The Stars Say --

For Tomorrow

MAKE UP your mind to be receptive to the ideas of others this day. You may have definite plans of your own but if you will listen to friends and associates, you might be surprised at their practical suggestions for solving your problems. Spend as much time as possible in relaxation and, if you can be alone for a period, give yourself over to quiet contemplation and meditation. Frivolous interests will give you no pleasure this day, but quiet pursuits, such as showing hospitality to old friends and loved ones, will be exceptionally rewarding.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, you will find, during the period immediately ahead, that personal initiative will be the most important factor in your gains. Do not, however, hesitate to accept help and encouragement from others. Every thing you plan or do now can lead to greater achievement during 1954, so do not let down as soon as matters are running smoothly. Imaginative and creative ideas are under excellent aspects during the next six months and you may be offered an exciting opportunity for travel in the late Spring. Real estate and legal matters are under beneficent vibrations throughout October and, should you take part in any sort of community work, it may lead to unexpected honors. A child born on this day will be intuitive, intellectually inclined and endowed with a great sense of justice.

Day After Tomorrow

COOPERATIVE efforts rather than a complacent attitude will gain headway on this day. But, when it comes to an opportunity for displaying your own abilities and talents, do not be backward. In other words, while it will pay you to emphasize harmonious relationships, do not relegate your own personality to a position in the background.

For the Birthday

If Monday is your birthday, the improved business and financial conditions indicated in your horoscope for the next six months should do much to ease the tensions of the past. Many situations will be clarified for the past and the rewards for the past endeavor should be more than satisfactory. Domestic and family matters are under excellent auspices, and you should be entering right now upon a period of great social activity. Your ability as a leader may be put to the test early in 1954, but do not cringe at the prospect. Show that you can handle extra responsibility, for the increased prestige and possible financial gains therefrom will be exceptionally rewarding. A child born on this day will be affectionate, sincere and extremely conscientious.

Morning Smile

It was very wet in the north of Scotland, and a party staying at a small inn there were afraid that their holiday would be spoiled. Day after day the rain fell heavily and to add to their annoyance the old-fashioned barometer hanging in the hall read "Fair" all the time. One of the holiday-makers called the attention of the innkeeper to the fact. "Don't you think," he asked, "that there's something the matter with your glass?" "No, no," replied the Scotman. "she's a good and powerful glass. But she's no moved by trifles."

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

The highlight of this week? There were so many, we find it difficult to choose. Would it be the surprise and charm of the "Autumn artistry" we found displayed about? The beautiful shades being spread in birch and maple and other delicious trees? Would it be, we wonder — and then we know that from a purely feminine point of view it was the fact that in an outing to the city with Jeanie we had our respective tresses 'done' in the mode of the times. We may say that though it was an operation long over-due, delayed by the seeding, the weeding, the barn-building, the haying and the harvest, it was not one in which James shared our enthusiasm over the prospect. Indifferently too, he regarded the results, and "If it suits you, Ellen, it suits me," he commented and, with some elaboration on the subject he went on to talk of more important things.

That was a day of some indecision for our farmers, for despite the heavy showers of early morning, the sun and a harvesters' wind blessed the afternoon hours. But if, as he said, "we might have saved a load or two of stooks toward evening," that, in our absence a Rob's, had to await, with certain resignation on James' part, a new day.

We suppose some farmwives of that sisterhood which James respects as "good-doing ones" would have some regrets over such a suspension in their harvesting. Certainly not the be-speckled one who returned our reflected glance from the wide windows of those city streets we walked or others we met about. There was the one who "just had

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I clean pearls and amber beads? A. Rub olive oil on them with a piece of flannel or chamois. Go easy on the amount of oil and the pressure of your rubbing.

Q. How can I get the odor out of a garment after cleaning it with turpentine? A. By steaming the garment in the bathroom while the hot shower is running, and then airing it outdoors for at least one full day.

Q. How can I remove egg stains from materials? A. Always use cold water first, as hot water may set the stain. Soak washables a good long time in clear cold water, then launder with warm soapy water. On non-washables, let the stain dry until you can scrape most of it off with a dull knife. The remains can be removed with cleaning fluid.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN-

Maternal Interference

Wife Finds That Her Mother's Too Eager To Give Advice

DEAR MISS DIX: My mother is a wonderful woman who is happily married, with three grown children. So successful has she been in rearing her family that she is frequently asked for advice from relatives and friends. Now, she has become accustomed to handing out counsel whether it's requested or not.

