DROPPED ON SUGAR.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES COLDS CROUP COUGH COLIC CRAMPS

All who use it are amazed at its wonderful power and are loud in its praise ever after. For Internal as much as External Use Originated in 1810 by an old Family Physician. Be not afraid to trust what time has endorsed.

Every Mother should have it in the house for the many common ailments which will occur in every family as long as life has woes. Dropped on sugar suffering children love it. Do not forget the very important and useful fact, that Johnson's Anodyne Liniment cures every form of inflammation, Internal or External. It is a fact, proven by the investigations of medical science, that the real danger from disease is caused by inflammation; cure the inflammation and you conquer the disease.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

Could a remedy have existed for over eighty years except for the fact that it does possess extraordinary merit for very many Family Ills? There is not a medicine in use today which has the confidence of the public to so great an extent as this wonderful Anodyne. It has stood upon its own intrinsic merit, while generation after generation have used it with entire satisfaction, and handed down to their children a knowledge of its worth, as a Universal Household Remedy, from infancy to good old age.

Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old-time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.

In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven benefit—either an over or under dose. Get Scott's. Genuine has a salmon-colored wrapper.

"I know he has been irritable with me; but then, as he says, it is a very difficult position for a man without money—that of fiance to a girl as well off as I, and then Uncle William seemed to doubt him, and that made me doubtful and suspicious. And then these frights came, and he wouldn't believe them and laughed at me. So then I wouldn's see him; and because he wrote in what I thought a jeering tone I sent back his letters, and presently, as I grew more frightened and suspicious, I refused to see him at all, and he sent me rude and angry letters. Some I read, and some I sent back; but still I wouldn't see him. But now, Winnie, that you and Uncle William are here, and I am safe and more like my old self once more, I feel that I may have been too hard upon him. My love for him seems to come back, and I know—I am sure I have wronged him by my capricious treatment and my hard thoughts. Oh, Winnie, I am sure of it, and I must see him at once and tell him so." I did not know how to meet her eyes, which were trying to look into mine with a wistful brightness that told of returning health of mind.

While I was racking my brains for something coherent and calming to say, which should yet commit me to nothing, we were both startled by a loud, harsh cry in a man's voice. Poor Alice clung to me in terror. I rushed to the door and opened it. There was a horrible, gurgling sound as of some one calling, gasping for breath.

"It's in Mr. Jones' room!" I cried. "He is in a fit, or struggling with some one. Let me go, let me go!" I broke away from Alice, and rushing to the door of the room Mr. Jones occupied I tried to open it. It was not locked and I entered. I saw Mr. Jones, still dressed lying upon the floor, unconscious. Up against the ceiling and walls were again those terrible birds making scratching noises, just as they had done in Alice's room the night before. Only now the faint light from the corridor showed me that a string was attached to the leg of each; and even as I entered, I saw them drawn up quickly, one by one, shrieking and fluttering through the square ventilator overhead. At the same time a high, cackling laugh, that I recognized broke upon my ears. Surely it was Higgins' voice! I rang the bell loudly and in a little while some of the servants came, entering in a body and evidently much alarmed. By that time Mr. Jones, whose clothes I had soaked through and through with cold water in my attempts to bring him back to consciousness, was recovering. We gave him some brandy, and Mrs. Ellis and I stayed with him until he was himself again. But the natural color never came back to his face; I was almost afraid to leave him, lest he should die in the night. For the paltry trick had had an even more startling effect upon him than it had had upon his fragile niece.

"You won't laugh at poor Alice now, will you?" I said when he had declared himself, "all right again."

"No, indeed," he said, "I—I—we won't talk about it"

When at last we left him, he had the room bright with a whole forest of candles, and said he should sit up reading until it was daylight. I was in such a bewildered state of mind, that when I came out of his room, I turned to the right instead of to the left, and walked on until I found myself close to the door which divided the house proper from the brewery. There I suddenly stopped with a cry.

The door was ajar, and peeping through was the impish face of the night watchman, wearing a curious expression. I drew a long breath and stopped him as he was trying to draw back.

"You, it must be you, who are at the bottom of all this. It was your laugh I heard!" I cried, breathlessly. And at the same moment I perceived that his hands were torn and scratched, and that there were a few loose feathers on his clothes.

"Well," said he. "You'd better have me took up then!" And with a straight stare, half-defiant, which I could not understand, he shut himself into his own domain.

CHAPTER XVII.

