Montague Angler Narrowly Escapes As Boat Capsizes

MONTAGUE — Jack Yorston of Montague narrowly escaped drowning last evening while fishing.

The accident occurred about 8 p.m. at the Cardigan causeway when Yorston who had been fishing from a small boat which had been towed to the location and anchored, apparently drifted into deep water.

On realizing his predicament the man called for help and was heard by fisherman Joe Vuozzo of Montague. Vuozzo threw one of his oars to the drifting boat and in attempting to reach the oar, Yorston fell into the water.

Two other fishermen in the vicinity heard the distress calls and hastened to the scene. By that time, Mr. Vuozzo had secured a rope around Yorston's wrist and was holding him up in the water.

Rescuers were unable to lift Mr. Yorston who was dressed with heavy clothing and rubber boots into the boat and with considerable difficulty they managed to keep him afloat while they towed him to shore.

Mr. Yorston is reported to be suffering no ill effects from his narrow escape.

Fishermen assisting Mr. Vuozzo were John White of Montague and Billy Conohan of Cardigan.

HARDY MONTAGUE SCOUTS

The pioneering spirit of our forefathers is not dead yet, living proof of it being seen in the above photo taken just following last week's surprise blizzard. This campsite above Knox's Dam, Montague, was the headquarters of a group of enterprising scouts carrying out badge work. The original group of three, Steve Clarkson, 13; Jack Beck, 14; and Sandy Beck, 12, left Montague by boat and after rowing up river as far as possible, they portaged their equipment to the campsite where they set up two small tents. Their first night was spent in a spring blizzard with a temperature of 29 degrees. They were joined on Wednesday by Scouts Fraser Inman and George Inman who remained with them until camp broke on Friday.

Montague Girl Guides, Brownies Have U.S. Visitor

MONTAGUE — The Girl Guides and Brownies of Montague along with their leaders and mothers met at the assembly hall of the Elementary School Sunday to receive Mrs. F.M. Latham of Maryland. Mrs. Latham who is representing the U.S. Girl Scouts and is making the final call of her Canadian goodwill tour, gave an interesting description of American Girl Scouts as compared with Canadian Girl Guides and Brownies. She also taught several new songs during her brief visit.

She was introduced by Commissioner Charlotte Gordon.

The guides were directed by Mrs. Eric Duvar and Mrs. Marven Johnston and the Brownies were under the leadership of Mrs. George Inman.

A sing-song was led by Mrs. George Warner with Mrs. Lloyd Fraser as piano accompanist.

At the close of the proceedings, Mrs. A.E. Ings on behalf of the group presented Mrs. Latham with an appropriate memento of the occasion.

CHANGED AREA The historic royal forest area in Gloucestershire, England, still known as the Forest of Dean, now is noted for coal and iron mines.
