Just Caught

"I didn't run after you when we were courting," said Mrs. Browne.

"No," replied her husband. "A trap doesn't run after a mouse, but it catches it."

On The Loose

At a dinner party in the House of Commons an American was among the guests. His M. P. hosts explained how closely confined they were and how they were in effect under compulsion to dine in the House every night. Then the Division bells rang.

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed the American, "one of your guys has got out!"

The Stars Say - -

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow

THE week begins on a high note of promise, with a favorable augury for approaching higher-ups for promotion, tokens of preferment, popularity or recognition for work well done. There are indications of some changes to be made, perhaps with a step upward. Nevertheless, these demand serious consideration, with a view toward future development for long-range possibilities, enduring growth.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are advised to hold fast to all that is promising, with vision set on solidarity. Serious efforts and concentrated plans and ideals may attract the collaboration to make definite ambitions materialize. Far insight of enduring worth and sound aspirations are assured tangible values.

A child born on this day may have to give serious attention to wishes, probably against odds, although assured help from those in power.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Will you please explain the correct way to hold the fork?

A. The fork, prongs up, rests on the side of the first joint of the middle finger, and should be held in place by the tips of the thumb and the index finger. Curve the other two fingers lightly under the fork.

Q. How would a bride, who has no parents or living relatives, word the announcements of her wedding?

A. "Miss Mary Jane Jones and Mr. John Robert Smith have the honour of announcing their marriage, etc."

Q. Is it proper for two women, when introduced, to shake hands?

A. Usually they do not — but most certainly there is nothing improper about a sincere handshake between two women.

MUSIC AND MENTAL HEALTH

We have all heard the expression "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast" and most of us have noted the relaxation in ourselves when we hear certain types of music. It will, therefore, come as no surprise to learn that music is proving helpful to many mentally ill patients.

In "Military Surgeon," Washington, D. C., Dr. E. Podolsky states that physicians who care for the mentally ill have come to realize that music is one of the best medications for the mind. Dr.. Podolsky cites, among other observations, the favorable effect of orchestra music on 1,300 patients, afflicted with every grade of mental derangement, assembled during meals in the dining room. Under its influence, these patients are quiet, self-controlled and observe a complete decorum as could be found in the dining room of any large hotel."

What are the usual, or general, effects of music on mental patients? "Music heightens depressed feelings and calms over-active patients. It can change a dissatisfied and destructive mood to a satisfied and constructive one."

Another point about music is that where the mentally ill patient plays an instrument apart from or with the orchestra, the music provides an emotional outlet for repressed feelings. It is the repression of feelings, however apparently necessary at times, that causes emotional conflicts. In playing the instrument, the patient is encouraged to express himself and this raises his morale.

"By playing instruments, the patients practised coordination of nerve and muscle. They derived a sense of accomplishment from playing and showed signs of relaxation, achieving release from their anxieties, emotional conflicts and mental confusion."

Small rhythm bands provide enjoyable activity for depressed patients. "Individual musical treatment in the form of private instruction in voice, piano, instrumental music, and composition, is often helpful in awakening old interests and instilling self-confidence."

To the mentally ill patient who likes music, treatment by music will naturally be more interesting and helpful than ordinary occupational treatment, such as interesting himself in some form of occupation or work.

Odd Stick

It was at the front in Korea and an over-bearing American officer halted an Australian soldier who had failed to salute him.

"Do you know who I am?" demanded the general.

The soldier looked blankly at the officer.

"Don't you know who I am?" persisted the general.

Turning to some other soldiers, the Australian soldier laughed uproariously.

"Boys," he yelled.. "Here's something good. A general who doesn't know his own name."

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"I suppose no two see it alike, but I always think of the New Year as a sort of goal to be reached at some hilltop", a farm wife said, as with other visitors we sat about an open fire on an evening in December, when the Old Year was making ready to take flight. "You begin hopefully at the very bottom" she explained, "and then as the road becomes steeper you toil up with slower steps. And sometimes," she smiled, "when shoulders become weighted and head bowed with the burden of it all, it makes me think of those women of the East who carry weights on theirs! And by the time I get to the summit, the trip has pretty well exhausted the enthusiasm with which I set out—and there's little pleasant to be remembered of it all. That," she chuckled, "is more or less how I see it".

