankind, are required to be.
"Yes," James agreed. "She'll no doubt find a knowledge of cookery handy to have, some fine day."
"Now she peering in the oven

Furniture Functional But Also Is Attractive

Your new TV set is really going to belong — when it gets to your living room this year. There's a definite trend to convert the family TV from a "one-piece functional machine" to a piece of fine furniture.

Manufacturers across the country are beginning to lift the wraps from their 1959-60 models and the springtime trend has swelled to a definite swing to furniture-like sets that will be "in place" in every living room.

This year's TV buyers will be getting a lot of plus factors in terms of engineering too. This year marks the debut of the first truly portable machine; a 15" the heralded flat-faced 23-inch tube is here at last. And, in furniture styling too.

Here are the details: You can still get the standard TV box, on legs, with plastic, metal or wood cabinet. They're priced a little less, of course, because they are easier to make. It looks exactly like a TV set, no more, no less. Designers are convinced, however, that you will want your television to look more like a furniture piece than a simple electronic theatre and each maker who has introduced a set to date has included several styling details that will blend in with just about every kind of living room decor.

Just for the record: your new hi-fi set is getting the same treatment.

The style highlights for this year: watch for greater use of walnut and the fruitwood finishes. French Provincial and Scandinavian modern will be important style factors.

On the technical side, there's important TV news. Now you can get a battery-powered set you can take to the beach or the woods. The first units are just coming on the market. Battery life is about four hours... and then it must be recharged by plugging a connection into a standard wall socket.

The picture area is hooded to keep it bright when you're viewing on a sun-drenched beach.

Another big advance this year is the flat-faced tube. This is a new type of tube that the engineers call "twin-panel." The ones on the new sets, this year, are 23 inches in size and they do not have the traditional bulge and the heavily curved corners. It looks very much like the familiar rectangular movie screen.

The new tubes are in relatively short supply so far but they are expected to become standard equipment in the next year or so.
