THE WEEK AT SDU

Term Ends, Holidays Come, Thoughts Turn To Future

By CHARLEY McMILLAN

It was a term not unlike any other term. Starting in late September, the school year ushered in a record shattering 550 students in the university years, and for the next three months, student activities carried on as usual. There were the good times, the rough times, both intermingled with a goal of success in all things.

Naturally football carried the load of interest as far as sports were concerned. The starting early part of the term, Coach Ed Hilton was forced to undertake the biggest rebuilding job of his five year career at St. Dunstan's and ended up with 17 Islanders among the ranks. Although the record showed only a win and a tie in seven games, the team showed signs of promise for next season. The fact that not only players was a Senior should insure more continuity in personnel next year.

The most important single event of the first term was the incorporation of the Students Union. This legal procedure became necessary with the ownership and operation of the Coffee Shop. However, preceding the incorporation, the Students Union went through a drastic structural change, a change that has increased its proven a success. There has been an ever increasing amount of criticism levied at the council, but there are also indications that many of the faults will be alleviated early in January when the council meets again.

One could, I suppose, enumerate a lengthy list of events that took place in the last three months, but it would be either boring or already well known. Most of the students have gone home for the Christmas recess after a rough and exhilarating set of final examinations. These three-hour exams are most exhausting both for the students who write them and the professors who

BRISTOL

The joy of Christmas was dimmed in some homes here with deaths in the families. Richard Dick Alward, died on Thursday of Christmas week. He was a life long resident of this vicinity and Mrs. Catherine Walsh, widow of the late Peter Walsh, a life long resident died Christmas day in the Charlottetown Hospital. Mrs. Matilda Eldershaw, widow of the late Art Eldershaw, died Christmas day at the Sacred Heart Home after a long illness. All three funerals were held in the Little Flower Church, Morell, where High Mass was sung by their pastor Father P.P. Butler, and all were buried in the church cemetery near by.

Cecil Eldershaw arrived home from Halifax, along with his sister Mary for their father's funeral. Cecil after a long absence from the village. Two other brothers residing in England regretted they were unable to come home.

One year ago at Christmas this vicinity was shocked when Patrick R. Sinnott died from a heart attack following his attendance at mass. While members of his family were en route home for the happy season that turned into a holiday of sorrow.

The Christmas crib in memory of the late Father Rooney, P.P. here many years ago was erected in the Little Flower Church again this year and also in memory of another pastor, Father McKenna, who died following a heart attack at Christmas following his Christmas masses, so this is the third Christmas sadness has come to this vicinity at this happy season.

Often times now we read about fiddle champions and old time fiddle contests. We still have here two of the best fiddlers this Island ever knew fifty years ago. Annes McEachern, and James Jim Conahan, are still hall and hearty and can tell of their battles with the bow. Nearly half a century ago they were known as the best old time fiddlers and played for dances every place. An effort is being made to bring these two old time fiddlers to the TV screen some time this winter with some of those old times of yesteryears. Annes is residing in the city now but Jim is at the old home here.