"Isn't that a coincidence," another offered, "for me it's going down a slope, down into the very bottom of what my Granny used to call a glen... There's usually a 'wimpling burn' there... and a wee bit bridge. And if you look in the water, over your shoulder, you can see reflections of the sky; and if you listen you can hear the music of the season.

"And there, where everything is so beautiful, I find my New Year. He is a tiny fellow, fair, with blue eyes and a wide smile. And catching his little cold hand I warm it in mine as we commence our climb together. We go slowly at first, because I have to match my steps to his. It's really better that way for it's so easy to miss nice sights and sounds along the way".

"And as we progress, our pace quickens; we talk with more assurance too and before we know it, we have come to the top—the rim of the glen. And while I pause a moment, to catch my breath, I find the little hand in mine has matured... and returns my warm pressure. And I'm sorry that we have come to the parting of our ways. For again and alone I have to go awa' doon th' glen."

* * *

A white birch log crackled and made colorful magic in the fireplace and fashioned friendly shadows in the room-corners. "I don't think I've ever analyzed my sentiment in regard to it", our hostess observed. "I know I look toward its arrival pleasantly because I expect then to catch up with the work I had laid away in the insistence of the Christmas season—the mending and sewing. I look to its lengthening days to help me out... to give me time to breathe again! I never think of it as something to be found", she chuckled, "but rather as some piece of good fortune come to me".

"I think of it," one husband chuckled to another in an undertone, "as a heck of a time to get the choring done! Through snow and cold, clearing away doors and tracking roads; keeping fuel to the fires and the youngsters to school. But after awhile," he said, "I take more kindly to it".

And James, long-suffering, industrious, energetic, and, we fancy, contented husband of ours brings a frosty breath indoors with him as he now writes "The End" to his day. "It's fairly cool outdoors tonight," he says, "the coldest we've had, I would say... not too far from zero right now."

Until tomorrow — — Diary — — Good-night....

LAKEVIEW W. I.

..*Lakeview Women's Institute held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. Clarence Rose, Lakeville, on December 11 and opened with the Ode and Creed.

Roll call was answered by a Christmas verse. The minutes were read and adopted, and the school committee reported that nothing was needed for the school, except that it be cleaned during the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. James McDonald and Mrs. Stanley Dingwell were appointed to visit the school in January. $1.75 was voted to pay expenses of the Leadership Course in Souris, $10.00 for the T. B. League and $5.00 for a treat for the school children at Christmas.

A contest was put on by Mrs. McCormick. Final arrangements were made for a Christmas concert. Seventeen members were present and collection amounted to $1.90. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and lunch was served by the hostess.

The next meeting was invited to the home of Mrs. Stanley Dingwell.

South Winsloe W.I. Annual Meeting

The annual and regular meeting of South Winsloe Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. E. Hughes on November 3 with Mrs. H. Diamond presiding.

The meeting opened by singing "The More We Get Together." Roll call was answered by six members and there were two visitors present.

Minutes of the last annual and regular meetings were read, approved and signed. The report of the secretary treasurer showed receipts for the year to have been $145.61, expenditures $63.35, with a balance on hand of $82.26. The school committee had no report, and the sick committee reported sending fruit to one who was ill in hospital. Bills were presented and paid.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—president, Mrs. Harold Diamond; vice-president, Mrs. Val MacDonald; secretary treasurer, Mrs. Lloyd Gillespie; directors, Mrs. Heber Hardy, Mrs. Ivan Turner; auditors, Mrs. Russel Diamond and Mrs. Earl Rodd; school committee, Mrs. Erith Hughes and Mrs. Heber Hardy; sick committee, Mrs. Russel Diamond and Mrs. Orville Turner; programme, Mrs. Danny Coles.

Roll call is to be answered with an exchange of Christmas gifts not exceeding .50 in value.

The secretary was asked to get new Institute Books. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Gillespie. The lunch committee will be Mrs. Erith Hughes, Mrs. E. Rodd and Mrs. Val MacDonald.

Collection amounted to .76 and fees to $2.80. It was moved and seconded the meeting be adjourned, and a dainty lunch was served.

