Criticism In Commons Of Veterans Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — The old soldiers had their day in the Commons Thursday and those of them who occupy the opposition benches took some verbal swings at Canada's veterans legislation, the so-called Veteran's Charter.

The main trend of their criticism was that all is not as rosy in the department of veterans affairs as Veterans Affairs Minister Lapointe — a wartime lieutenant-colonel—tried to make out. Veterans allowances aren't liberal enough, they said, and there are anomalies in the pension laws that ought to be ironed out.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert), a First World War veteran, said the Canadian pensions commission should not be the final body to rule on interpretations of pensions legislation. Questions of law should be open to appeal to the courts.

ASKS FOR CONSISTENCY

Col. Lapointe, replying to opposition demands for an increase in the ceiling on permissible income of recipients of the war veterans allowance, said it had to be kept in line with other veterans benefits.

If the Canadian Legion's request were granted for an increase in the income ceiling to $1,200 a year for single recipients and $2,000 for married veterans—from the present $840 and $1,400—it would boost the cost of such payments by 30 per cent. They now total $41,192,000 annually.

The minister's departmental spending estimates of $245,413,819—down $394,332 from the last fiscal year—finally were approved.

The House then moved on to the spending estimates of the northern affairs department. Northern Affairs Minister Lesage announced a special board will be established by the Manitoba and federal governments to study the water resources of lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba and tributary rivers. The study would be concerned mainly with flood control and hydro development.

He specifically stated "he would like to take this opportunity to ask everyone interested in the improvement in our hospital, who have not been called on by some of their friends or neighbours, to send thier contribution either directly to the Hospital or to Mr. L.D. MacKay, Treasurer of the Campaign, at the Royal Bank of Canada, Charlottetown."

Mother of Runaway Diplomat Goes To Moscow To Visit Son

LONDON (CP)—The mother of runaway British diplomat Guy Burgess has joined her son in Moscow in a new instalment of the Burgess Maclean story.

The foreign office said Friday night that Burgess' mother, Mrs. J. R. Bassett by her second marriage, told officials in March she was planning to visit the Soviet Union to see her turncoat son.

"She arrived there in the last two days," a spokesman said, adding that Mrs. Bassett made it clear the Russian trip would only be a visit.

Burgess, 45, with fellow diplomat Donald Maclean, disappeared from Britain in the summer of 1951.

Reports that they were in Moscow were not confirmed until an unexpected press conference in Moscow earlier this year. Since that meeting with a restricted group of Western newspaper men, neither Burgess nor Maclean have courted any further publicity.

In a 1,000 - word statement in their Moscow appearance, the two men denied they ever had been spies but said they now were working for the Kremlin.

TO STAY SEVERAL WEEKS

Mrs. Bassett, who lives in fashionable Piccadilly, is expected to stay in Moscow for several weeks at the apartment rented to Burgess by his Communist bosses. He and Maclean are reported working for the Soviet foreign office.

The foreign office spokesman said there was no necessity for Mrs. Basset to obtain official permission to visit her son. As a British citizen with a valid passport, the only formality required was obtaining a visa from Russian consular officials here.

Mrs. Basset's open visit was in strong contrast to the way in which Mrs. Melinda Maclean left with her three children in 1953 to join her husband Donald. She vanished mysteriously from Switzerland, evidently without informing anyone of her intentions, and apparently was smuggled by secret routes to Moscow.

Princess Ann Gets Doll House

LONDON (Reuters) — Princess Anne Friday received a doll's house equipped with electric lights, running water and household gadgets controlled by concealed switches.

The dream-toy resulted from visit paid by the Duke of Edinburgh to a London furniture factory. He was presented with miniature furniture for the five-year-old princess' doll's house.

When the duke revealed Anne had no doll's house, three men were assigned to build a special deluxe one. Their three-month effort was handed over Friday.

Six feet long and three feet wide, it has a roof garden with running fountain, a two-car garage, radio and a kitchen equipped with electric stove, refrigerator, washing machine and vacuum cleaner.