When I woke up the next morning and remembered the event I had so recently taken part in I felt that the mystery of it all was threatening to turn my own brain.

Whose pay was Higgins in, if, as it now appeared, it was he who worked the nightly disturbances?

Was it really Harry who had engaged him in this wicked business? If so, how was it that it had not been stopped since the exposure of the day before? And why, for the first time, had another victim than Alice been chosen—and that victim Mr. Jones?

There was no satisfactory answer forthcoming to any of these questions, and it was with a heavy heart I went down stairs.

Alice had had a good night; but it was something more than that which made her cheeks burn and her eyes glitter and gave her a feverish animation which alarmed me nearly as much as the apathy from which she had previously suffered.

Mr. Jones sent down word that he would breakfast upstairs, and would be glad to see Alice and me afterward, if we would not mind the trouble of coming up to his room, as he was too ill to get up.

Alice seized me after breakfast, just as I was leaving the room. "Don't go yet," she whispered. "I am going to send Mrs. Ellis to see how uncle is, and we'll go up presently. I've something to show you—or at least something to tell you." She dragged me to the window and took out of her pocket a letter which I saw was of portentous length. Of course I guessed at once that it was from Egbert.

"The poor fellow is so miserable," said Alice, with tears in her eyes. "He begs me to let him come here to see me, and says he has a right to come; which after all is true, you know, since I never formally broke it off with him. He reproaches me for having let anyone come between us; I suppose he means you, Winnie, so I want to see him to tell him he is wrong, and he says this is the last appeal his pride will let him make, Winnie," she continued, breaking down into sobs, "and that if I reject it he will go abroad again; for although he loves me just as much as ever, he can't in his position humble himself any more."

"Young men always write like that, if they can't have everything their own way, said I, in the tone of one who had scores of such letters stored up as evidence of the value set upon her charms. "I shouldn't answer him, Alice, until you have consulted Mr. Jones."

Build Up.

When the system is run down a person becomes an easy prey to Consumption or Scrofula. Many valuable lives are saved by using Scott's Emulsion as soon as a decline in health is observed.

Big Loaves of Bread.

The largest loaves of bread baked in the world are those of France and Italy. The "pipe" bread of Italy is baked in ovens 2 and 3 feet long, while in France the loaves are made in the shape of very long rolls, 4 or 5 feet in length, and in many cases even 6 feet.

The bread of Paris is distributed almost exclusively by women, who go to the various bake houses at 5:30 a.m., and spend about an hour brushing and polishing the loaves.

After the loaves are thoroughly cleaned of dust and grit, the woman proceeds on the round of her customers. Those who live in apartments or flats find their loaves leaning against the door. Restaurateurs and those having street entrances to their premises find their supply of the staff of life propped up against the front door. The wages earned by these bread carriers vary from 50c. to 63 1-2c. of our money, and their day's work is completed by 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning.

Calling for the Dead.

Many English west-country customs are not only quaint and old-world, but are decidedly pathetic, and the calling of the dead, practised frequently by Cornish women who have lost husbands, sons or brothers at sea is perhaps the most pathetic of all. When hope of the lost one's return has been given up, the bereaved woman, accompanied by a few close friends, goes down to the seashore, and close standing by the water calls out the name of the lost one. Several times she repeats her call, and then all the party listen silently till they hear—at least so they will tell you—the voice of the missing person coming to them in the air, when they return whence they came, fully convinced of his death. From this time the woman, if she be married, is regarded as a widow.

It Saved Our Child.

"My little daughter, three and a half year old, suffered three years with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B. Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefitted by this unfailing cure for piles and skin diseases.

Arclight and Clayson are to trot at Moncton this week, probably on Saturday next.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chase's Pills have gained popularity because they are a specific for the uric acid condition, prevent Bright's disease, cure Rheumatism and all Catarrhal conditions of the Kidneys and Bladder. They do this because they possess remarkable alterative, tonic and deuretic properities, exerting a wonderfully soothing influence on irritated or inflamed mucos membrance of the kidneys or bladder. One pill a dose. 25 a box. The cheapest medicine in the world.

The announcement that Spain has failed to float her $200,000,000 loan in London will be good news to the rebels in Cuba.

Completely Knocked Out.

"I was so much run down I had to give up work, and I felt as if life was not worth living," writes Wm. W. Thompson, Zephyr, Ont. "I took Scott's Sarsaparilla and am now feeling as I did years ago." Scott's Sarsaparilla tones up the entire system, purifies the blood, and eradicates rheumatic and scrofulous poisons. Ask for Scott's and get it.