Wedding At Tracadie Of Interest

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE C. HENNESSEY

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized in St. Bonaventure's Church, Tracadie, on November 20th when Marie Frances Teresa, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre, Bedford, became the bride of George C., son of Mrs. Hennessey and the late Frank Hennessey of Charlottetown. Rev. Reginald Phelan officiated at the ceremony and performed the nuptial Mass. Present in the sanctuary was Rev. P. Wood.

The soloist, Mrs. Harold Bowlan, sister of the groom, was accompanied by Sr. Mary Winnifred, Superior of the Tracadie Convent.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in navy blue with pink accessories. Her corsage was of red roses with maiden hair fern and she carried a white pearl prayer book with pink streamers dotted with red rosebuds.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Leo Mullen, who wore wine with navy accessories and her corsage was of yellow 'mums and red roses.

Mr. Harold Bowlan, brother-in-law of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Messrs. Raymond MacIntyre and Frank Connick.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Queen Hotel for the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Rev. Parnel Wood presided and the toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Reginald Phelan and was responded to by the groom. Telegrams of congratulations from relatives and friends were read by Mr. Harold Bowlan.

Following the breakfast the newly-weds motored to various parts of the Island, and in the evening a farewell reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Connick, where a very enjoyable evening was spent in dancing and music. A buffet lunch was served to about sixty guests.

After many felicitations and "bon voyages" to Mr. and Mrs. Hennessey, they left the following morning for Edmonton, Alta., where they intend to reside. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bowlan.

Better English

By W. C. Williams

1. What is wrong with this sentence? "Bob or Martha should resign his position."

22. What is the correct pronunciation of "sachet"?

3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Miasma, mien, millionnaire, misanthrope.

4. What does the word "sanguinary" mean?

5. What is a word beginning with nes that means "lack of knowledge; complete ignorance"?

ANSWERS

1. While this sentence is grammatically correct, it is awkward. It is better to say, "Bob should resign his position or Martha hers." 2. Pronounce sa-sha, first a as in at, second a as in shay, accent second syllable. 3. Millionaire. 4. Attended with or concerning much bloodshed. "It was a sanguinary battle." 5. Nescience.

MARSHMALLOW COOKIES

The little round biscuits served with soup or cheese provide just the nice crisp base needed for these dainty little cookies. Everybody loves them.

Thick jam
Crisp round biscuits
Marshmallows
Nutmeats.

Place a small spoonful of thick jam in the centre of each crisp round biscuit.

Cut each marshmallow in half; place a half marshmallow, outside down, on top of the jam on each biscuit; press a piece of nutmeat into each marshmallow.

Arrange on ungreased baking sheet.

Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until marshmallows are golden — about five minutes.

Remove from baking sheet and cool before serving.

TUNA RING

Two seven-ounce cans tuna fish, 1½ cups milk, two eggs, two cups soft bread crumbs, two teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Drain and flake the tuna fish Save the liquid and add enough milk to make two cups. Beat eggs slightly, add remaining ingredients; mix well. Bake in greased ring mold (one quart) in hot oven, 400 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Unmold ring and fill the centre with hot, thickened and seasoned, canned tomatoes; surround with buttered green beans. Makes six servings.

False Face

CHAPTER XVI
Continued

The effect of this revelation has only been to intensify the boom which this artist is enjoying in Chicago. No purchaser of his work seems to have repented of the bargain; and all the unsold pictures have been snapped up. The critics who praised what they imagined was the work of a dead man, stick to their guns, declaring that the value of the work is not affected by the circumstance that he is still alive.

"Attempts to get in touch with Mr. Marchant have failed; and it is stated that he is now on the way to England.. from which place an explanation of his long disappearance may be expected in due course. Under the circumstances it is natural that the Marchant boom should be set down as due to a clever publicity stunt; more or less justified by the neglect Mr. Marchant had encountered when his work was exhibited in New York and Chicago, and also in Philadelphia."

With curling lip and flashing eyes Marcia carried the paper to Miss Deborah.

"Peter is alive and kicking," she sneered. "I told you that I refused to believe that he had ever left America. Read that, and see why he let me break my heart over him."

Miss Deborah read, slowly and carefully; and then laid the paper down.

"It says he is on his way to England, Marcia," she said gently. "He is coming to you to explain."

