

Big Bear.

Big Bear is a plain Cree, a native of the Carlton region, and about 60 years of age. He is of a short stature, thin, and old looking. His appearance is anything but impressive. He speaks with a loud voice, but is short of breath, and is not an orator by any means. About twenty years ago he removed from Carlton to Pitt, and became the head man of a small number of his relatives who resided at Pitt, numbering about twelve tents, or perhaps twenty men. He was never recognized as a chief until after twenty six was made, and he removed to Cypress Hills. At Fort Pitt he was frequently employed by the Hudson Bay Co., as a buffalo hunter, and had the reputation of being a good Indian. His band, however, were generally rascals, the greatest being his nephew, named Little Poplar. During a famine which occurred thirteen years ago, caused by the buffalo leaving for the south and the Indians being unable to follow them, they began to kill the Hudson Bay cattle, but were prevented from continuing the practice through the efforts of Big Bear. He and his band seldom engaged in war, but they were notorious for stealing horses from the Blackfeet. He was once thought to be rather cowardly. On one occasion four Crees were attacked opposite Fort Pitt by a large band of Blackfeet, while Big Bear was in the fort with eight men. He refused to go to their assistance. The four Crees however, succeeded in escaping. On several other occasions his actions showed that his courage was not of the highest order. At the making of treaty No. 6, in 1875, Big Bear refused to accept the terms offered to and accepted by the first. He wanted to see first how the promises made by the government would be carried out. Pending a decision he removed to Cypress Hills, where he remained for six or seven years, gathering a large number of discontented spirits around him each year. Between frequent spats with the Blackfeet and incursions to the States his men became much more expert than formerly in the art of war, and he came to be looked upon as a big chief, equal in importance to Pia-a-Pot. At last circumstances, in the shape of a few buffalo and many United States troops, coupled with profuse promises from the Indian department, induced Big Bear to return to his old stamping ground near Pitt some two years ago. Although he took treaty money, he refused to go on a reserve, always having an excuse ready. During the winter before last he freighted one trip from Pitt to Edmonton. He always kept moving about, and fomented discontent wherever he went, which the management of the Indian department made easy, especially among the Fort Pitt Indians, who never had a good reputation, and of whom he seems to have secured control.

Wesley's Advice.

It is said that John Wesley was once walking with a brother, who related to him his troubles, saying he did not know what he should do. They were at that moment passing a stone fence to a meadow over which a cow was looking. "Do you know," asked Wesley, "why the cow looks over that wall?" "No," replied the one in trouble. "I will tell you," said Wesley, "because she cannot look through it; and that is what you must do with your troubles; look over and above them."

A Unique Costume.

It is related that a living French poet, bidden to a fancy ball, presented himself in that which appeared to the vulgar eye to be the ordinary evening attire of civilized society. Monsieur Coppée's appearance was demurred to at the door. But he assumed the expression of a comedian, made an effective face, and declared that he was by no means a gentleman in evening dress, but tout bonnement a garçon d'restaurant—and they let him in.

Oko Jumbo.

Whether Oko Jumbo personally devours human flesh is not definitely stated, but it is notorious that his people do. In view of his visit to England, a British philosopher takes occasion to say that "there are no more desperate and disgusting savages in the world than the subjects of Oko Jumbo. We may feel sure he will be greeted and fetted, courted and lectured, by a crowd of old women, male and female."
