It Depends on Circumstances.

(Toronto News.)

What a set of unprogressive, hide-bound hypocrites the Grit organists are! They can always find an excuse for doing something bad or omitting to do something good by a species of adroit argumentative thimble-rigging between the leaders, the organs, and the party.

For instance.

The independence question comes up, and Mr. Blake is requested, as a leader, to say what he thinks about it. Straightway the organs cry out, "Oh, that would be very improper. It isn't Mr. Blake's business to lay down any policy for the party. Mr.
Blake owes it to his followers to keep his mouth shut."

So the Independence discussion within the party is choked off.

Then the question of forcing J. D. Edgar upon a reluctant constituency arises, and the same organs, to quiet matters down, say, "Oh, Mr. Blake wishes this thing done.
He is leader of the Reform party, his wishes in such a matter should be law, and any man who says otherwise is a Tory and a traitor."

From which we infer that when it suits Mr. Blake to have his say, he will have it, and when it doesn't, he will be restrained by a sense of the delicacy of his position.

Parisian Libraries.

In 1878 there were only nine municipal libraries in Paris; next year there will be thirty-eight. The first of them was formed in 1862 by a mutual relief society in the Faubourg St. Denis. Two more were opened in 1865 and 1867, respectively. At present there are twenty-six of them and the municipal council has voted the money for creating twenty more. The total number of volumes 100,247, the average annual increase so far being good. Of the books, some are allowed to be taken home; others are read only on the premises. Nearly 60,000 volumes were lent last year; as each volume is read by about five persons, it is calculated that (with those who read in the reading-rooms) there were from 500,000 to 600,- 000 readers. Of the volumes about three-fifths were novels but the demand for works of that class has not been so great in proportion as for music and musical literature.
The latter shows an increase of 68 per cent.
For books in foreign languages the increase last year was 61 per cent.; for historical works, 43 per cent.; while for novels the demand showed an increase of only 38 per cent. An enlargement in the supply of books of travel and science has been recommended. Besides the municipal libraries of Paris, there are fourteen others, which are popular in the strict sense of the term, having been founded by private enterprise and kept up by subscription.
