NEWS BY THE ENGLISH MAIL.
STATE OF ITALY.
Forty years have elapsed since the Italian States were, by the Treaty of Vienna, handed over to the fostering care of their native Princes, and to the paternal corrections of Austria. What has been the result? From 1815 to 1856, one long accusing wail has been raised to ascend from the crushed heart of Italy.
Even at this hour, from every part of the other of the fair land, with the single exception of the Sardinian dominions, nothing is to be found but military prisons, military arrests, military executions —the country gorged with police spies —fear and suspicion everywhere—universal lamentation for the past, sorrow for the present, and despair for the future turn where we will, the picture is still the same. In Lombardy, in Parma, in the Pontifical State, in Naples, society is thoroughly disorganized. The strong hand of Austrian power indeed makes itself, everywhere felt, and naturally in Lombardy to a greater extent than elsewhere. But even in that province the agents of Austria have taken the alarm, and are multiplying their own precautions and the misery of the inhabitants.
The competition is now enforced with even more than Austrian rigour. Married men are carried away from their homes, only sons, who were never called out, save when war was raging, are compelled to enter the Austrian barracks.
In Parma, too, the same system of stern despotism, under the suspicion of an Austrian General, still prevails. Military law continues in full rigour. There is no trade, for there is no security for property or life. There is no amusement, for who can divert his thoughts from his own miseries and the miseries of all around? In Puscany, the Grand Duke who has just returned to his beautiful capital, is employing the first moments of his return to make a Concordat with the See of Rome, on the model of the Concordat which has been passed between Rome and Austria. The effects of this unwise measure have already so clearly appeared in the latter country that even Austrian statesmen have been compelled to make application to Rome for relief from the spiritual tyranny of their ecclesiastical superiors. It was across the Tuscan frontier and enter the Papal dominions we everywhere meet with foreign soldiers—Austrians and reluctant Frenchemen, whose bayonets protect the successors of St. Peter and his ecclesiastical advisers from violence, and armed troops are posted at every post.
The land is going out of cultivation.
No attempt is made to evolve the many virtues of that fertile soil. A spell is laid over the moral as well as physical development of the country. In the sacred city men dare scarcely whisper privately expressions of grief at the closest friends. Turn where a Roman will, the trail of a police agent taints the air. Brigandage has arrived at such a pitch that it is dangerous throughout.
Rome goes to even two or three miles from at town at mid-day. An Austrian police agent is taken place, from day to day. This is the way in which the peace of Italy is preserved, (large and full of statistics and

The Pope, it is said rightly or wrongly shudders at the misery and desolation by which he is surrounded, and would gladly under the work of his tyrannical Minister—the Cardinal Antonelli—but he has not the power to do so. Can no State from the thralldom in which he is held Bad as the state of things now is over the whole of Italy, it is in Naples that it reaches its highest infamy. Here is a picture of the condition of the unfortunate persons now in the power of the Neapolitan police, taken from the letter of a trustworthy correspondent, dated within the last month:—"I must again call your attention to the condition of the prisoners in Monte Sarcio, of Baron Pocro I have spoken fully, but not of others who are labouring under different forms of disease as Schiavoni, who has lost the use of one eye and nearly that of the other; Dono, who has been in the place set aside as the hospital for five months; Pironti labouring under paralysis, unable to move without clausis and to walk more, a young man of 34 years called Alfonso Zenli, who is dying of consumption from the dampness of his prison reduced to a skeleton, scarcely able to breathe, or to speak; he has had the last sacrament administered to him and is now closer than a brother his fingers cling to his withered limbs, and no civilized age or country will ever perhaps have witnessed such a proof of the efficacy of cruelty and vindictiveness."

AUSTRIA.
There may be difficulty in answering the question, "What can be done for Italy?" but it is quite certain that no country can long remain quiescent in the condition in which Italy now is. One way or another, action must take place there before long, and it is only to be hoped that it may be such as will lead to the establishment of a rational and well secured freedom at the least possible cost of human blood.

GREEK.
ATHENS, JUNE 15.—The state of Greece is more deplorable than ever.
At this moment, a population of 1,000,000 and the suburbs is terror-stricken. The brigands are now in the town.
