

Temperatures In Mid-70s Spur Retreats To Beach

Temperatures in the mid-70s tempt swarms of Islanders and tourists to the beaches over the weekend to take advantage of the first warm period after a long, late spring. The improvement in weather conditions has succeeded in warming up cold beach waters, and has brought an increasing number of tourists from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Resort operators say their bookings are solid for the period from the middle of July to the middle of August—always the peak period of the short season—and it is expected that reservations will soon be in order for the earlier and later weeks. The declaration of a four-day holiday, from Dominion Day, by neighboring provinces, is expected to bring a great influx of visitors next week.

Many former Islanders now living in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will be at home or at summer cottages they maintain here. Most have their summer places already set for occupancy from previous weekend visits. The closing of the school year will also see a general exodus from the city of those with places near the beach.

CHURCH RUNS STORES

The Lutheran Church of America, a 3,000,000-strong denomination, has 12 church stores in the U.S., one in Canada and one in Puerto Rico.

Inquiries directed both to private citizens and tourist agencies indicate Prince Edward Island will enjoy one of the biggest tourist years in its history.

China Is Urged To Close Ranks

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union issued a new appeal to China Sunday to shelve its war of words and close ranks in the face of threats to North Vietnam.

Pravda, organ of the Soviet Communist party, published a 3,500-word editorial calling for renewed efforts to unify the Communist camp.

The editorial also reaffirmed the Soviet call for a world Communist unity conference, which Peking opposes. Without mentioning China by name it said opposition to such a conference could only be aimed at splitting the Communist movement.

But the only direct mention of China in the editorial appeared relatively restrained in the context of the often bitter exchanges between Moscow and Peking over their differences on how communism should advance in the world.

"Guided by a striving to improve the situation in the world Communist movement, our party has not been conducting open polemics for eight months," Pravda said in referring to the period since the fall of Nikita Khrushchev.

"Unfortunately this position is not meeting a correct understanding on the part of the CPC (Chinese Communist party) leadership," Pravda added.

It called recent Chinese speeches and articles "openly hostile" to the Soviet Union and said they were "distorting the actual state of affairs."

Mr. Grindlay stated "it's my job and pleasure to give a pat on the back to the people behind Island Flying Services". He added he was quite certain Island Flying Services had long range plans for providing safe flying and training at the Mt. Pleasant Club.

PLANE CRASHES

Air Competitions Highlight 'Fly-In'

By CARMAN SMITH
Sider Bureau. The Guardian SUMMERSIDE — Mt. Pleasant airport Saturday took on all the appearances of a major terminal as small planes of almost every description kept landing and taking off throughout the afternoon and well into the evening.

The occasion was the second annual lobster fly-in and air show sponsored by the Mt. Pleasant Flying and Country Club and Island Flying Services which make the old airport their home base.

Spectators at the air show were treated to everything from aerobatics to numerous sky-diving performances along with a plane crash thrown in for good measure.

The crash occurred when a Halifax businessman, Sam Ross, flying a Mooney four-passenger monoplane, struck high-tension wires as he was manoeuvring to land in the spot landing competition.

The plane, which was a write-off, severed the lines and nosedived to the ground. The pilot suffered only minor injuries and was attended at the scene and later at the O'Leary Hospital by fellow pilot and director of the Mt. Pleasant Flying Club, Dr. Charles Dewar.

Mr. Ross also captured the trophy for being the oldest pilot participating in the day's competition.

A total of 34 planes took part with a Charlottetown man, Ed Stechley, participated in the sky-diving display. Some of the members of the Nova Scotia club took as many as three jumps during the day.

This reporter had the thrill of being in a plane at the 5,000-foot level when it discharged two of the Nova Scotia jumpers and it was an exhilarating experience, watching the two divers free-fall for a considerable distance before pulling the ripcords to open their chutes.

HIGHEST JUMP

Stechley is reported to have jumped from the 8,200-foot level, the highest jump of the day, and gone 45 seconds or close to a mile down before opening his chute to slow his rapid descent to the ground.

There were a number of awards for the various competitions which included balloon bursting, ribbon cutting, spot landing, sky diving, etc.

The winner of the spot-landing competition was Elmer Noddin of Hartland, N.B. with a home-built, open cockpit single-seater named the "Little Toot".

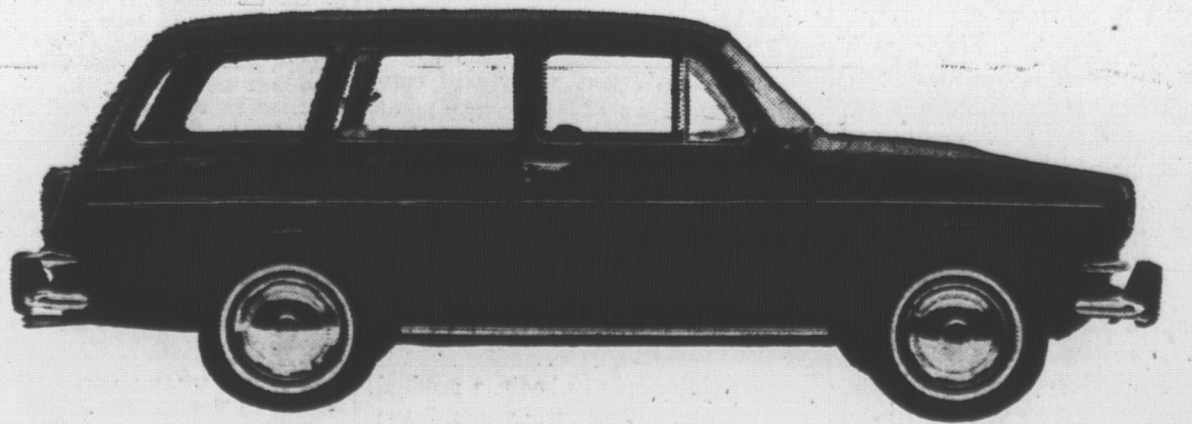

The oldest airplane award was captured by Al Whalley of Shearwater, N.S. with an aeroplane.

Dave McEwen of McEwen's Field in Moncton captured two trophies, balloon bursting and ribbon-cutting.

The sky-diving award went to the Halifax-Dartmouth Sky Diving Club.
