3 Pronged Probe Planned On Curb In Hate Literature

By RONALD LABEL OTTAWA (CP)—A post office tribunal, a group of MPs and a committee of experts soon will launch a three-pronged probe into a problem that has defied solution so far—how to curtail the increasing flow of hate propaganda.

The federal government decided on the three-pronged investigation after the collapse of preliminary efforts to prosecute the "hate-mongers" on the basis of present laws or to draft suitable new legislation to stop them.

The Commons external affairs committee will meet in private shortly to plan a series of public hearings on the thorny problem of legislating against organized bigotry between ethnic, racial and religious groups.

The problem has attracted increasing public attention in the past year with a sharp upsurge in mail distribution of anti-Semitic and anti-Negro pamphlets.

Most of the material is believed to originate with extreme right-wing organizations in the United States which use a few Canadian agents.

John R. Matheson, Liberal MP for Leeds and chairman of the 35-member external affairs committee, said in an interview Thursday his group hopes to call 12 to 15 top-calibre witnesses over the next few weeks.

The second inquiry will be undertaken by a small committee of legal experts appointed by Justice Minister Pavreau. The committee is expected to work informally and recommend new legislation to the minister early next February.

Mr. Justice Paton Wells of the Ontario Court of Appeal will preside, assisted by Rodriguez Bedard, associate deputy minister of Justice, and G. Douglas McIntyre, a lawyer with the revenue department.

The board will hear an appeal from the National States Rights Party, Birmingham, Ala., which was denied the use of Canadian mails in July under an interim order by Postmaster-General Jack Nicholson.

Experimental Fishing Craft Is Planned

LOCKPORT, N.S. (CP) - R. W. Widig of Lockport, former member of the House of Commons, announced he will build a $14,000 fishing boat to conduct experiments of the province's southeast coast next spring to test a new fishing method.

He said he had his proposed fishing craft will be about 46 feet long and of standard Cape Breton design. The boat will be common among inshore fishing fleets along Nova Scotia's coast, according to Widig.

Widig said the craft, he built by a Shubenacadie firm, will be equipped with a record sounder, automatic depth sounder, and will require only one man aboard.

Mr. Widig said the craft, he built by a Shubenacadie firm, will be equipped with a record sounder, automatic depth sounder, and will require only one man aboard.

Always remembered by daughter Agnes, son-in-law Holte and grandchildren.