"What explanation is needed?" Marcia asked savagely. "He wanted success, and he put that before our love. Our love! I meant the love I was foolish enough to bear for him. And now he has succeeded, and you say he is coming back to me. To ask me to marry him on his own terms. I expect."

"If what you suppose is the truth, it was a cruel thing to do." Miss Deborah said, thoughtfully. "But . . . "

"Cruel!" Marcia interrupted. "Is that all? It was infamous. And he shall be punished for it.

CHAPTER XVII

PETER MEETS CLEVER FACE

"Marcia, my dear," Her aunt said' "Ever since you were a little girl, you have made the mistake of giving yourself the benefit of the doubt. Is there any need, in such a case as this, to condemn Peter before you have seen him, or heard what he has to say?"

Is there any doubt remaining?" Marcia asked. "Is it true that he has tried to make me believe him dead, for six months; just to win what he calls success? And I knew all the time, all the time, that there was something crooked about it."

"You knew Peter too well to believe that he would have come to such an end in Paris?" her aunt asked.

"I found it incredible," Marcia said. "You know yourself that I always doubted it."

"But surely this thing that you attribute to Peter is just as unlikely," Miss Deborah argued. "More unlikely, to my mind. I have known him as long as you have, Marcia; and until he admits that he was so unfeeling, I refuse to credit the suggestion."

"But what else can you think," Marcia asked passionately. "He went to America to make a success, and failed, with his picture shows. I went over there, to ask him to come home and marry me; and he proposed to stay there, building bathing pools and making gardens for rich Americans I told him to choose between America and me. And this is his answer.

She took the paper up, and tore it into shreds.

"That's the end of Peter Marchant," she said. "I have had a letter from Henry Smith; he is in London."

"So have I." Miss Deborah said "He is very correct, that young man. What are your instructions, Marcia.."

No Reliance Should Be Placed On Man "Planning Divorce"

DEAR MISS DIX: Perhaps at my age I should be able to solve my own problems, but another's opinion would be helpful.

Two years ago I went with a gentleman. We were both separated at the time. Then he and his wife decided to try it again, so as far as I was concerned, that was that! Last year they broke up again, and he was sent overseas for his firm. While he was gone he wrote and asked me if I would write to him, which I did. Then his wife asked for a divorce; he returned to this country, and we spent some time together. One day he said he had an appointment with his wife's lawyer and would call me the next day. That's the last I have heard from him. I got in touch with the woman at whose house he had been boarding, and she said she hadn't heard from him either. I know he cares for me, and my immediate problem is—should I write to him? He is 46, I am 45, and I, too, am getting a divorce.

MIRIAM R.

Muriel Nissen

ANSWER: The chief trouble with on-again-off-again romances such as yours is that, for the "other woman" at least, they seldom become definitely "on". I should think the man's sudden silence would be so obvious as to be self-explanatory, but apparently you are desperately clinging to any straw in hope that some other reason may be offered. Since his immediate objective after seeing you the last time was to consult his wife's attorney, some sort of reconciliation must have been effected at that meeting.

HUSBAND'S DEPENDENCY TOO DEEP

Whether it will be permanent or not is anyone's guess, but it is certain that the wife still exercises sufficient power over her husband to get him back from time to time. Their marital situation is so unstable that it offers little possibility for your romance to have a happy ending. Even if the couple were divorced, the husband's dependency on his wife is too deep for him to be a good mate to anyone else.

The most tenuous thread a woman can cling to is the glib promise of her lover to get a divorce at some always vague, future date. The number of women who have wasted good years waiting for the promise to be fulfilled is tragic. The lonely hours spent in futile waiting could be quite productive if devoted to finding, and pleasing, a worthwhile matrimonial prospect.

When future matrimonial plans involve double divorce, they incur a concomitant dose of double trouble.

It's very doubtful, Miriam, if your vacillating suitor will settle his domestic affairs to the point of coming back to you. Your age certainly doesn't mark you as a back number yet, you have intelligence and, presumably, attraction for the opposite sex. Forget the man, resolve your own affairs, then begin to think about your prospects of another man.