The Peruvian cruiser Lima left Lima on Sunday with food, clothing, etc., of the value of 40,000 sols for the relief of Peruvians distressed by the great fire in Guyaquil, Ecuador.

Mr. C. Donnelly, wholesale liquor dealer, Alliston, Ont., was troubled for years with itching piles. He was persuaded by James McGarvey, Alliston, livery man, to use Chase's Ointment which he did, was cured, he has no return of them and highly recommends this Ointment as a sovereign cure for Piles.

STILL IN HIS PRIME.

North Hastings' Oldest Inhabitant Hale and Hearty.

Josias Moore, of Bancroft, Ont., one of the oldest and best-known residents of Hastings County, can boast of wonderful health and vigor for his age.

"Although I am over 84 years of age," he says, "I feel as young as ever I did."

Mr. Moore, however had a narrow escape from death about a year ago. "I was so bad with indigestion," he writes, "that the doctors gave me up. I tried various alleged remedies but found them no good. One day our popular druggist, F. C. Humphries, sent me a sample of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to try. The result was marvellous. After taking two I was able to get up. Then I sent for a box. I could soon eat anything. In a short time I was able to walk two miles, to Bancroft and back, with ease."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will, without fail, cure all kidney, liver, stomach and blood troubles. For sale by all dealers. Price 25 cents. One pill a dose; one cent a dose. Edmanson, Bates & Co., manufacturers, Toronto.

Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is the latest discovery for coughs asthma and consumption. It is pleasant, quick and certain. 25 cents.

The Rosebank Farm

Containing 180 Acres of Land.

THE above Farm has 120 acres cleared and in a good state of cultivation, the remainder covered with wood. It is situate opposite the City of Charlottetown on the Southport side of the Hillsborough River, convenient to Schools, etc.; one mile from Southport Ferry in Summer, and one mile from the city in the winter by the ice.

On the Farm is a good two story Dwelling House and a fine first-class barn and and other outside buildings. It is all fenced with cedar posts and barb wire, with several cross fences of the same material.

The shore front extends for the distance of one mile, giving an abundance of sea manure, also a mussel bed within half mile of the shore.

It would make an excellent Dairy Farm or would make a fin site for a summer hotel, having superior bathing facilities and a perfect view of the city. The general surrounding are very picturesque, making it one of the most desirable health resorts in the Maritime Provinces.

Any purchaser wishing to buy the Stock and Farming Implements in conjunction with the Farm can do so if required. All questions asked will be promptly answered by the undersigned.

Half of the purchase money can remain on mortgage at 5 per cent.

HE KNEW THE GAME.

It Was His Own, and He Took all the Tricks in Euchre.

As the train sped along over the Texas prairies a drummer for a St. Louis house came back into the parlor car and asked me to come forward into the smoker and take a hand in a game of euchre, says and exchange. I found two other chaps belonging to the "profesh" and we had the car to ourselves. After a few minutes, however, a young man got on at a small station. He was a native, but he didn't seem to be over bright and not at all dangerous. He watched the cards with much interest for two or three games and one of the men finally observed:—

"Stranger do you play this game?"

"No, I don't." he drawled. "What do you call it?"

"This is called four handed euchre."

"Y-e-s."

"Lots of fun in it and you ought to learn to play. It's good to take hayseed out of the hair."

The young man removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair as if expecting to comb out a lot of hayseed and it was three or four minutes before he said:—

"So that's four handed euchre, eh?"

"Yes: nice game isn't it?"

"'Pears like it, but I've one to beat it.'

"Have you? What do you call it?"

"I call it a one-handed hold up, and here's lookin' at you."

He was not only looking at us, but his two guns were doing the same thing, and the man looked bright enough and carrred a smile at the corners of his mouth.

"Yes your game beats this," said the drummer after a look. "Boys he wants our boodle."

We put down four watches and four wads of greenbacks, and the young man reached for them, with the remark:

"I generally take all the tricks in this game. I get off here and if you want to raise a row go ahead."

We didn't. We sat right there until the train started up and left him behind, and when the conductor came in and saw the cards on the floor and four men looking tired, he exclaimed:

"Well, well! But you fellows seem to need something to brace up on."

Fan Motors as Life Savers.