This is my problem. My husband and I live in the same town with my parents, and I am the only one of their children so close to them. Our baby is the only grandchild in the family. Mother has formed a tendency to tell me how to take care of the baby, how to run the house, how to handle my husband, etc. I feel very resentful and am afraid if it continues, we'll run into serious trouble. As yet there has been no strife, no misunderstandings, in fact. Outwardly our whole family relationship is fine. Inside, however, I am seething and feel that I'll break out any day. How can I avoid the trouble I fear? SUE M.

A DESIRE TO BE HELPFUL

ANSWER: You are apparently more concerned with adjusting your own temperament to accepting mother's advice, or at least listening to it, than you are with changing her—and I think you have the right angle. Your mother's attitude does not seem to be one of officiousness, or intrusion, but rather of a sincere desire to help, born of her own outstanding success in maintaining a well-ordered home. There can be no doubt that at least some of her ideas could be adapted by you, and your resentment should be conquered with the frank admission (to yourself at least) that you can profit by her suggestions.

Right now you are convinced that all you need in the world is your husband and baby. This spirit of complete self-sufficiency will last for awhile, as it does with all young married couples, but the time will come when you realize that a family unit, to be completely successful, must spread out to embrace other people, other opinions, than those held within your own four walls.

At present you need no outside help, advice, or companionship. This is the usual status of a family of three in good circumstances. Suppose illness enters your home, or another baby or two follow the present cherub in short order? Don't you think that a loving family standing by would be welcome? Your own description of your mother belies her status as an interloper; try to accept her on a more friendly basis. Also

Varnish Stains

To remove varnish from clothing, sponge and rub with turpentine.

Prevent Yellowing

To prevent white clothes that are to be packed away from becoming yellow, dip a sheet in bluing water (use enough bluing to make the sheet blue), then spread the sheet over the top of the chest in which the clothes are packed.

Shoe Polisher

Lemon juice makes a splendid substitute for shoe polish. A few drops sprinkled on either black or brown shoes and rubbed briskly will give them an excellent polish.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it proper for the bride and bridegroom to linger in front of the church after the ceremony in order to receive congratulations? A. No; they should not linger at the church at all, but should proceed at once to the place where the breakfast or reception is to be held.

Q. Is it customary for a house guest to bring his hostess some kind of gift? A. This is often done, and it is a nice thing to do—but it is not absolutely necessary. The bread-and-butter letter is really all that is expected and required.

Q. May one properly send a typewritten letter of condolence? A. No. More sympathy and more sincerity are expressed in a letter which is written by hand.

Lady Baden-Powell — World Youth Leader

She is truly the Chief Guide of the World! Take a recent day in her life at Hampton Court, London, and see why the title fits.

It was a summer morning and Her Ladyship had just returned from a week-end camp. At the door of her apartment was a young Mexican Scout who had arrived to pay her a visit. Later, two of whom visited the Island in 1935 with herself and Lord B. P. bell rang and two Guides from Finland dropped in to pay respects to their Chief. "And," said Lady Baden-Powell happily, "before that day had ended, a Guide from Italy and two Scouts from Australia came trooping in!"

Over the past four months, including Coronation time, Lady Baden-Powell has had the amazing total of 400 visitors from all over the world to her "Grace and Favor" apartment (given to her by the late King George as a tribute to the widow of the World Chief Scout), she told The Guardian in an interview yesterday.

The well-loved Englishwoman leaves Charlottetown this morning for New Brunswick following a brief visit here. Probably P. E. I. has never had a visitor whose work is so well known on the Island—"Baden-Powell" is practically an Island name!

Lady Baden-Powell said the Guide and Scout movements were started to give parents a system of self-training for their children so that they do not need to be told what to do—rather to do what they know is right. She felt that the training of children, especially girls, is a grave problem, because it is important today that their best character be created.

"For a mother to lead her full life, she must run a happy

That Body Of Yours By James W. Barton, M.D. MENTAL HEALTH — EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS. "In the 1840's, when a New England schoolteacher, began her crusade to give the 'lunatics,' as they were then known, out of the jails and into hospitals where they could be cared for humanely, the victims were chained to the floors of unheated cells and often left naked because they were thought to be insensible to heat or cold. They were beaten, exiled from all human contact, and treated as evil or devilled creatures. Today, the poor houses and jails have almost entirely given way to hospitals for the mentally ill. The word 'lunatic' has practically disappeared. The gates to the mental hospitals are left open and the traffic is two ways." I am quoting from the booklet "Mental Health is Everybody's Business" prepared for Public Affairs Pamphlet Number 196m by Katherine Glover. This pamphlet has been written with the cooperation of...
