PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

(Special correspondence of The Examiner.)

On Monday, Sir John Thompson presented the evidence taken by the commission appointed last session to enquire into the charges made against Sir Adolphe Jaron. The evidence is very voluminous and will be taken into consideration by the House at a later date when it will be called upon to render a verdict thereon.

Sir John Thompson in reply to Mr. Somerville said that the Government had paid about $1300 costs in the legal contestation on the Manitoba School question—a small amount was still unsettled. It is not the intention of the Government to bear the expenses connected with the hearing of the appeal of the Manitoba minority by the Governor-General in Council.

Mr. Ouimet said that last year a careful survey was made by an engineer of the Rustico Breakwater. The latest report in the department was received on the 24th November last.

In moving for all correspondence regarding the scheduling of Canadian cattle in British ports, Mr. Sproule gave some interesting statistics showing the development of the export trade in cattle. In 1864 we exported to Great Britain 64 head of cattle. In 1879, 20,588, all beef cattle, fully finished for the market. In 1884, 53,962; in 1888, 60,000; in 1890, 123,136; last year about 117,000.

On Tuesday, Mr. Nathaniel Boyd, elected to succeed Mr. Robert Watson in the representation of Marquette, Manitoba, was introduced by Sir John Thompson and Mr. Hugh John Macdonald. Mr. Boyd is a conservative, and Mr. Watson is a grit. As it stands now, the whole representation of Canada, west of Lake Superior, is conservative.

Mr. Ives stated that the total number of persons of all ranks in the Northwest Mounted Police service is 923, and the total expenditure for the current year will approximate $675 000.

Mr. Perry has moved for a return showing the names and number of the employes dismissed from the Island Railway since the 1st March, 1892, the dates of dismissal, the reason therefor; also the names of any reinstated.

In Committee on Supply, the case of the late Accountant and assistant Accountant of the House of Commons came up. Mr. Speaker explained that upon the Auditor-general informing him that there was a shortage of over $2,000, he made an investigation and discovered that both officers had taken public moneys. They were at once suspended, and as the result of further investigation they were discharged. There was no truth in the statement that members of Parliament had overdrawn their accounts, nor was any member implicated in any way. The defalcation amounted to $2,256 and had been made good by the Guarantee Company.

In the course of a discussion on stock farms, Mr. Charlton said that the Percheron horses are going out of use in the United States, and can now be bought for the price of ordinary farm horses. What Canada wants is lighter driving horses. If the Government would provide for fine coach horses, they would be conferring a benefit on the farmers.

While the contingent expenses of the House of Commons were under consideration, Sir Richard Cartwright very haughtily demanded an explanation of an item of $275 paid for engraving map of the Manchester Ship Canal in four colors, and for printing 14,500 copies of the same. He wished to know "in the name of wonder" what we wanted with 14,500 copies of the Manchester Ship Canal? He thought better use could be made of $300 than spending it in that way. Mr. Foster replied that Sir Richard would have to ask some member of the Printing Committee for an explanation. Whereupon Mr. Somerville—an intensely disagreeable person—declared, as one of the committee who had never missed a meeting of that or any other committee in the ten years he had been a member, that it was new to him. He had never heard of such expenditure being ordered by the Printing Committee. Then Sir Richard, who thought he had pounced upon a decidedly iniquitous piece of jobbery, insisted upon a satisfactory explanation. If Mr. Foster did not know, surely somebody could enlighten the House. There was no excuse for the outlay. Mr. McMullen, as another member of the Printing Committee, had no recollection of the expenditure being ordered, but it was noticeable that he was not anxious for Sir Richard to pursue his enquiry. He opened up a new subject, in the hope of putting the Knight of Blue Ruin off the scent. But the Royal Bengal Tiger—as Nicholas Flood Davin once dubbed him—was not to be diverted from his prey. He smelt a carcass in the air, and he was licking his lips in anticipation. To quiet him, Mr. Foster had to promise to make enquiry. The promise was speedily fulfilled. The Journals were examined, and it was discovered that on July 1, 1891, Mr. Mulock, one of the front-seat grit members, obtained an order of the House for a copy of the report of Thomas Munroe, engineer of the Manchester Ship Canal, and that subsequently the Printing Committee—at whose meetings Mr. Somerville had never missed a moment's attendance, and of which Mr. McMullen was also a member—had ordered the report and plan to be printed at the cost before stated. It is unnecessary to say that Sir Richard had no more enquiries to make. But he was far from being satisfied. He was egregiously disappointed, which was very painfully evident from his temper for some time afterwards.

It should be borne in mind that while Parliament is in session it is omnipotent in the matter of expenditures. It is almost impossible for the Government to control or limit expenses. The Opposition are particularly fond of moving for the most expensive returns, utterly regardless of the fact that the information sought from them will be of practically no value. It is vain for the Government to protest. If the Premier raises any objection, half a dozen Opposition members are on their feet at once to declare that there is something the Government wish to conceal. Then for peace sake the return is ordered, prorogation comes before it is prepared, and next session nobody looks at it, but it may cost hundreds or thousands of dollars to compile.

As an illustration, the other day Mr. McMullen moved for a return showing the birthplace, national origin, creed or church to which belonging, and the date of appointment of every person employed in both the inside and outside departments of the Civil Service, and the amounts of their salaries. Sir John Thompson protested against the motion being passed, as very much of the information could be gathered from the Civil Service list published every year. But it was no use, Mr. Laurier insisted and Mr. Charlton supported him, and Mr. McMullen reiterated his demand and Mr. Mills, of Bothwell, entered into a philosophical dissertation to shew the reasonableness of the request. Sir John Thompson had to give in, and the result is that correspondence will have to be entered into with every government official of every grade—all the thousands of country postmasters, all the Customs Collectors, all the preventive officers, all the fishery overseers, every postal clerk and letter carrier, to find out where he was born, and whether he is English, Irish, Scotch, French or Indian, and whether he is Methodist, Baptist, Catholic or Agnostic. Then when answers have been received, they must be put in shape, and the whole affair printed, while Parliament will be prorogued, and next session the Government will be abused about the unnecessary expense.

On Wednesday Mr. Pope moved in favor of placing corn on the free list; and on Thursday Mr. Cleveland moved to place coal oil in the same category. The former motion caused considerable discussion, and on both the debate was adjourned, probably for the session, as next week the Finance Minister proposes announcing any changes which are to be made in the tariff.

On Thursday Sir John Thompson tabled a report of the proceedings at the convention between Canada and Newfoundland, held in Halifax last fall. The convention appears to have resulted in nothing beyond an agreement to reduce postage between Canada and Newfoundland to 3 cents, and a request to the Imperial Government for the appointment of a British Consul at St. Pierre. The question of the admission of Newfoundland into the Confederation was brought up, but its consideration was violently opposed by at least one of the Newfoundland delegates, and no progress was made on the subject.

Mr. Weldon's bill to disfranchise electors taking bribes has received a second reading, but a similar motion in favor of Col. Amyot's bill to make voting compulsory was negatived.

A revision of the voters' lists will take place this year. It is probable that the bill shortly to be introduced in Parliament will greatly simplify the heretofore cumbersome machinery. The grits affect to be alarmed over the prospects of a general election before another session, and are warning their friends to get ready.

The Opposition held a caucus last week at which, it is said, very few French-Canadian members attended. Otherwise it was perfectly harmonious. Messrs. Casey and Forbes have not yet put in an appearance in the House.
