Wholesale arrests and transportations continued to be made. A railway train arrived at Paris on the 22d, from Nimes, bringing 337 political prisoners from that department alone.—They were all condemned to transportation.—M. de Girardin had been allowed to return to Paris to attend to some private affairs. Fresh arrests have been made at Cashel, where a formidable opposition had been discovered. Many persons have been ordered to quit France, without any cause assigned.

The relations of Switzerland with France are still unsettled. The refugees, it seems, were expelled by the Genevese government, and not by the federal council. The federal government contemplate active measures against the authorities of Geneva, and a military occupation of the canton by the federal troops has been threatened. It is, however, thought no such steps will be taken.

The Hungarian committee had left Vienna in bad temper. The cabinet had refused to make concessions, and the Hungarian nobles, it is said, will never support a government whose professed aim is to reduce Hungary to a level with a common Austrian province.

Parliamentary proceedings in'esting. The New Militia Bill was introduced into the House of Commons by Mr. Walpole—providing for a force of 80,000 strong—50,000 to be raised the first year by voluntary enlistment—time of service four or five years. Estimated cost—first year, £400,000—yearly expense £250,000. Lord Palmerston gave the measure his support. Lord John Russell though not opposing it, was disposed to find fault with some of its provisions. The Bill was read a first time.

An attempt to induce the Commons to place British Commercial Marine so as to be available for the defence of the country, was ineffectual. Lord John Russell, on the assurance of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that it was the wish and the intention of ministers to meet the new Parliament without delay—signified, as Leader of the Opposition, that no further obstruction would be granted to the naval and military supplies and the Militia Bill.

HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, APRIL 27, 1852.

As we anticipated, the Couriers met with impediments in bringing the Mail due last week. They left this side on Saturday the 17th, and landed at Cape Tormentine early in the day, finding open and clear water for 5 miles. The return Mail did not get to the Cape before Monday evening the 19th, in consequence of the bad travelling. It blew hard on Tuesday and Wednesday, and they could not proceed. On Thursday they made an attempt to cross, but the weather being foggy, and much drift ice in the way, was obliged to return. On Friday, the Gulf was in the same state. On Saturday they started again, and in pressing through miles of drift and drift ice, effected a landing that night at 12 o'clock, and arrived in Town on Sunday. We have, by this conveyance, the English Mail of the 3d April.

The Mail due last night, has not yet arrived.

We understand the Rose will make her first trip on Tuesday the 4th May, if the Strait is clear of Ice.

In endeavouring to bring to a close the Debates, we have been obliged to omit several Communications prepared for this days paper. There are two or three subjects reported, which have been handed to us, but they will have to stand over until we can find room for their insertion, as we must now attend to the desire of our general readers.

Mr. Whelan would do well to remember, that scurrility is not reasoning, nor assertion proof, and that when he states, that he fully answered Mr. Palmer's arguments, in his speech before the Committee of the House, he is as much deceived as he was to the sufficiency of his own qualification.

Mr. Palmer's line of argument was temperate, well chosen, and logically adhered to, and fully proved that which we have also advocated, and successfully, viz.—That Edward Whelan, in swearing that he possessed a freehold qualification, on the 5th of March, 1850, took a false oath, and that, whether he was perjured or not, depends on his knowledge or ignorance of what constitutes a freehold.

The case is now fully before the Public, and we are satisfied, for the present, to rest here, perfectly certain that the verdict must be in our favor.

Losers, however, have leave to speak, and Mr. Whelan is the loser.

WITH respect to Mr. Whelan's charges, as Queen's Printer, we shall use our own good pleasure in respect thereof, and shall choose for ourselves both the time and mode of entering upon the proof, for which we are fully prepared. His accounts having gone through the hands of the Auditors of Public Accounts, avails nothing, the items had already been allowed by the Executive Council, and the Auditors had nothing to do with the rate of charging. We pledge ourselves, in the near time, to make good our assertion to the letter, when we can get these Accounts fully in our possession.

TO THE EDITOR OF HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

SIR;

In the report of the continuation of the Debate on the Education Bill which appeares in your paper of the 20th April, I am represented as giving utterance to an opinion respecting the character of the notorious Robespierre, so totally at variance with the views I entertained, that I am under the necessity of troubling you with an explanation, which you will greatly oblige me by inserting in your next number.

