Russian Treasure Chest
Of Arctic Discoveries Opened

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
TORONTO (CP) — A Russian polar scientist Friday night reported a treasure chest of discoveries in the Arctic regions from intensive 20-year Soviet studies there.

One strong evidence there are two magnetic North Poles, situated some distance from each other, said Dr. E. I. Tolstikov, who risked his life riding on dangerously melting storm-tossed ice in the Arctic Ocean. Peculiarities of air movements and temperature have been charted and could lead to better prediction of cold air masses rolling down from the North Pole area.

The Arctic Ocean bottom once was land, Dr. Tolstikov added. Skeletons of microscopic sea life indicate the Arctic gets cold and warm periods in a definite procession, each period lasting 8,000 to 12,000 years.

Submarine mountains divide the Arctic Ocean into two parts, the Atlantic and Pacific, and greatly influence sea currents. The ocean bottom is furrowed by several deep trenches and boasts numerous high submerged mountains.

A MYTH
But it's a myth, he said, that there are any islands in the Arctic Ocean. Highly piled ice might have resembled islands.

The Arctic icecap—on which U.S. and Russian scientists now are floating for research work during the international geophysical year—is propelled mainly by winds, not currents.

Mr. Foley said he voted Progressive Conservative in the last federal election. The man he voted for, John Diefenbaker, telegraphed felicitations.

Cardinal James McGuigan of Toronto told Mr. Foley in a letter he had said a mass for him and bestowed apostolic benediction.

10 Missionary Recruits At Baptist Farewell Rally

Something unique in the annals of Maritime United Baptists took place Thursday evening in the Charlottetown Baptist Church when ten young missionary recruits—all from the Maritime Provinces—were presented in a Farewell Rally. Within a month all ten will be sailing for Angola, Africa, under the auspices of the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission Board. Never before have so many missionaries gone forth under this Board in any one year.

The service was conducted by Rev. H. L. Milton, pastor of the Charlottetown Baptist Church and Moderator of the Prince Edward Island Association of Baptist Churches. Dr. J. A. Clark, a member of the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission Board, read the scripture lesson, and the Prayer of Dedication was offered by Rev. Keith Hobson, pastor of the Summerside Baptist Church.

The various missionary reports spoke of their call to missionary service, and appealed to the large assembly of people to be faithful in supporting them. Mr. Milton explained that due to the expanding missionary program, both Home and Foreign Missions, it will be necessary for Maritime United Baptists to raise this coming year a budget of $315,000. "If we are to do our part here in Prince Edward Island," he said, "it will be necessary for United Baptists to increase their missionary giving by at least 25 per cent."

Following the service, the missionaries-elect were tended a reception in the Lower Church Hall.

Questions Whether Peary Ever Reached North Pole

By DAVE MCINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP)—A new book on the Canadian Arctic questions whether Admiral Robert E. Peary of the U.S. Navy ever reached the North Pole.

The book, Arctic Canada from the Air, was written by Moira Dunbar of the Defence Research Board's geophysics section and Wing Cmdr. Keith R. Greenaway of the RCAF, one of the world's foremost polar aerial navigators. It is published by the Queen's printer.

The book says at one point: ". . . It was from Cape Columbia that in 1909 he (Peary) at last claimed to have reached the pole. Just before his return, however, a claim was made by Dr. Frederick A. Cook (of Britain) that he had reached the pole a year earlier than Axel Heiberg Island.

"There were many inconsistencies about Cook's story and in the very heated controversy that followed his claim was finally discredited and Peary's allowed. Controversy still surrounds them, however, the question can of course never be settled beyond doubt and it is really of little importance. Even if Peary did in fact reach the pole, he at least put an end to the terrible waste of money and energy expended in trying to reach it, and for that alone he deserves thanks."

Canadian Arctic experts have long questioned privately whether Peary ever reached the North Pole but have said it would be pointless to try to make an issue of it.

The new book contains the first public reference in recent years to the possibility that Peary fell short of his aim.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says definitely that Peary traveled all the way to the pole and that "the goal of all the ages of exploration had been reached."
