

THE DAILY EXAMINER. JUNE 16, 1892.

Undignified Whitewashing.

The mystery attending the commission of crime is hard to solve when the real culprit acts strictly on the lawyer's advice not to talk. But when by overestimating his own astuteness and underestimate the intelligence of other people, the accused becomes loquacious he generally by his contradictions, omissions and evasions suggests a chain of evidence against himself.

The letter signed by Mr. Benjamin Balderston, Provincial Auditor, which we publish elsewhere, will, if we are not greatly mistaken, call for a good many qualifications and explanations from Government sources before the people are done with the deplorable muddle in the affairs of the Land Office caused by the reckless conduct of Messrs. Peters and McMillan.

We call attention to the following extract from Mr. Balderston's letter, in which he certifies that he has—

"Compared the credit entries in the Township Ledgers for the whole of the year 1891 with the entries in the Cash Book, and afterwards examined the Cash Book for un-checked items."

In one instance the amount credited in the Township Ledgers was seven cents less than the amount in the Cash Book, and in two other cases there was a discrepancy of two cents in each.

With the exception of the above trifling errors, I found everything correct. All the cash received has been accounted for, and every entry marked so that it can be easily traced."

The italics are ours. While it may be observed that the Auditor does not say that he examined the Ledgers for unchecked items, yet he tries to create the impression that he found no discrepancies between the entries in the Cash Book and the Township Ledgers, except trifling errors amounting in the whole to eleven cents, adding that with these exceptions he found "everything correct."

In the face of this ex parte "report," we say that everything is not correct; and that there are hundreds of credit entries in the ledgers for 1891 for which no corresponding entry can be found in the Cash Book, and that many of the transactions to which these entries refer are dishonest, corrupt and scandalous.

Why did not the Auditor examine the Township Ledgers as well as the Cash Book for unchecked items? One would conclude from his "report" that he was trying to discover a surplus, not a shortage. If he made the comparison, as he says he did, items remaining unchecked in the Cash Book would represent cash in possession of the Government for which no person had received credit, while unchecked credit entries in the Ledgers would represent credits given to individuals for which the Government had received no consideration.

Every person knows that the shortage would occur, if at all, in the last named items, and yet the Auditor does not say that he looked for them at all!

The Government has already admitted, by a statement submitted to the Legislature, that there were 661 credit entries made during 1891, representing the large sum of $9,562.47, besides the credits for which cash was accounted for to the Treasury. In addition to this, Mr. Shaw and THE EXAMINER charged that there is a shortage of over $4,500. We now repeat the charge, and reproduce the figures on which it is based:

Balance due on open accounts as shown by the report of the Department on the 31st Dec., 1890... $411,880 67

Total amt. of open accts. Deduct cash paid into the Treasury during 1891... $72,878 43

Add new accounts opened during the year 1891, as shown by the Land Commissioners report... 6,431 C)

Total amt. of open accts. Deduct cash paid into the Treasury during 1891... $72,878 43

Add deductions and allowances made in 1891, as shown by statement submitted to the House... 9,562 47

Total amount shown by Commissioner's report... 347,938 70

Not one figure in the above statement is called in question by Mr. Balderston's "report," and we think it highly probable that the unchecked credit entries in the Township Ledgers, which he does not say he examined, will, if investigated by independent Commissioners be found to explain the greater part of the shortage of $4,500, as well as the large sum of $9,562.

47, already admitted to be given away by Premier Peters in discounts and allowances. It is evident the Government must think its case pretty bad or it would not have recourse to the undignified expedient of getting itself whitewashed by its own official. It is also worthy of note that Mr. Balderston's examination of the ledgers such as it is, was not undertaken until after Mr. Shaw and THE EXAMINER had called public attention to the shortage in the balance of 1891. The fact that the shortage is still unaccounted for stares the Government squarely in the face.

The Land Office.

AUDITOR'S REPORT FOR 1891.

OFFICE OF PROVINCIAL AUDITOR, June 9th, 1892.

Hon. F. Peters, Attorney-General: Sir,—With respect to the auditing of the books in the Land Office for the year 1891, I certify that I have—

1st. Compared the counterfoils of the Land Sales Receipt Book and the ordinary Receipt Books with the entries in the Cash Book from 1st April to 31st December, (the first three months of the year having been audited by my predecessor.)

