ELLEN'S DIARY

We lost the sun back at the weekend. Over a bright sky prettily blue, veiling clouds were drawn. How then, could we, we reflected, "face the sun so that the shadows would fall behind?"

In our favorable cropping years, how pleasant the sun's smile is on the farmlands as it caresses and warms; catching in its warmth, the new - born lambkin that, in the lee of some sheltering fence - row or bush, is cuddled there beside the ewe; sweetening the strawberries in some wildling of field, or amid some bi-ferned summer dell to be a loved incident of the holiday - time.

Perfecting the breeze of the haying - that same which used to come satin - smooth to a cheek, and scented with the distilled fragrance of every summer you had known, as maybe you raked the rustling hay into windrows, with the old mare in the now - quaint and discarded rake. The sun! How often we have longed to see its beams cut the shadows of damp to restore fine weather. Yet sometimes too, we recall, when the earth's crust dried, and the crops marked time, and blossoms we tended drooped, and the sky maintained an indifferent blue, we have lifted up a grateful face to feel the first drops of a shower!

However we lost it - the sun: Old Sol himself, back in the days. He was there we remembered today, when with Granddaughter we walked the mile to attend the morning service in the "Old Kirk" at the Corner, last Sunday. . .There is, for us, always a rare delight in such a stroll, though it would seem these years to walk thither, is a more or less unorthodox thing to do. No more do folks find the little footpaths of the morning, which once led them thither. Nor those of evening when in summer, in the fading glory of the afterlight, one felt in its crowning loveliness, the deep peace of the day.

"You walked!" one smiled to Granddaughter. "Oh dear, just to think of it tires one."

"Walked - yes. Though," Granddaughter added with a Sabbath - chuckle, "on my part, it was not altogether from choice!"

And then lest we should forget that in this clime, it is not usual for Spring to break decisively, but by degrees: by wistful sun - smiles revealed, and a gentling of winds, this week, April - snow, and flurries, and damp, have been our lot.

"And how can the robins sing now?" Alex wondered.

But all the time, in proof of sunshine to come and the approach of the seedtime, the millstream below the front meadow runs full and red, bearing the drifts away.

"It looks as if, for me, there'll be no fishing this year on the opening day." Mack offered, coming by from school. "I never have any luck when the water is red. But," he added on a more engaging thought, "I wonder where my fishhooks are?"

Snowflurries, we have. Mist of damp on the windows. The night is dim. And high above the sagged ceiling of cloud, the moon and stars keep their courses. And actually,

"Never once since the world began, has the sun ever stopped shining,
His face very often we could not see, and we grumbled at his inconstancy,
But the clouds were really to blame, not he, for, behind them, he was shining!"

Until tomorrow — — Diary Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Accosting Of Daughters Shows Moral Depravity

Dear Mary Haworth: I am 35 and have five children. My husband is 38. I guess my problem really began 17 years ago, when I didn't stand up for what I knew to be right.

I kept letting my husband hurt me over and over again, until now I am too nervous and emotional to think clearly, and taking medicine for this condition.

My husband always has been a heavy drinker, staying out late. He has struck me on several occasions. This I tolerated; but now I fear for the welfare of our teen age daughters. When he comes home drunk he tries to molest them.

They are very disturbed and wish to leave home. Once I called the police, but later we agreed to see our pastor for counselling. This helped for a time, as he stopped drinking and began going regularly to church with us.

His reform lasted for about three months. Then he lapsed back into drinking and last month he began troubling the girls again. Now I have lost faith and hope for the future.

I consulted a marriage counsellor and made an appointment for him, which he refused to keep. He says he can stop drinking if he wants to. The counsellor says his sex problem doesn't come from drinking; that drinking only reveals it and that he needs help.

As he refuses to see the counsellor, she advises me to take the children and leave. I would appreciate your opinion. I guess I am just immature and need someone to lean on. Life is hard now; but will it be harder if we leave? I actually fear him and what he may do.

I am trying to arrange housing back in my home town and if it comes through I pray I make the right move. Please advise me soon to help me reach a right decision and follow through. P. N.

Dear P. N.: It is proverbial wisdom that "honesty is the best policy." By the same token, a right course of action, undertaken because it is right, regardless of the cost, always is a better investment in the long run than "taking the course of least resistance."

If you remain in an evil situation for lack of guts to move out of it, you are, in effect, sinking into quicksand. The longer you stay, the less moral strength and resiliency you have left, wherewith to save yourself.