While from August 5 to August 12 there were 1255 prostrations by heat in New York City and the vicinity and 625 deaths, the temperature on the street in the shade seven days out of the eight reaching over 100 degrees Fahrenheit, it is stated that the record would have been much more serious and the death-roll much longer but for the general use of electric ventilators and fan motors. This is confirmed by accounts from all over the country. The currents of air set in motion are in such torrid weather the breath of life to workers of every kind, and when one has become accustomed to their mitigating influence it seems impossible that other people should not seek the same boon, now so freely within reach. Many offices, resturants, barber shops, stores, factories and houses, which would be simply unendurable in days of tropical heat, are made comfortable by the electric fan. At the same time, it is pointed out that a good deal can be done to make the motor fan more available to the masses. The majority of them are still too large. Smaller fans costing less, and having a lower speed, should be put on the market, and the blades might be so shaped that a greater variety of effect, at varying distances, according to the size of the office or room could be secured. A singular explanation is given of a large order for electric fans just received by a New York firm from Jersey City. It appears that the Street and Water Board of that place has decided to stop in stores, restaurants and saloons the fans that are operated by water motors, of which there are 110. The motors consume a large volume of water, which has to be supplied by the city at half the price it is paying a local company for it.

Street Awnings in Seville.

The busiest streets and squares kept cool and dim under awnings. On the whole, I think it was these awnings that made Seville so charming in August. There had been a few in Cordova. I have been to more than one town which raises a similar protection against Provencal sunlight; but I have never come across them when they were as elaborate, as general, and as effective as in Seville. In the narrow streets they stretched from housetop to housetop at each end, dropping in a great inclosing wall of canvas so low as just to escape the heads of the high-saddled horsemen who pranced under them. In the large squares they extended in a checkerboard arrangement, with intricate ropes and pulleys which I never tried to understand, content to enjoy the result of black shadows alternating with great splotches of sunlight. Even the town hall spreads out an awning all across the wide sidewalk in front of it, and not a hotel or bank or palace or big house did we enter that had not its court as well protected.

Costly Perfumes.

The most expensive perfume in the market at present is the essential oil of rose petals, or otto of roses, which costs $600 per pound. The essential oil of jasmine is quoted at $540 per pound; ambergris, $450 per pound; musk, $416 per pound. In this country some $200,000 worth of perfume spirits, fats and essential oils is imported yearly.

His Exact Condition.

Tourist (in Oklahoma)—"I understand that Polecat Pete barely escaped from the mob last night."

Alkali Ike—"Wal, not exactly barely—he had about half a coat of tar an' feathers on when he got away."

Ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, says that if the Republicans put $30,000 into the state the last week of the campaign they will stand to gain 30,000 votes thereby. Ohio would seem to be a country where money talks.

Changes in Southern States.

Almost any sort of a surprise may be looked for. Louisiana, Kentucky, Florida, Alabama, and Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia—if we may call them Southern States—are all deeply interested. They, all of them, have vast interests in common with their Northern neighbors. The processes of party disintegration have for several years been going on within all these Commonwealths, leaving the individual voter of the South freer to-day to cast his ballot according to his own judgment than ever before. As indicating changes which have already taken place, the fact may be mentioned that at a large gathering of Southern men at a West Virginia resort recently, a straw vote showed 92 against the free silver platform and nominees to 15 on the other side. The Southern States have it in their power this year to relegate the old sectional issues to the past and forever to take their stand with the rest of the country upon the living questions of the day in such a manner and with such emphasis as to make their influence most beneficially felt. We believe the November returns will show several of them ranging up alongside the North with majorities for sound money and the advancement of American industry.—Pittsburg Disoatch.

AMATEUR CYCLIST.

Wants Bicycle Riders and the Public to Know that he was Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

TORONTO (Special), Oct. 5.—People generally, who take an interest in cycling, as well as amateurs and professional everywhere, will remember a name familiar in sporting events—Mr. Louis H. Bonnsell, who resides at 373 King Street East, this city. Bicycle riders will be especially pleased to learn that his reappearance this season in good form is due to his entire recovery from serious kidney trouble which had for a long time been interfering with his work. He desires all his friends as well as the public to know that his recovery is entirely due to using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

A HINT TO MOTHERS...

A dangerous time soon for the little people—autumn changes and winter cold. Plenty of fresh air is the great safe-guard—pure air inside and outside. Don't let a single pore of the skin be closed. Don't cover them with stifling or rough underwear, but with made of wool that's all wool—wool that absorbs and then throws off the impurities. So soft, warm and porous—so snug fitting and "comfy" made into combination suits. Thousands of children are wearing them to-day. They have proved to be the best.