2nd. Compared the Treasurer's Receipts given for money paid into the Treasury with the entries in the Cash Book, and examined vouchers of refunds.

3rd. Checked the additions in the Cash Book.

4th. Compared the credit entries in the Township Ledgers (for the whole of the year 1891) with the entries in the Cash Book, and afterwards examined the Cash Book for unchecked items.

In one instance the amount credited in the Township Ledger was seven cents less than the amount in the Cash Book, and in two other cases there was a discrepancy of two cents in each.

With the exception of the above trifling errors, I found everything correct. All the cash received has been accounted for, and every entry marked so that it can be easily traced.

BENJ. BALDERSTON, Provincial Auditor.

Supreme Court—Prince County.

THURSDAY, June 16.

Queen vs. McLean—Indictment for assault, against the Court this forenoon and is now proceeding.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING of the Stock Breeders' Association will be held at the rooms to-morrow (Friday) at 2 p. m.

MASONIC.—Special meeting of Victoria Lodge, No. 2, A. F. & A. M., this (Thursday) evening, to confer the third degree. Officers of St. John's and Victoria lodges please be in attendance on time. Visitors in good standing always welcome. By order.

AFTER HORSES.—As will be seen on reference to our advertising columns, Mr. Charles F. Trask, the well-known horse dealer of Gardiner, Me., will be at the Hotel Davies to-morrow and Saturday, and will be prepared to purchase thirty good horses.

SYRUP OF FIGS produced from the laxative and nutritious juice of California figs, combined with the medicinal virtues of plants known to be most beneficial to the human system, acts gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds and headaches, and curing habitual constipation. 1/12 1m.

BROKE THE POSTS.—Yesterday afternoon a countryman's horse that was tied to one of the posts at Mark Wright & Co's. furniture store, King Square, became fractious, and pulling back his head suddenly snapped the post in two near the ground. After getting the animal quieted down somewhat, he was attached by another and similar post adjoining, but he objected again and soon broke that one in the same way and in about the same place as the first. The countryman shortly afterwards drove off.

STEAMER OVERTURNED.—A terrific cyclone struck Bangor, Me., on Tuesday afternoon about a quarter past five. Several buildings were blown down in the suburbs, but trees uprooted and chimneys were demolished by wholesale. The little steamer Annie, plying between Bangor and over the river summer resorts, while entering her berth with seventeen passengers, was overturned and great confusion prevailed. Miss Madeline Adams, 18 years old, was drowned, but the others were saved. Miss Norris of Hampden was saved, but every particle of her clothing was stripped from her by the struggling passengers. It was the heroic work of the sailors in the harbor that saved all but Miss Adams.

CORPUS CHRISTI.—To-day being the Feast of Corpus Christi, the usual services were held in St. Dunstan's Cathedral. Mass was celebrated at half-past seven, at half-past eight and at ten o'clock. At the half-past seven service about 150 children received first communion; and about the same number of the children who made their first communion last year renewed it this morning. At ten o'clock, solemn High Mass was celebrated by Father MacAulay, with Father McLellan as deacon and I. F. Reid as sub-deacon. After Mass there was a procession of the Blessed Sacrament, followed by Benediction. This afternoon at 3 o'clock, the Sacrament of Confirmation will be administered to about 150 persons by His Lordship Bishop MacDonald, Chief Justice Sullivan and Mrs. Sullivan will be the sponsors. There will be Vespers and Benediction this evening at seven o'clock.

AN IMPORTANT CASE.—A probate case is shortly to come before the Supreme Court at Halifax that will involve a quarter of a million dollars. The late John Tobin bequeathed all his estate to his nephew Michael Dwyer, and son-in-law, Edward Davis in trust, to invest the residue and pay it in half yearly instalments to the testator's four children, William, Mary Elizabeth and Ellen, in equal shares. The executors did as directed and the children are still living, and the estate at present amounts to $250,000.

