Lois Marshall To Sing At Concert In P. W. C. Hall

Lois Marshall, Canada's brilliant young soprano who has recently taken New York music critics by storm, is to sing in Charlottetown on Tuesday, January 27th at the Prince of Wales College Auditorium. Miss Marshall delighted local music lovers who heard her 1951 concert here, and this will be her last appearance before she joins a large American concert organization. Miss Marshall's New York debut in Town Hall on December 2 was acclaimed as a brilliant performance and she has now become one of America's top artists. She was the winner of the Singing Stars Award in 1950, of the celebrated Naumburg award in 1952, and of countless other competitions. She has given recitals from coast to coast and she has appeared frequently with the CBC and with many symphony orchestras. As Sir Ernest MacMillan has said, "She is great in the real sense of the word."

No Revision Of Minimum Potato Prices This Week

"There will be no revision of potato prices until after the January storage holdings in the United States become known next Monday," said Mr. Donald A. MacDonald, manager of the P. E. Island Potato Marketing Board last evening, when questioned regarding an unofficial report that the Board was planning to revise minimum prices. The market continues dull, Mr. MacDonald said, but the movement of potatoes from the province during the past week has been good because a large boatload of seed was assembled at Saint John, N. B. for shipment to the southern United States. The market for Sebago seed will be quite limited for the balance of the season and a good deal of that variety will be marketed as table stock. The whole market situation is being closely watched and after next Monday the Potato Board feels that it will be in a position to take whatever action will serve potato producers best, for the balance of the season.

Accuse Tito Of Warring On Catholic Church

By Frank Brutto — VATICAN CITY, Jan. 13 (AP) — Marshal Tito, Communist Gov. — was accused by the Vatican in a note made public today of waging relentless war to destroy the Roman Catholic Church in Yugoslavia. The Vatican demanded respect for the fundamental rights of the church. The note was dated Dec. 15 and presumably was handed to Yugoslav Foreign Minister Edvard Kardelj in Belgrade at that time—two days before Yugoslavia broke relations with the Holy See. The public release came during a lull in the rituals of consistory week, in which the Pope has raised the Sacred College of Cardinals, the church's senate, to its full strength of 70 for the first time in nearly 200 years. The Pope created 24 new cardinals, most of whom are on hand here. The new cardinals, including Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, archbishop of Montreal, generally spent a quiet day resting and preparing the formalities yet to come. The Pope is to give them their birettas, square caps of red moire silk, tomorrow. In ceating the new cardinals yesterday, the Pope told the Sacred College he could not "approve the grounds of the accusations" against Yugoslav Cardinal Stepinac, Yugoslavia's Catholic Primate who is an absent member of the group. Stepinac was conditionally released from prison a year ago after serving nearly five years of a 16-year sentence on charges of collaborating with the Axis in the Second World War. The Vatican note replied to a Nov. 1 note from Yugoslavia accusing the Vatican and its Belgrade apostolic nunciature of interfering in Yugoslavia's domestic affairs. Yugoslavia's subsequent break in relations with the Vatican had with any Communist country. The Vatican note said the "Holy See (the Pope) was lacking in its duty" if it did not protect the rights of religion and the church wherever they are violated. It said the Pope could not be considered "indifferent interference in the affairs of state, because Catholics, in addition to being citizens of a determined country, also are members of the church."

The note cited what it described as a few of the most significant measures against the church in Yugoslavia. It said that there were 152 Catholic newspapers, reviews and bulletins in Yugoslavia. Now all Catholic publishing firms have been taken over by the state. All Catholic educational institutions, of which there were hundreds, have been closed. Teachers who did not profess atheism have been removed from public schools. It also cited "popular front" priests, who, it said, are associated with the Communist Party. Many priests, it said, have been intimidated into joining associations of these "popular front" priests. Catholics, it said, must be guaranteed freedom of religion, freedom to participate in the sacraments.

Christmas At The Protestant Orphanage

The children at the P. E. I. Protestant Orphanage had a very happy and most enjoyable Christmas season. Festivities got underway by a delightful party given by the Girl Guides of Parkdale with the children as their guests. The programme activities were greatly enjoyed by all followed by a delicious supper. The Odd Fellows delighted twenty of the children by taking them to see the Islanders Hockey Match at the Forum, where they were generously treated to ice cream, nuts and candy. On Sunday, December 21st, through the kindness of Rev. G. C. Webster a very lovely Christmas service was held in the auditorium. A number of the children took part in the singing of the Christmas Carols. The school age children attended a party arranged by the Girl Guides of Trinity Church and their leader. Each child was presented with a gift after which a bountiful supper was greatly enjoyed by all. The party was brought to a happy conclusion by all enjoying a Christmas film. On December 22nd the boys from the Orphanage who are members of St. Paul's Scout Troop, attended the Scouts' Christmas party in Charlottetown and greatly enjoyed this outing. The children had a pleasant surprise when the pupils in Miss Yeo's class of West Kent School, arrived at the Orphanage and staged a three act comedy which was enjoyed immensely by all. The pupils brought treats for the children. On December 23rd R. T. Holman Ltd. entertained the children by inviting them to see Santa Claus in Loyland, who very generously treated them to apples and candy. Following this the I. O. O. F. had a party at their hall going all out to make this a gala occasion. The highlight of this event was

