PERFORM HERE TODAY

The Kiwanis Club of Charlottetown will this afternoon sponsor "The Littlest Hobo" featuring London, one of the world's greatest performing German Shepherds. The performance, a 90-minute show slated for the Basilica Recreation Centre at 4 p.m. and seven o'clock this evening will also include acts by three highly trained German Shepherds trained by Chuck Eisenmann, 44, of British Columbia who has been active in dog training for the past 18 years. The dogs will answer commands put to them in French, German and English and phrases in any of a dozen different ways. During today's performances, the dogs will feature acts of closing doors, opening filing cabinets, operating a type writer and other feats of the canine world.

Slit Cow's Tongue Works, Dr. Kelly Has Better Way

By NEIL A. MATHESON
It was "Life" Howatt, Darlington who told me of the cure a friend offered his father for cows that sucked themselves, and this was some 50 to 60 years ago.

The remedy was "cruel but effective". Mr. Howatt observed as he recalled that a Charlottetown man — I believe it was Benjamin Heitz — had imported some highly bred Jersey cows, but had disposed of them to John Wedlock, who bought cattle for beef, when the cows were found to have the habit of sucking their own milk.

Mr. Wedlock — he was the father of J. Stanley Wedlock who was well-known in this city about 40 years ago — was a friend of Josiah Howatt and traded some of the pure bred animals to him for dry cows that were being disposed of for beef.

"Father tried everything to stop the cows sucking themselves", his son told me. He even had a carriage builder make a sort of frame around their neck that had sharp, protruding nails, or pointed bits of steel sticking out from it.

But still the cows would suck their own milk. They'd lie down and suck, even though the sharp instruments were bringing blood from their flank. I was told:

Finally Bruce Dawson — he was a relative by marriage. I believe — told Josiah "I'll stop them", and he did. And here's the remedy he used.

He took a piece of a stout shingle, pulled out the cow's tongue, placed it on the shingle and slit it up the middle with a razor, to the length of the cow's test, the Darlington man told me. It sounds cruel, but it effectively stopped the sucking, he told me. And I've been told that it's all but impossible to break a cow off this habit once she starts it.

I was telling this story to a group around me at dinner yesterday for the Holstein people who were in annual session. Sinnot Mullally, from the Souris area; Roland Buntain, Rustico; Wayne Dickieson, P.E.I. department of agriculture; Roy Dickieson, New Glasgow; Edson Rayner, Clermont and Donald MacLeod, Victoria Cross were some of the chaps close to me.

THE MODERN METHOD
But Dr. Hammond Kelly was in the group and he told us there is an accepted operation that veterinary doctors perform to stop a cow from sucking herself. It's fairly simple, I understand, and consists of cutting a V-shaped notch in the muscles underneath the tongue.

It doesn't sound as "cruel" as the slitting operation, and I pass it on for your consideration. I've known several people — one was a close relative of mine — who have had to dispose of good milking cows because they couldn't break the animals off the habit.

But your "vet" can stop them fairly easily. Dr. Kelly told us. The meeting of the Holstein breeders lasted from 10 o'clock in the forenoon until past five in the evening. They had a great deal of interesting discussion.

I thought it must have been unusual that they had 10 past presidents at the meeting to accept Past-President's pins. The attractive mementoes were presented by John Powell, extension director at the National Holstein - Friesian office in Branford, Ontario.

Mr. Powell, incidentally, is a nephew of Mrs. A. Birt-whistle of this city. Readers will recall her husband was police chief of Charlottetown for some years.

The former presidents included Robert Chappell, York; Claude Lewis, also of York; B.B. Jones, Bunbury; Parker Newson, Kingston; Allison Proffitt, Andrew Jardine and Alan Clow of Free-town; Donald MacLeod, Victoria Cross; J.L. Dewar, New Perth and John Thompson, Frenchfort.

These are the past presidents who were at the dinner, C.C. (Colby) Lewis, Free-town is another but he was on the Pacific coast of Canada yesterday. I was told by his son Ira who presided in his capacity as president and that makes three men from the same family to occupy that post.

Mr. Powell was praising the Holstein breed — that could be expected — and he was impressive when he said that there were many cows who have produced more than 100,000 pounds of milk; there are others who have produced more than 200,000 pounds of milk.