In 1870 the youngest daughter, Ellen, married Edward Mapher and after fourteen years became insane, in which condition she still remains. Up to this time her share in the estate was paid regularly. She had previously made no will. Seven children were the issue of her marriage. No guardian appointed since 1885 their shares are not being paid by the executors, who ask the court for directions as to who can give a proper discharge for the payment of the share, and who will be entitled to Mrs. Mapher's share in case of death.

NEWS FROM OTTAWA.

SENATOR POIRIER SIZED UP.

Redistribution Bill Debate.

(Special Correspondence of The Examiner.)

If it was the cold that I complained of three weeks ago, that no longer troubles me. It is the heat now that renders existence almost a torture. Oh, the heat of last night! Never even during weeks of burning, raging fever did I spend a hotter night than last night. There was not a breath of air, and the thermometer stood at 86 in my room. Sleep was out of the question. There was nothing for it but a cold bath as soon as daylight came.

I don't know whether this hot weather will shorten the session any, but just now I think we are here till the middle of July at the least. To-day it is 91 in the shade.

There was a bit of a breeze in the Senate last Monday when Senator Poirier moved for all papers, &c., relating to the appointment of a successor to the late Judge Wetmore, of New Brunswick. The venerable (V) senator from Shediac charged the Government with disregarding the claims of N. B. Catholics in filling the vacancy, and contended that Judge Landry should have been promoted instead of appointing Hon. D. L. Hannington. Sir John Abbott sat down hard on Poirier. He told him that judges were chosen not on account of their religion or nationality, but for their fitness for the position. Without saying a word against Judge Landry, Mr. Hannington had been chosen because he was well-suited for the office. As to discrimination against Roman Catholics, the charge was absurd, as Sir John Thompson, from whom comes the recommendation for appointment to the judiciary, would naturally be the last man to treat Catholics unfairly.

Senator Dever, of St. John, an opponent of the Government, repudiated Mr. Poirier's interference, and as a Catholic himself, said that the Catholics of New Brunswick were well pleased with Judge Hannington's elevation. This Senator Poirier is a curiosity. He is generally to be seen lying through the corridors like a mad thing, as if someone was chasing him. He wears a plug-hat, very much out of style and with hardly any rim, always set well on the back of his head, a pair of pince-nez athwart his nose, fashioned by a 1/4 inch rope which he carries over a highly-developed ear—and a sea-moat coat. Last summer, it was a sight to see him playing lawn tennis in plug-hat and spectacles and shirt sleeves. How he ever got appointed to the Senate is a mystery to more than one Acadia man, and is worthy to be a class of people. After he was made a Senator he sought admission to the New Brunswick Bar, and was plucked. So much for Senator Poirier.

When the House met on Tuesday, Mr. Dalton McCarthy moved his amendment to the motion for the second reading of the Redistribution Bill, as follows:—

"That the said bill be not read a second time, but that it be resolved that the distribution of seats of the members of this House should so far as practicable be based on equality of population, due regard being had to the community of interests existing in localities, a full and fair expression of public opinion, and the permanence and stability of the constituencies. That the most effectual way of accomplishing these ends is to assume county and city boundaries as the natural limits of electoral districts, with equitable divisions thereof, consulted with compactness as regards geographical position, and based on well known existing areas, where the population outside the city or county is two or more representatives. That the system now prevailing and proposed to be continued by the said bill fails to secure equality of population, ignores community of interests, disregards geographical compactness, renders stability impossible, and is liable to gross abuse in affording opportunities in the arrangement of electoral districts for promoting party aims and obtaining party advantages, regardless of the considerations which ought to determine the settlement of the representation of the people in this House."

Mr. McCarthy spoke with his accustomed calmness, but he was very free in his denunciation of the principles and some of the details of the bill. He agreed with Mr. Davies as to the construction of the B. N. A. Act about the "authority" which should do the redistribution. His speech to the vast majority of your readers, as indeed most of the speeches on this bill, was very dry reading this hot weather. Perhaps when the debate touches the Island, it may become more interesting. Suffice it to say that Mr. McCarthy denounced the Redistribution Bill of 1882, and regretted his part in supporting it. Mr. McCarthy seems to be in a rebellious mood of late. You will remember that on Monday his amendment to Mr. Devlin's motion regretted the action of the House in passing resolutions of sympathy on three occasions already, for all of which Mr. McCarthy voted.

