Tour of United Kingdom Agricultural Areas

By William C. Cairns

As we alighted on the O platform at Waterloo Station, an Englishman, whom we had gotten to know on the ship said: "boys you are now in the center of the greatest city in the world." And now looking back, I am inclined to agree with him. We hailed a taxi and asked the driver to take us to Nuffield Foundation House where they were expecting us. On the way there, the driver realizing that we were strangers, pointed out to us such places as Buckingham Palace, Big Ben, the Houses of Parliament, Marble Arch, etc.

Sunday we were in London and went for a stroll in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens where the sidewalk orators were very busy. We spent a week in London during which time we went to see many of the tourist attractions in that city, including St. Paul's Cathedral, Madame Tussard's Wax Works, Buckingham Palace, No. 10 Downing Street and Westminster Abbey. We attended a sitting of the British Parliament and heard and saw Mr. Churchill, Mr. Butler and many others. While in London, we met the Nuffield People and made arrangements for our tour of British Agriculture.

On April 30th, we returned to London to attend a party on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Nuffield Foundation. Among the distinguished people present were Lord and Lady Nuffield and Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother. We returned to London a second time to attend the Coronation. My seat was in the second front row in Hyde Park at twenty minutes walk from the hotel where we were staying. The weather was cold and rainy but many people stayed out on the sidewalks for a great many hours in order to be sure of a good place to see the Coronation procession. A great many people fainted from sheer exhaustion before the procession passed.

The Coronation itself was one of the high points of the summer. The ancient grandeur and splendour were intermingled with the modern glory and military might of the British Commonwealth. I am sure that every Canadian there was proud to be a member of the Commonwealth and Empire. People were there from every corner of the world and London was bulging with humanity.

After the Coronation, we spent two weeks on the Continent where we visited France, Germany, Holland and Belgium. Paris was wonderful and as gay as it is reputed to be. We visited the Canadian war cemeteries at Vimy Ridge and took pictures of the famous Vimy Memorial. The original trenches where the Canadian soldiers fought for three years are still there.

In Germany we spent a few days in the Alps Mountains and later visited the Canadian air base in Germany where we saw some of our fellow passengers on the Scythia which was the name of the ship on which we went to England. In Holland, we were immediately struck by the pretty houses and well kept homes. The Dutch people certainly keep their country very soic and soan, and they have in their hearts a very warm place for Canadians. They say that it was the Canadians who gave them back their freedom during the war. After we left Holland we crossed through Belgium and back through France to Boulogne where we set sail again for the White Cliffs of Dover.

We spent nearly two months of our time studying Scottish agriculture, and even spent a few days in Northern Ireland and Wales. I was scheduled to leave England from Southampton on the Samaria on September 11, 1953. The special train was to leave Waterloo at 9 A. M., so I left Nuffield Foundation House at 8:15 A. M. Herman was going to Iceland and spending a little more time in England before his return to Canada. He took me to the station just as the bright sun was beginning to show itself.

The city looked very lovely as we drove past Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens and down past Buckingham Palace where two bobbies and two red-coated guards were on duty. The Queen was still in Scotland but the Palace was guarded anyway. Soon we went past Westminster Abbey, the scene of this summer's coronation, and the British Houses of Parliament on the Banks of the Thames. We crossed Westminster Bridge and under the glass roof of Waterloo Station, where our special train was waiting. Here Herman and I said Good-Bye.

Quite often during the next day we could see part of the South coast of England but finally the light-house on the island off of the coast of Cornwall faded from view and we saw no more of England. The sea was as smooth as the land and everybody was having a perfect time. The return sea voyage was just as good as the first one and all too soon we realized that we were getting close to North America.

We saw a few other ships on the way over and one day in particular the sea was extremely rough. Up around the coast of Labrador we saw some ice-bergs and the air was quite cold. Soon we passed through the Strait of Belle Isle and into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Some fellow passengers suggested that I should get off of the ship and swim home but I decided to stay with it.

At Quebec City I passed through customs and caught a train for Sherbrooke. Some friends met me at the station and I spent several very profitable days looking at Quebec farming. I returned to P. E. Island by rail but, to avoid staying overnight in Sackville hitched from there to Tormentine. I arrived at Borden and telephoned home for them to come after me which they did.