Right across from me at the table was Roland Buntain, and his Seaside Farm herd produced one cow that produced more than 200,000 pounds — indeed she was the all time high lifetime producer in Canada for several years. Her name was Seaside Susie Alberk. Another Seaside cow — later established another record, but I'm leaving that story until I visit Mr. Buntain, I hope, at his farm in the near future.

SILVER SEAL CERTIFICATE
Silver Seal certificates go to owners of cows that have produced more than 150,000 pounds of milk. One went yesterday to B.B. Jones.

A Blue Seal goes for cows producing 125,000 pounds and over. These went yesterday to Hooper Brothers, Rustico; Allison Lea, Perth; George A. Godfrey and Sons, North Wiltshire; Lewis Brothers, York; Harold MacLean and Sons, Miscouche.

A Red Seal certificate indicates production of 100,000 pounds, and these were presented yesterday to Cyril Jones, Pownal; J.L. Dewar, W.W. MacEachern, Charlottetown RR; Roland Buntain; Colby Lewis, O.J.

Newson and Son, Kingston and to Lewis Brothers.

I said in each case the certificates were presented. Actually they were mailed some time ago, the names were read yesterday at the dinner, for the sake of recognition among their fellow breeders.

Others earning long term production, Red Seal, certificates, and noted at the annual dinner included cows owned by Falconwood Farm; Andrew Jardine, G.A. Godfrey and Sons; Andrew Jardine and Cyril Jones.

Other phases of the Holstein discussion were interesting. I'll come back to them in a future column.

BRISTOL

Friends here of Mrs. Katie Rowland, Charlottetown, learned with regret over the weekend of her passing in the city following a brief illness. Katie Timmins in single life, her old home was in Mount Stewart, where her late father J.D. Timmins operated a meat market and Katie was a top figure in the business for many long years. It was here she made and held her many friends who will long remember her.

Ernie McEwen, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted McEwen, had his car severely damaged last week while en route to the city. He lost control in the extensive fog near Dunstaffnage and crashed into two parked cars. Lucky was the answer that the young man was not hurt. Fog in this area is very extensive spring and fall, all drivers will tell you.

Ralph McEwen, a master of many musical instruments who resides in the city now has joined up with one of the city old time dance bands and he sure will be an addition. We will remember Ralph in other days when he played both the violin and guitar, and was a wonderful singer on the airways before the days of TV. Remember the days of the wood choppers old time band in Bristol, when Ralph McEwen was top fiddler along with his singing. Some of the others who were in that band were Percy Baker, the great mouth organ player, and Ernest Bambrick on the violin, along with his late brother, Tommy. The band also played in different halls along with over the airways. We are happy to see Ralph McEwen toss his chip back into the old time band field again.

Mr. and Mrs. Pius MacDonald and family moved into their new home in the city on Saturday, a gift of the people who, from every place, contributed to the fund headed by a committee from Canada Packers. The new home was furnished with every thing when it was presented to the MacDonalds on Saturday.

Pius is a Bristol man. Mrs. MacDonald was Lillian McCabe to single life. Mr. MacDonald will be unable to work for some time yet as his severely burned body makes moving around painful as yet.

Farmers were working on the land last week in what is believed to be the earliest in many, many moons. Some old timers say it's a mistake, that bad weather is still in the offing.

Mrs. Charlie Eldershaw and her mother, Mrs. Agnes Gallant, were in the city last week for medical check-up. Mrs. Gallant, who is over 80, was in hospital recently for the first time in her life. Mrs. Eldershaw suffered a heart attack quite some time ago and goes in for regular check-ups.

When John R. O'Brien goes to the shore May 1st to show the younger class where to place their lobster traps, he will be going for the 65th season. That may be a record and he says "I am not through yet, once a fisherman always a fisherman."

MURRY HARBOR

Wednesday evening the members of the White Sands, Beach Point and Murray Harbour Women's Institutes were invited to a party sponsored by the Murray River Institute and held in the Murray River school basement. The party began with an auction by the Murray River ladies when they sold home cooking and aprons, etc. After this, games were played and a singing was enjoyed by all. The River ladies served lunch to approximately 50 guests.
