A Windsor Man Who is Known Everywhere.

He Speaks Very Highly of Scott's Sarsaparilla.

Used It Last Spring as a Family Tonic and Intends to Use It This Year Also—It is Wholesome, Invigorating, Strengthening He Declares.

One of the best-known men in Ontario is Mr. John H. McConnell, of Windsor. He is connected with most of the leading secret societies, and benevolent societies, has organized lodges in every city, town and hamlet in the province, and is probably personally acquainted with a greater number of people than any other single individual in her Majesty's Dominion of Canada.

Ask almost anyone you meet, "Who is J. H. McConnell, of Windsor?" Nine out of every ten will be able to answer the question. The opinion of such a prominent man, therefore, is valuable. Mr. McConnell usually prefers to talk about political or society events. But he can say a good word frequently for any method or any medicine that he thinks deserving of it.

When in Toronto last Monday (March 2nd, 1896) he very outspokenly expressed himself as follows to the manufacturers of Scott's Sarsaparilla: "Scott's Sarsaparilla is a tonic I use in my family. It is one of the best spring blood purifiers I know of. I used it last spring and intend to use it this year. It is very strengthening, drives away nervousness, builds up the system, and is a good all-around, wholesome medicine."

It is pleasant to take, the children like it, and it is giving it to them we have had no sickness of any kind in our house. All this I can truthfully say, and when I say a thing I mean what I say, and I don't care who knows it."

Anybody who wishes to secure Mr. McConnell's opinion can get it by writing him at Windsor.

THE MYSTERY OF POLLY LOPP.

BY OPIE READ.

CHAPTER II.—CONTINUED. The girl passed on without replying, and the old man joined Polly in the summer house. He sat down on the bench near her, fanning himself with his straw hat, and it was some time before he spoke.

"Holler'n it was last night," he said. "Holler'n it was night before last, I think," the woman replied.

"I guess you're right. You always raise me one; must have played poker in your time."

"Well, I were to play poker I might not always raise; I might sometimes simply call."

"I believe you have played; but that ain't what I want to talk about. See this?" He touched his shirt collar and it was fastened with a horseshoe nail. "Been a threepenny to get it for a long time and got it just now in my pocket."

"That ain't nothing to laugh at. Will you let me tell you something?"

"Yes, I am going to sit here a few moments longer."

"Don't exactly like the way you put it, but I reckon it's all right." He was silent, fumbling with the nail at his collar, and called you Polly. "You'll drive me to the ground, thrash his hands into his pockets and leaned back against the vine-covered lattice work. And in the twilight she could see the white face was hard-set and his countenance eager.

"What were you going to tell me?" she asked.

"Something powerful important to both of us, but you'll have to let me get it in my own round-about way. By this time the whole town is discussing the fact that three men, strange men at that, came here and called you Polly. And maybe in the morning they will tell you that you better get out. Then what?"

"I'll tell them to go to a place not on the school map, but well located in spiritual geography."

"I guess that's the way to talk to avoid strength, but it won't do to tell 'em no such a thing. There is a way by which the whole affair may be made smooth."

"It is smooth enough now," she replied.

"I'll be dinged if it is! It's as rough as a cow's back, but we can smooth it. Now here," he leaned toward her. "I say now here, you marry me and the whole affair will be settled, for you won't dare to talk about the wife of the man of this town. Hah, what do you say? You see that I've got about the best place around here, and I was down the creek yesterday evening and that corn is going to turn out monstrous, hah! You can get right down to the store and trade out ten dollars' worth at a snort, hah! The Nell can help you right along in the printing office, and it ain't no good you going to the store. Your face ain't got that soft look that it ought to have, but we can't expect everything of a woman from the city, you know. Oh, I know I'm jittin' old, but I bet a dollar that I can jump over that bean pole right yander."

"I'll take the bet," she replied.

"Hah, what's that? You don't want to see me jumpin' round in the garden path at night like a tomcat do you? Wouldn't like to have it said that you married a man simply because he could jump over a pole, would you? Look, don't you see I have got this here hand-mill just to please you? Look how I am putting myself out."

"But you haven't told me that you love me, I know I'm jittin' old, but I bet a dollar that I can jump over that bean pole right yander."

church notices and abstracts or sermons should be printed, called a determined halt.

How much longer the affair might have been discussed, and into what hands and executive corners of afflicted virtue it might have been dragged, it would be difficult to say, but the arising of a new topic put it all aside. And the topic was one of real excitement. Not far away in the hills lived a gang of desperate men, the Ales Peters boys, they were called. It was known, or at least it was suspected, that they had robbed railway trains. Determined efforts on the part of the law had failed to bring them to justice. It was believed that they had formed an alliance with the Dalton gang, but this their leader denied, and offered, on condition of a pardon for himself and friends, to help in the hunt for them. This offer was accepted. The Daltons were killed or so badly crippled that nothing was to be feared from them. Well, after this Dalton gang fought off the temptation to rob trains, but could

"TOLLY, WHAT HAVE YOU TOLD FATHER?" "Don't go into the house just yet; wait here a moment. What have you told father?" she repeated.

Polly stood there, laughing at her, but she grew more nervous. "It is nothing to laugh at," she said. "You told me, or that is you agreed, that we should never marry and that we should live together."

"Don't be worried; I was only joking with him."

"But, Polly, that was no way to joke with an old man. He is one of the best men in the world, and all that, but you don't want to marry even the best man."

"It will work out all right, Nell; don't worry over it."

"But how can it work out all right?" "Wait, and you shall see."

"Yes, and that's what you said about those contracts, and that isn't it working out all right yet. I have tried so hard to understand you, Polly, but sometimes I just can't. Why do you wish to mystify me? Haven't I always been frank with you?"

"Yes, too frank, perhaps."

"That's what I sometimes think myself. But here comes father. He is one of the best men in the world, and all that, but you don't want to marry even the best man."

BREAKFAST—SUPPER. "By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to illness. WORK OF A SINGLE DAY. Some startling Facts Concerning the Action of the Heart.

Do people recognize the immense work transacted by the heart in a single day? It equals that of lifting one hundred and fifty pounds to a height of thirty-three hundred feet. And yet, knowingly, or through ignorance, nine out of ten people abuse this hardest worked organ of the body. There is nothing remarkable in the fact that heart failure and apoplexy are among the most prevalent diseases of the day. Happily a remedy is found in Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, which gives relief instantly. This medicine should be kept in every house, so that on the slightest indication of heart trouble it may be taken. It has saved, by its prompt and efficient work the lives of thousands of Canadians.

The doctor advised the use of Chase's Ointment, and since using the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured." (Sgd.) MAXWELL JOHNSON, 112 Anne St., Toronto.

The old stoic philosophers recognized suicide as the logical outcome of this system, and if statistics prove anything, they have plenty of followers still. On a recent Sunday in Chicago no less than seven people died by their own hand, and in the United States more than 4000 commit suicide in the course of a twelve-month.