Mr. Dickey replied to the legal points of Mr. McCarthy's speech, and Mr. Haggart applied himself to defending the details of the Ontario redistribution.

It was late in the evening that Mr. McCarthy forgot his gentlemanly self-possession, and made the very uncalculated remark that he had not yet fallen so low as to recognize Mr. Haggart as his leader.

During the evening Mr. Davin made one of his characteristic speeches. He began by defending himself against the charge that the Regina Leader, the paper of which he is chief proprietor, was subsidized by the Government to the extent of some $8000 a year—a charge which he proved wholly unfounded. Being interrupted by Mr. McGregor who ejaculated, "Do not get mad, Mr. Davin returned, "I will not get mad. I do not come from the clan McGregor which, I am told, has contributed to madnesses; a larger proportion of inmates than any family that ever existed." Again reviewing Mr. McCarthy's speech, he said: "I could not help smiling when I saw the political enemies of twenty years ago holding across the House; when I saw the stern member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) smiling on the rigid conservatism of the member for Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy) I could not help thinking of what Lord Byron says in his 'Vision of Judgment,' when he is describing the meeting between the Archangel Michael and the Devil. Byron pictures the two meeting on somewhat neutral ground, and they met with certain courtesy, and the great post-boys—and this would admirably describe the somewhat strained cordiality between the two honorable members:—

"They did not kiss, Yet still between his darkness and his brightness, There passed a mutual glance of great politeness."

It was a quarter to one on Wednesday morning when the House adjourned, and all Wednesday's session was occupied in the continuation of the debate. Thursday was similarly spent.

Mr. Lister, of whom I have frequently had occasion to speak in terms of high praise, took the floor to defend M'osa's gerrymander bill in Ontario. He was quoting an extensive array of figures, and getting along finely when Dr. Montague undertook to ask him a question. Immediately the valiant Lister whined that he was being interrupted, and thereupon followed a storm of protests from Paterson, of Brant, and from Somerville, against the interruptions of the government members. Mr. Speaker restored order, but Mr. Lister's little game was up, when Dr. Montague took the floor. The only way your readers can make a fair comparison between the Government and Opposition is by giving Dr. Montague's speech. If Mr. Lister's figures and assertions had been correct he would not have been afraid to answer Dr. Montague's question, but the moment he was faced he and his party backed down—they had not a word to say. They will get up in the House and talk for hours, and make the most astounding and untruthful assertions, and if a Government member gets up to contradict them, but the moment he is faced he and his party backed down—they had not a word to say. They will get up in the House and talk for hours, and make the most astounding and untruthful assertions, and if a Government member gets up to contradict them, but the moment he is faced he and his party backed down—they had not a word to say.

Literary Notes.

"The Stone, Bronze and Iron Ages," by John Hunter Duvar. London: Swan Sonnenschein & Co., New York; McMillan & Co., 1892. This book, which has been eagerly looked for by all to whom the name of Hunter Duvar is familiar, is now at hand. We regret that time has not yet permitted us to make more than a hurried perusal of the volume, but a glance at the first pages will convince the reader that Mr. Duvar has given us a book containing much information about early archaeology, and has managed in a most wonderful manner to compress into one volume a very wide idea of the fascinating study. The author modestly claims, in his preface, that his book is meant to be "no more than a popular treatise." That his work will be read through the corridors like a mad thing, as if someone was chasing him, is needless to say anything of the graceful literary style of the writer, who manages to surround even a recital of the most ordinary facts with a beauty of language that makes all his chapters deeply interesting. In "The Stone, Bronze and Iron Ages," Mr. Duvar deals with the subject of archaeology from the earliest ages and through all successive periods during the times when "Man's earliest weapons were flint, nails and teeth. With stones, and clubs torn from the limbs of trees; His next material was when copper found; And latest period was when iron known."

It is not possible in this short space to make mention of the many interesting chapters descriptive of the different ages, the Mound-Dwellers, Lake-Dwellers, Modes of Sepulture, etc. The book is for sale at T. L. Chappelle's, Diamond Bookstore, Queen Street.