DEAR MISS DIX: Three years ago my sister-in-law's mother passed away, and I haven't heard from the family since. As I have been very busy with my own family, I didn't pay any attention to their silence, but now I hear that they are angry with me because I didn't send flowers. Why I didn't, I don't know. My sister and I paid our respects by visiting and going to the funeral. I am very upset over the matter and wonder what to do.

A. D.

ANSWER: Since you paid your respects, and went to the funeral, you really covered the major amenities of the situation, and your sister-in-law should not be hurt over your failure to send flowers. However, in time of bereavement, one is naturally more inclined to be sensitive than at any other time. It's quite possible that the breach caused by your oversight may never be healed. Even at this late date, a letter of explanation and apology may help ease the situation.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 10 years old and get an allowance of 60 cents a week. I do not want to continue taking this money, because I think the family needs it for other things, such as a car. Mother thinks I should continue getting it.

K. S

ANSWER: You are a very considerate girl to give so much thought to your family's finances. However, your mother is trying to teach you how to handle money, and you should take the allowance and learn to use it properly. Cover as many of your expenses as possible, and save the rest. Maybe you'll save enough to buy the family a nice accessory for the new car you all hope to have.

Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of general interest through this column.

How Can I ! ! !

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I make candles fit in the candlestick?

A. Where a candle is too small or too large for a candlestick, dip it into hot water to soften the wax, and then push into the candlestick. If the candlestick is too small, the candle can be squeezed in; if too large, the soft wax will spread and hold the candle upright.

Q. How can I prevent brass articles from tarnishing?

A. By covering them with a thin coat of clear varnish. The varnish will form a lacquer which will not wear off unless the article is handled frequently.

Q. How can I improve French dressing?

A. Try making the French dressing with half lemon and half lime juice. This will make an especially good dressing for fruit, vegetable or fish salad.

Glassware

To strengthen new glassware put into a pan of cold water and heat slowly until the water has reached the boiling point. Then remove from the fire and let stand until the water has cooled before removing the glass. This treatment will make the glassware less liable to break easily.

Swelling

To prevent bruises from swelling apply immediately a cloth about five folds in thickness, dipped in cold water. When the cloth becomes warm renew the wetting.

Poached Eggs

Cook poached eggs in milk instead of water and it will make them far more nourishing as well as tasty. This is particularly good for an invalid.

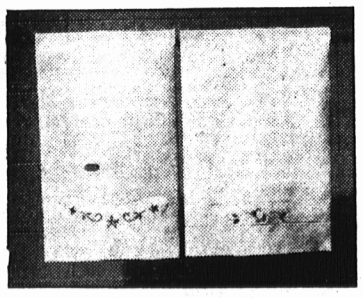
JANUARY IS THE MONTH to check your linens, take stock of what you will be needing for the year ahead. It is the time of year you will see linens and yard goods for making sheets, pillow cases, luncheon sets and towels advertised for special sales to assist you in replacing the things you will need. It is a time to mend and turn sheets for longer wear. New ones can be made easily and quickly from materials by the yard. When you make your own, you can have that extra length for added comfort. A longer turn over at the top of the bedcovers will protect your blankets for longer wear. Pillow cases can be made from the same material as your sheets, or you can buy pillow case tubing and finish only the ends.



Colorful Trims on Linens

Colored linens, or white trimmed with color, are very much in style at the present time. To make a change, you can add colored hems on some of your white sheets, pillow cases and towels by cutting strips from colored pieces of linen or fine cotton and stitch them double at the top of your piece. These can be done on the machine with matching colored thread, or if you wish to have your linens more elaborate, you can embroider over the stitching using outline or feather stitch. Little floral patterns can also be worked in embroidery for a more dainty effect. Monograms are smart and popular when worked on linens. They can be embroidered, appliqued or strips of crochet can be sewn on to make the proper initials. It is fun and easy to dress up your household linens. You'll find it adds a cheery note around the house and you yourself can appreciate your efforts as you handle these attractive pieces in their daily use.

Attractive Guest Towels

Pictured here are two embroidered guest towels. Contrasting linen borders are added to a colored towel with dainty embroidery motifs worked for trimming. If you would like to have a leaflet with directions for making these towels, and including one other pattern, just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper and ask for GUEST TOWELS, Leaflet No. E E-1536.
