Georgetown Nomad Traders From India Arrive in Communist Tibet

Editor's Note: The following story is by V. M. Nair, a Reuters staff correspondent in New Delhi, who is believed to be the first non-Communist newspaper reporter to enter Tibet since the occupation by the Chinese Communists. Nair arrived in Tibet with the first pilgrimage to go to Mount Kailas since the signing of the Sino-Indian treaty on Tibet earlier this year.

By V. M. NAIR

TAKLAKOT, Western Tibet, (Reuters) — Hundreds of nomad Bhotia traders from India are selling their wares here after their annual migration over the snow-bound Himalayan passes into Communist Tibet.

Here at Taklakot, the headquarters of Purang district in western Tibet, I watched scores of them arriving with their heavily-laden pack mule and yaks. Outside the village, at the base of the gravelly hillock housing Simbling Gompa, one of the most important monasteries of western Tibet, they were arranging a great fair to exchange their goods with Tibetan traders and the Chinese authorities.

For the next six months the Bhotias will remain in Tibet, eating, drinking and trading with Tibetans, retreating to India before the advancing snow line of the Himalayas early in November.

These Bhotias are the real feeders of western Tibet. For centuries past they have been carrying on trade with Tibet, trading Indian textiles and other articles from the Indian plains for Tibetan wool, borax and salt.

Lunch was served by the hostesses and committee and a social hour enjoyed.

MONTREAL (CP) — Bewildered police have reported the theft of several articles which seldom, if ever, interested burglars here before. The missing items include a number of insect spray guns, three bags of onions and one toilet seat, taken from separate places.

Man Who Wrote Story On Traffic Death Killed

ATLANTIC, Iowa (AP) — "Ten seconds to live."

That was the title of a dramatic article written three years ago by Raymond M. Eastman, brilliant young Des Moines advertising writer.

Eastman's article was an imaginary portrayal of the thoughts of a motorist about to be killed in a traffic accident. It was widely quoted.

Eastman, 29, died at a hospital here Sunday, along with a companion, Peter James, 27, Des Moines. Sheriff Kenneth Jones said Eastman's new Jaguar sports car "clipped" another while passing it and careened into a bridge. Two other persons were injured.

The sheriff said it was not known who was driving.

DEATH'S TIMETABLE

Eastman's widely-quoted article started out:

"He pushed his sleeve back, held his wrist close to the lighted speedometer, squinted to read the time.

Musial Hopes For Barring Ch'hip

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Stan Musial said Tuesday he thinks he can win a seventh National League batting championship this season.

The St. Louis Cardinal star indicated he will concentrate on getting his singles for the remainder of the season—and forget about the extra base hits unless the situation calls for one.

Musial has belted the ball at a .410 clip in his last 24 games and at .455 in the Cardinals' 11 most recent contests.

This gave him a season average of .348, just one point behind league-leading Duke Snider of Brooklyn Dodgers.

A little after nine. Five, 10 minutes after. Ought to be home in half an hour.

"If he had only known he had only 10 seconds to live, he might have checked the time more closely. He might have done things differently."

The story of the driver's last 10 seconds then was traced, one by one, until his collision, at 60 miles per hour, with an old, unlighted truck in his path.