As for what you should do—take the family counsellor's advice and clear out, even if it means seeking temporary refuge with the Salvation Army or any other emergency sanctuary for displaced persons.

As of now, you are staying with your sick-sick husband in a spirit of pure cowardice, which is unbecoming to a mother. As a rule, any mother worth her salt will dare any risk, any sacrifice, any personal danger, any hardship, to try to preserve her children's well - being of body, mind and soul.

Your husband's furtive pursuit of his daughters when he is drunk is a complex disorder: a blend of emotional irresponsibility, moral depravity and criminal misconduct. And you are putting yourself on record, with him and them, as being a weak-minded accomplice in his wrong doing, when you try to keep the family together, with him as the head, in such circumstances.

Actions speak louder than words, you know; and the only indelible protest you can offer, to his grossly selfish exploitation of his womenfolk, is to get professional help in negotiating "constructive separation" from bed and board, that gives you full custody of the children.

Once committed to that brave course of action, don't look back, in terms of regretting the break, or thinking wishfully of what-might-have-been. If only he had reformed, or if only you'd had the wisdom to stand up for the right in relation to him from the very start. M.H.

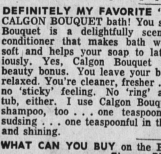
CONFIDENTIALLY YOURS

—by Byrne Hope Sanders



MONTREAL, April 18th—Truly just a 'breeze' to make . . . a light and delightful dessert made with versatile TEA-BISK! Treat your family to Cottage Pudding tonight. When you make it with Monarch Tea-Bisk, you simply make a quick batter and bake 30 minutes to a golden brown. Top it with chocolate or caramel sauce . . . and for a touch of Spring, garnish with fruit. Ask for Tea-Bisk at your grocer's today. He has this handiest, all-purpose mix in either the 19 oz. size with easy-to-use, pre-measured one-cup envelopes—or the big 37 oz. size with convenient pouring spout.

DEFINITELY MY FAVORITE 'all over beauty treatment' is a CALGON BOUQUET bath! You see, Calgon Bouquet is a delightfully scented water conditioner that makes bath water silky-soft and helps your soap to lather luxuriously. Yes, Calgon Bouquet is a real beauty bonus. You leave your bath feeling relaxed. You're cleaner, fresher . . . there's no 'sticky' feeling. No 'ring' around the tub, either. I use Calgon Bouquet in my shampoo, too . . . one teaspoonful in the wash water helps sudsing . . . one teaspoonful in the first rinse leaves hair bright and shining.

For all your credit needs this is the ideal plan—one payment each month covers all your indebtedness, so it's easy on the budget. Why not talk over the B of M Family Finance Plan soon with the people at your neighbourhood B of M branch?

Speaker's Topic Is 4-H Work

Miss Teresa MacLeod, director of women's work with the provincial department of agriculture was guest speaker for the recent supper meeting of the Charlottetown Business and Professional Women's Club.

It is important, Miss MacLeod stressed that people help themselves and that youth be taught to accept responsibility, to work together, and to always complete their work.

Speaking on 4-H Clubs, she noted that the four Hs stand for head, heart, hands and health.

Mrs. Marjorie Champion, Summerside, provincial president of the group, attended the meeting. Miss Madelyn Clarkin, president, presided, and Dorothy MacKenzie, treasurer, presented her report.

It was announced that Isabel Manzies, UN Fellow for 1963, making a speaking tour of the Atlantic provinces, will be in Charlottetown for the club's annual meeting on May 16. Isabel MacDonald and Margaret Collings were appointed to audit the treasurer's books for this meeting.

Miss Helen Yeo reported on the annual meeting and conference of the Canadian National Commission for UNESCO held at Ottawa March 25 to 29. The program emphasized the great need for education in the developing countries of the world, she said.

The secretary was asked to write to the Kinsmens Club offering help for the senior citizens recreation centre. A nominating committee was appointed. During the meeting two solos were rendered by Barbara Rogan.

son for a Hames sister

Allan James, a six-month old boy, is more fortunate than most babies — he has three women to make him happy. He is the son of Norma, the eldest of the singing Hames sisters of the CBC's Country Hoedown. The attractive red-heads, unspoiled by their rapid rise to fame, combine marriage and careers with enviable ease. Watching the sisters rehearsing, baby Allan's musical education has already begun, as illustrated in color photographs taken by Horst Ehricht in Weekend Magazine this week.