In making my extracts from Bulwer's "England and the English," I came across a note at the foot of one of the pages respecting Robespierre, and used it, not for the purpose of holding up such a character as an example to imitate; but as an argument which went to prove, that even that man, steeped as he was in crime, was compelled to acknowledge the existence and superintendence of a Supreme Being.

The allusion was commented on by the Hon. Mr. Hensley, in terms of just abhorrence of the character of Robespierre, in which I fully concur.

The words attributed to me—"that Robespierre was a better man than was imagined—never fell from my lips, and not being willing to leave such an erroneous impression on the public mind, I have thought it right to make, through the medium of your widely circulated paper, my disavowal of any such sentiment.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN M. HOLL.

Kenwith, 22d April, 1852.

☞ The Reporter to the Legislative Council, begs to correct an error which appears to have crept into the report on the Debate on the Education Bill. The expression relative to Robespierre "he was not so bad a man as you may have imagined" given as from the Hon. Mr. Holl, should be read as from Hon. Mr. Swabey, and the sentence "You are certainly the first person I have ever heard speak in his praise," as from the latter gentleman, should be read as from the Hon. Mr. Hensley.

[The following Address, signed by a large number of individuals, has been handed us for publication.—]

TO ALLAN MACDOUGALL, AND PETER EMERY ESQUIRES; GENTLEMEN;

We regret to hear that the Inhabitants of this District are deprived of the services of your valuable services, as Commissners for the recovery of Small Debts, which you have performed judiciously, independently, and with sincere integrity, to your own credit, and to the protection and security of such persons, as have had occasion to come before you in the Judicial capacity. We lament to observe, recently, that the tribunal of justice is changed into political and electioneering speculations, with a total disregard to qualified merit of education, integrity, and experience, to warrant public security and confidence. Partial and injudicious appointments of inexperienced and incompetent partisans of the present government, to adjudicate in a cause between one of their own adherents, and a person of a different opinion, will, in conformity with the system in which they have obtained their office, be led to give corrupt and partial judgments, as a matter of expedience, and thereby deprive the first landowners in the District of the benefits of competent Judicial Court, to risk the adjustment of accounts or disputes, that may arise among them.

In leaving your official duty for the present, as Commissioners for the Recovery of Small Debts, we most respectfully tender you the assurance of our confidence in your judgment and ability, and of our earnest desire of seeing you, at no very distant day, elevated to more lucrative and honorable offices.

Belfast, April 13, 1852.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A FRIEND IN BOSTON.

The winter has been unusually severe, and very boisterous, causing several shipwrecks and loss of life. Money is and has been very light, which operates against produce, and makes bread-stuffs very low, as well as all kinds of provisions. Politics are rife and on the advance. The wire-pullers are busy at Washington, and President-making has taken precedence of more important measures. Great efforts are being made to commence the Presidential campaign, for all the paraphernal a of stumpers are to be immediately in support of their respective candidates. The Union Whig-party, (now in power), are likely to rally for their favorite soldier, Gen. Scott, whose views are favorable to the support of the compromise measures, (on slavery) as well as to his opposition to Kossuth's doctrine of non-intervention; his chance is good. The young Democracy or navel-contting party are canvassing the country in support of their young progressive Leader, Judge Douglas of Illinois, who has taken a bold stand in favour of Kossuth and non-intervention, he is the first candidate from the "Far West," and considering the high estimation in which he is held as a Senator of forty, by the young men of the whole country, and the fact that the Democrats have majorities throughout the Union, he will be a formidable candidate. The "Colonial Reciprocity," will undoubtedly be modified this Session. There appears to be a fraternal feeling throughout the whole country in favour of its modification, and the fishermen of Cape Cod have petitioned Congress in favor of "Free Trade" in the Fore Navigation, and especially, that the restrictions on the fishing ground, and the total abolition of the light money shall be a sine qua non, if any alteration may take place; in the meantime, sufficient discrimination will be observed in the articles to be admitted, to prevent European manufacturers from entering into clandestine trade via the Colonies.

The Treasurer of the Church of England Ladies' Clothing Society for the poor, acknowledges the receipt of £1 10 0 from John Morris and Theophilus Desbrisay, Esqrs., being three fines imposed by them on three young men for a violation of the Sabbath.
