Society Urges French Ignore Queen's Visit QUEBEC (CP)—The leaders of the Quiet Revolution in Quebec have asked all French-speaking Canadians to abstain from attending the ceremonies connected with the Queen's visit to Quebec Oct. 10.

The organization asked all French-Canadian groups to avoid any demonstrations for or against the royal visit and above all to avoid any act of violence. The society, which claims 100,000 members, is devoted to persuading French-Canadian and Roman Catholic interests.

In a prepared statement, Georges Fortin, president of the organization, said that it is regrettable a royal visit was scheduled at a time when the situation in Quebec is being reviewed. "Even if the Queen had changed her mind and decided not to come to Quebec, it would not have lowered her prestige," Mr. Fortin said.

On the contrary she would have demonstrated that she understands the situation in Quebec in an informed political sense, letting a chief of state.

The federation felt that the Queen's visit was a political statement.

Another new study group is expected to be set up to study biological warfare, Prof. Ivan Malek, vice-president of the Czechoslovak Academy of Science, told a press conference.

Sources said the next conference will likely be held in Venice in the spring.
