THE REVOLVING KILN

Water Power and Water Products.

Home Manufacture Should be Encouraged.

A FIRST-CLASS ORGAN.

The new revolving kiln, which I had the pleasure of referring to in previous notes, is a complete success. Your correspondent was invited to be present for a trial trip when it was ready for work on the 5th inst. Many others were present, who congratulated Mr. Anderson upon his patriotic enterprise in being the first to avail himself of the new wonder. There is no more turning and handling of oats in the old kiln style for the Eureka. The "revolver" does the work quicker and better. Every pickle of the oats gets its due share of the drying process. When I say "every pickle," millers will understand the advantage and benefit; and consumers of the oatmeal will recognize an improved quality as the result. Already other millers intend to grasp the new order of things, and Prince Edward Island, in this affair at least, will lead Canada. This is something for the Province to be proud of. Miss Canada must come to the Island this time.

In the "trial trip" several bushels of oats were put through. The fire being put on in the large furnace which completely covers in the body of the cylinder, leaving both ends outside, the kiln was set in motion, and allowed to revolve until heat was up. At the elevated or hopper end, the oats were gradually fed, when they took their course in a thin stream down and round and round the kiln, being turned and thrown back slightly by the inside flanges. The first oats entering the kiln—under the conditions of proper heat, and sufficient speed—come out of it at the depressed or receiver end in from three to four minutes completely dried! With the kiln in O.K. condition once passing through of the oats is sufficient. Timing the entire operation, gave as the result, the astounding fact, that from the moment the raw oats enters the hopper, until it appears as oatmeal of a delicious flavor, free from smell of fire or smoke, and fit for use, the whole process is performed in ten minutes; and there is every reason to believe that when experience is gained in the management of the kiln, and the machinery begins to work smoother, the first oats which enter the kiln, will appear in the shape of oatmeal, in even less than ten minutes! It is also well to note that when the kiln is cooling down soft wheat can be passed through, thus rendering it in better condition for grinding, and supplying finer and dryer flour. Considerable care has to be exercised in the handling of the wheat in this way—just the amount of care required must of course become known from practice and experience.

One having his eyes open cannot help noticing the immense amount of water power used on the Island. Notes have been taken of various premises, but one more will do at this time. Pinette Mills, Dixon's, are quite a large property. The grist department runs three stones; the carding department has two carding mills, and the wood department has a rotary and shingle sawer. The main building of these premises measures 40x28 feet; the kiln (old fashioned), 40x25 feet. Two Leffel wheels, 23 and 26 inches, respectively, and an ordinary paddle-mill wheel, keep things moving in a busy hum, and business looks bright.

The tide rises in the stream into which the dam empties itself and the coming of the waters brings the silvery trout. At early morn when the air is sweet and balmy, and all is calm and still, save the greetings of the warblers in the woodland to the golden sunlight, the rod and line does work pleasantly and well. The stream is clear and bright as a mirror, and shadows of earth are buried in its depths.

"The glassy waters doubling all, Woods, skies above—woods, skies beneath."

How one gets into a day dream on such a sport; sometimes not even trout for a reality. This time, however, the trout were plentiful, as the morning fled:—and now:—

"Tis raging noon; and vertical, the sun Darts on the head direct his forceful rays, O'er Heaven and Earth far as the ranging eye can sweep.

Man flies from time, and time from man; too soon In sad divorce this double flight must end."

Now the wanderer rolls up his line. The fishing ceases, and the Inspector of Fisheries forbids the banns till the 1st of December. On this occasion a fellow mortal announced in warning tones that the 1st of October was drawing nigh, and that fishing after that date would be visited with worse punishment than that administered to the weeping infant which Reid Bros. have getting it "warm" in their advertisement in THE EXAMINER.

It is pleasant to note the prominence given in some of our stores to Island manufactures. At the same time it is a pity that there is not a more general support given to home industries. Why should any of our Island stores have foreign soap when the home manufacture is so good? Island pottery is not surpassed by anything imported. Island carriage builders compete well with the Yankee product. Island founders and machinists need not be ashamed of their work. The boot and shoe trade cannot be surpassed by anything from Montreal or elsewhere. If our merchants want printing done, they need not send to offices in New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, as some of them do—THE EXAMINER can supply their wants. Island woolen cloth at 80 or 90 cents a yard beats every outside product in value, quality and durability twenty per cent. In fact, the Island is practically independent in many branches of industry, and Island people should see to it that this wealth is kept up among themselves. Boycott the stores which will insist upon placing the foreign article in preference to home manufacture. Yes, boycott them! "That's a good word" this time, as our friend McNeill would say. Every business house should furnish as much of Island manufacture as trade will possibly permit. They should appreciate, recommend and urge it upon their customers; and every patriotic Island purchaser should give the preference to the product of their own peerless little Province in such articles as every well-regulated household requires.

