Rosemary Cash Becomes Bride Of Robert McSweeney

The beautiful St. Dunstan's Church, Toronto, was the setting for a delightful wedding on the morning of June 6th, when Rev. Father Gaida united in marriage Frances Rosemary Cash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Cash, Emerald, to Mr. Robert McSweeney son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. McSweeney of Ireland.

The bride given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in white net and nylon over tulle. Her headpiece was a white fingertip illusion veil. She carried a bouquet of Red Roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Theresa Trainor, a long time friend of the bride, wore white nylon over turquoise with a white headpiece. She carried a bouquet of white Baby mums and pink carnations.

The best man, was Mr. Pat Ryan, a long time friend of bride and groom.

The brides mother, wore blue lace over blue tulle with a lace jacket and a fur neckpiece, with white accessories. Her corsage was Red Roses. The Groom's Sister, Mrs. Kenneth Cobbett wore a white dress with black and white duster with white accessories. Her corsage was white carnations.

Ushering the guests to the seats of honour were Mr. Frank Banks, friend of groom, and Mr. Hilary Maynagh, brother-in-law, of the bride.

Following the marriage a reception for forty guests was held at the Frontenac Arms Hotel where telegrams were read from the brides sisters, Elaine in Vancouver, Mrs. Alban Smith, Calgary, and Mrs. Francis Croken, Emerald. Also from the grooms parents and relatives and friends in Ireland and Miss Coleen White of Montreal.

For a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, Detroit, Mich., and Grand Bend, Ont., the bride wore a lime green sheath dress with matching duster and white accessories. Her corsage was of White Carnations.

On their return the bride and groom will reside in Toronto where the groom is employed as a painter and decorator.

Out-of-town guests included, the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. John V. Cash, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Maynagh and daughters Maureen and Marilyn of Montreal and Miss Lillian Murphy, Cambridge, Miss.

MARY HAWORTH Widow, 22, Heartsick With Love For Married Man

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a widow, age 22. I thought when I lost my husband that the world had ended; that I would never be able to look at another man; much less fall in love.

Well, I was wrong. I have fallen in love again; but he's married. And he doesn't love me. Yet I can't stop thinking of him for a minute.

He came to see me quite often, but he had only good intentions. He knew how lonely and hurt I had been; and so young for such a sorrow; and he thought he was doing me a favor by keeping me company.

My family said it isn't really love I feel; that I've just been too lonely and he came along and won my gratitude. But that's not so. He isn't the first man to come along. I've had other chances but didn't want them.

MAN SHIES OFF

Why will a person so deeply hurt find new ways of being hurt again, before the old wound has healed? I know this was an impossible love the moment it started; but how do you keep it from happening? You can't tell your heart whom to love; and who not.

Well, I knew if I told him how I felt he would clear out. So I told him, and he was astonished, and felt terribly that he was a problem instead of a help to me. And as I anticipated, he stopped coming over. Now I am really miserable.

I am sick of life and its bad breaks. I'd like to end it all. I've never asked advice before. No matter how hard things were, I'd figure the next move on my own. But this time it's just too much for me. Please help me. B.B. WOLF IN DISGUISE

Dear B.B.: Buck up. You haven't lost anything worth keeping, when this wolf in sheep's clothing took to his heels.

Perhaps you didn't mean it that way, but your declaration of love was a challenge to him to face facts and state his intentions. And inasmuch as he hadn't any, except to enjoy your company—as a variation to his home life—he just scrambled.

You are much too kind in your estimate of his behavior in hanging around until he got scared off.

I am reminded of the sentiments of a wonderfully wise old missionary doctor, as regards any married man's emotional entanglements with a lonely single (or widowed) woman.

The doctor says it is always unfair to blame the woman in such a case. He says the married man with a wife in the picture has no defence whatever for misleading the heart of some unaccompanied female. He knows he is cheating, right and left; taking conscious selfish advantage of her emotional deprivation. So don't be deceived by his air of innocence or his guise of simple friendliness. He has no real concern for the lonely one's welfare.