Toronto Accident Claims Two Lives

TORONTO, Jan. 13 — (CP) — A traffic accident last night on the Queen Elizabeth Highway 10 miles west of here claimed its second victim today. Mrs. Keith Fulton, 30, of Toronto, died in hospital following two operations. She was injured in a crash which killed her 32-year-old husband. The crash occurred when Fulton swerved to avoid a barrier placed on the highway to detour cars around a cloverleaf under construction. The couple were married in Halifax. Fulton came from Western Canada and was a naval veteran. After the war he served as a physiotherapist at the Sunnybrook Military Hospital in Toronto. He recently had been Ontario representative of a wholesale drug company. In the accident, Fulton's car struck one car and he was thrown out of his automobile. He fell into the path of another car following behind and it dragged him about 150 feet. Two of the couple's three children, Keith, 20 months, and Valerie, 3, were only shaken up. The other child, Dean, 8, was at a Cub meeting in Toronto. Following complaints of insufficient warning lights at the barricade, Deputy Highways Minister J. D. Millar said whatever further measures were necessary will be taken. Following the accident, bucket flares were placed in front of the roadblock.

Hansard Man Gets Commons Spotlight

OTTAWA, Jan. 13 — (CP) — The little man who isn't officially there—a Hansard reporter—today became embroiled in a contentious Commons argument. And true to tradition he didn't say a word. A team of seven shorthand experts daily record the official reports of Parliament, in relays of 10 minutes each. They work at desks on the floor of the Commons, but they never speak. Hansard became involved after Prime Minister St. Laurent had objected to use of certain words by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader. He said Mr. Drew had reflected on the independence of members and demanded a withdrawal. Mr. Drew asked to what words the Prime Minister objected. Speaker Ross Macdonald said perhaps the Hansard reporter could read back his shorthand notes—an unprecedented step. At this point the reporter, John Robertson, 39, formerly of London, Ont., saw his relief appear. Mr. St. Laurent jumped into the breach. He said he could understand the reporter's reluctance to "do a thing which would be unique in the annals of the House of Commons—namely to speak while the House is in session." If the reporter were allowed to withdraw he could quickly supply a transcript of his notes. To this reporter Robertson emphatically nodded his head. The Speaker said he would rule when he got the transcript. Then the reporter left. It is a tradition, backed up by rulings of previous Speakers, that Hansard men must come and go without a word.

Grand Jury Returns 3 Bills Of Indictment

Roy Walter Fall, of this city, will appear in Supreme Court today under an indictment charging possession of stolen goods. The indictment was returned yesterday afternoon by the Grand Jury called for the January term of the Queen's County Assizes. There were two other indictments returned against John Carl Fall and Carl Prowse. In each case the Queen is the appellant. All charges arise out of possession of stolen goods. An abandonment was filed in open court and the appeal dismissed in the case of The Queen versus Owen Dougherty. Two other cases were on the docket; they were John R. Skinner, plaintiff, versus G. Albert Darrah, defendant, arising out of a claim for damages from collision. In this instance Mr. G. R. Foster is counsel for the plaintiff while Mr. W. E. Bentley, Q.C., represents the defendant. In the other civil suit the Cameo Dress Company, plaintiff, represented by Mr. L. P. O'Donnell, is opposed to Kennedy's Ladies Wear, defendant, represented by Mr. A. J. Haslam. Charges Grand Jury Presiding at the Supreme Court yesterday and giving the charge to the Grand Jury was Mr. Justice George J. Tweedy. He told the members of the jury that in a "democratic system such as that under which we are privileged to live, we pride ourselves in the fact that we are guided and governed by certain rules of law." His Lordship went on to state that "we take pride in the fact that we are guided and governed by good laws—laws which are in harmony with the will of the people and with the spirit of the times." However, the presiding Judge pointed out that good laws were not the only essential, they had to be well administered. He stated that that administration must be absolutely independent of everything except the law itself. Mr. Justice Tweedy told the jury that the Grand Jury "to which you belong" is another manifestation of our democratic way of life because it gives to the people a very important voice in the administration of justice. He told the members that under our system of administering criminal justice, a person charged with a crime is in possession of a definition of the crime which is set forth in a document which is known as a Bill of Indictment. There were only three Bills of Indictment coming before the Grand Jury yesterday, and they returned a true bill in each case. His Lordship acquainted the jury with the law as he read the indictments. At the same time he reminded the jury that they were not trying the men accused, they simply had to determine whether the Crown presented sufficient evidence to cause the men to appear before a Petit Jury.

Grand Jury Report

The Jury then departed to inspect the various public buildings and last evening returned with their report. They reported to the Court that they found the Infirmary to be very clean and well kept, but they noted that it was very crowded and suggested that provisions should be made for enlarged facilities. The report noted particularly that the laundry is not only too small, but it is not adequately equipped for the amount of work required. The report also mentioned that the kitchen is too small and that better fire escape facilities are needed. The Jury found the male division of Falconwood Hospital to be greatly overcrowded, but expressed the fact that they were greatly impressed with the new wing for occupational therapy. They believed that the present Queen's County Jail is too small for a county of this population, and noted that overcrowding was obvious on every hand. They suggested that larger quarters be provided with a farm attached. The Grand Jury particularly mentioned that they thought much of the equipment and working