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," and the music of Grit organs must be very soothing to Grits. Well, never mind the Grit organs, let us get at some other organ. A beautiful player (it's a fact) amused a company the other evening. Myself was there, the organ was sweet-toned, but never a key my fingers touched. He sat down to the organ and struck a sublime attitude. He struck the keys, too, and the music struck up. Being asked for "The Lass of Govrie," he gave "The Dead March in Saul." Some one wanted "Auld Laug Syne," and he played the "Hundredth Psalm." A gentle voice entreated "The Last Rose of Summer," and "Coming through the Iye" galloped forth. "The Harp that once through Tara's halls" was called, and "The Boyne Water" responded. "For goodness sake give us 'Rule Britannia,'" and forthwith "They're hanging men and women for the wearing of the green" came out. "The Burial of Sir John Moore" was desired, but that organ gave forth "A Hundred Pipers and a" "The parson—there was one there—asked for 'Waiting and Watching,' and got 'Holy Willie's Prayer.' "Please play 'The mistakes of my life have been many,' said another, and "Meet me by moonlight alone" was the reply. A ten-year-old golden-haired fairy wanted to hear "Where my darling boy to-night" and instead, "Going up Zion's hill" came joyously. "Down in a coal mine" turned out to be "Up in a balloon"; and "Junonia" appeared as "Baby Mine." "He can't play a tune we ask for," said a charming belle, and the organ pealed forth a magnificent oratorio. Yes, he was still "a beautiful player," but—as deaf as a door post. Do you see? The writer thundered forth, "A chiel's amang you taking notes, and, faith, he'll prent it"; and the musician looked daggers as he said in dulcet tones, "Go ahead, printer's devil," and here you have the notes by

GEORGE.

October 9, 1886.

Sympathizing With the Revolutionists.

The Russian Czar's solicitude for the safety of the Bulgarian conspirators will be accepted as a fairly positive proof that they were not acting altogether on their own behalf when they deposed and abducted Alexander. Kaulbars' parting demand that the implicated officials be released is the very reverse of what would have been anticipated. It is a new thing for a Russian ruler to sympathize with, or encourage revolutionists. The knout, Siberia and the scaffold have been the portion of those who, by word or deed, sought to change the institutions of the great northern power. The Czar's family history abounds in incidents calculated to make him the enemy rather than the sympathizer with conspiracy in any land. When next the Nihilists attempt to blow up some imperial functionary there will, in memory of recent events, be even less sympathy than heretofore shown for the victim.

A Matrimonial Agency.

They still entertain some queer ideas in England as to the state of society in America, if we are to judge by the following advertisement which appears in several country exchanges:—

Matrimonial Agency.—Jensen & Co., 6, Station road, Plaistow, London, Eng. Established to supply settlers in the States with the addresses of respectable young women who are willing to communicate with some fine tradesmen, farmers and others desirous of meeting with useful wives. They will be supplied from the agricultural districts of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, as well as the continent of Europe. Applicants should state their particular requirements and preferences, enclosing postal orders for two shillings to meet preliminary expenses.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

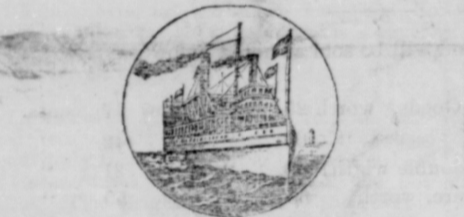

ONE OF THE BEST TONICS.

Dr. A. Atkinson, Prof. Materia Medica and Dermatology, in College of Surgeons and Physicians, Baltimore, Md., says: "It makes a pleasant drink, and is one of our best tonics in the shape of phosphates—in soluble form."

A 15-year-old nurse girl, living near Rochelle, in revenge for a punishment inflicted upon her by her mistress, hanged the three children committed to her charge.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little shrub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

The electric light has proved so satisfactory in Montreal, where eighty-five miles of streets running from east to west are now lit by it, that the system is to be extended to all the intersecting streets running north and south.