FINDING FULFILLMENT

However, with your experience you didn't blunder into this trap blindfolded, of course. You wanted his company, even knowing he was married, and took the risk of playing with fire. Possibly you figured that, given enough time, you could interest him in changing partners. Perhaps you counted on force of habit to strengthen your bid for him; and wishfully discounted the greater force of habit that anchors him in the marriage he has.

It is true indeed, that there comes a point of no return in the matter of being in love, when you can't throw the switch against caring. Once you've arrived at, or passed, that point in time, the only constructive accommodation—in case of ver-bolen love—is to accept the unchangeable as part of the fabric of your existence, and then learn to ignore it, in an absentminded way.

By this method, a rich variety of seemingly "hopeless" loves may be more or less comfortably digested in the course of an ample life, while you find fulfillment through closer attachments. M.H.

Pretty Wedding Solemnized At Bloomfield, P.E.I.

St. Anthony's Church, Bloomfield, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on July 28th at 9 a.m. when the Reverend Clarence Pitre united in marriage Marie Joan Audrey Gallant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorice Gallant, Duvar, and Reginald Paul Pineau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Urban Pineau of Bloomfield.

Reverend Pierre Arsenault, Mr. Felix Arsenault and Avin Gallant sang appropriate wedding hymns during the Nuptial Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white silk organza over tulle, with bodice of lace, the slim fitted bodice featured a scalloped sabbina neckline and long fitted sleeves, the skirt was bouffant. A matching bandeau with sequin and pearl trim held her shoulder length veil. She carried a white prayer book topped with a corsage of pink roses.

Miss Marie Pineau, sister of the groom, maid of honor, was gowned in white and pink flowered nylon, with a pink headpiece and accessories and carried a

MacPhail - Howatt Vows Pledged At Crapaud

St. Johns Anglican Church, Crapaud was the scene of a very pretty wedding on July 3rd, when Joan Adelaide youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Howatt, Crapaud, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Douglas Scott, only son of Mrs. Walter and the late Walter MacPhail, Argyle Shore.

Mrs. Vernon MacLeod as organist accompanied the choir in appropriate hymns during the ceremony. The church was artistically decorated with summer flowers. The guest pews were marked with lace doilies centred with red rosebuds.

Ushering the guests were Mr. Douglas Howatt, brother of the bride and Edward MacPhail, cousin of the groom.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was lovely in pink nylon over net and tulle dress with an embossed organza overskirt. A dainty pink headpiece held her shoulder length veil and she carried a white lace covered prayer book with a cascade of pink and white feathered carnations.

June Leard friend of the bride as bridesmaid was attired in pale yellow nylon over net and tulle with matching headpiece. She carried a nosegay of pink and white feathered carnations. Wendy Harvey, niece of the bride, as flower girl was daintily dressed in blue nylon over tulle and white accessories and carried a white lace basket of red rosebuds.

Mr. Leonard MacPhail, cousin of the groom, was best man.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. S. H. Minton.

A reception was held in the Church centre for forty guests. The bride's table was centred with a three tiered cake flanked by white tapers and roses.

Rev. D. S. H. Minton, proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom fittingly responded.

Miss Gail MacPhail was in charge of the guest book.

Mrs. Howatt chose for her daughter's wedding a blue lace over-tulle dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of pink feathered carnations.

Mrs. MacPhail mother of the groom, was attired in navy blue with white accessories and wore a corsage of white feathered carnations.

Following the reception the bridal party left on a honeymoon trip to Nova Scotia. The bride chose for her travelling costume a pale green dress with matching hat and beige accessories. Her corsage was yellow roses.

Prior to her wedding, Joan was tendered a shower at the home of Mrs. Leslie MacNevin, Argyle Shore, where she taught school, and in Crapaud Hall by the community. She was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. MacPhail will reside in Argyle Shore.

SEEK NEW FOOD SOURCES

SOUTHAMPTON, England (Reuters)—A world-wide survey of the nutritive value of plants not now used as food was advocated Friday by L. H. Neil Jenkins of Durham University. He told a summer school group that of several hundred thousand varieties of plants, fewer than 100 are used on a large scale as food sources. And only 50 out of 2,000,000 species of animals made a significant contribution to human food. He said the main obstacle to new food sources is conservatism about diet.
