HAMILTON, July 25.—The Templar, the prohibition newspaper of this city, has a severe article on the recent meeting of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, Among other things it says: "The divisions were interdicted by the more practical and concrete operations in the field of political action, and the more patient opposition of the party prohibitionists to any effort likely to injure their party. The paper charges that the Ontario Alliance for ten or twelve years, has been controlled and manipulated by a few Prohibition Liberals, and an opposition of Independent Prohibitionists has been maintained. At every convention the Independent have criticized the executive party, charging them with inactivity, and who making the Alliance a buffer between the temperance people and the Ontario Government. Year after year prominent Prohibitionists have become disgusted and dropped out, sometimes in greater activity and convert them to independence. Very few Conservatives ever take part in the Alliance, as it has long been looked upon by them as a Liberal institution. For more than two years the executive had called no meeting of the Ontario Alliance, and for nearly three years no meeting of the Ontario Alliance. The constitution of each body demands an annual meeting. The Ontario Alliance was without a President since the death of W. H. Howland, in December, 1893. The failure of the Executive to call regular meetings, some do not hesitate to say, was due to a fear that provision would be made to push the political action policy of the Alliance to the injury of the party in the Dominion elections, and this would seem to be justified by the calling of the convention the moment the elections were over. The political platform of the Alliance distinctly laid down that Prohibitionists should support for Parliament only candidates who were known, avowed and reliable Prohibitionists, and to be actively opposed to the Executive. It was clear that the Ontario Executive made no honest or serious effort to put that platform to the test. It is pointed out that in asking the candidate if he would favor a plebiscite, every Liberal candidate should answer that question in the affirmative, because it was the policy of his party, and he would be elected to the Alliance, but every candidate who did not believe in the plebiscite would be obliged to answer that question in the negative, and consequently would be classified as not wholly favorable to the Alliance, even if he were an out-and-out Prohibitionist. Regarding the Toronto meeting the paper says: "The leaders of the executive anticipated criticism, and they prepared for it. Nearly a thousand people were registered as in attendance, and only a few more than four hundred rally certificates were presented, showing that a big majority of the convention were rallied in Toronto. Not only was the party prejudice worked up, but it was made to do a local feeling was aroused by the story that there was to be a Hamilton attack on the Executive. Everything that ingenuity, snavery and skill could do to place the arrangements at a disadvantage was done, and many thoroughly independent, impartial and honest delegates were influenced to support the re-election of Hon. Geo. W. Ross, who were anything but satisfied with the situation. Indeed, Mr. Ross' splendid record of temperance work and strong personality was all that enabled the Executive to snatch a verdict even in their own packed convention."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A Singular Telegraph Blockade. English scientists have found an explanation of a remarkable so-called salt storm, which visited Utah last January, and stopped the working of the telegraph lines over a large portion of the state. A rain storm came up, which extended for seventy miles, in fact, far into Wyoming. The rain consisted of salt water or brine. The clothing of persons exposed to the shower had, when dry, the appearance of having been sprinkled with white-wash. The windows in many stores and residences were thickly encrusted with salt deposit, and it was calculated that in one district twenty-seven tons of sodium were distributed over nine square miles. When the rain ceased and the sun came out everything, as fast as it dried, turned a whitish color, and was found to be thickly covered with salt. The principal inconvenience of this strange phenomenon, however, arose out of the derangement it caused in the telegraph service. In Weber Canyon, where later the salt storm turned into snow, the greatest trouble was met with. During the day, when the sun came out, the wires worked clear and without temporary break, while at night, when it turned cold, communication was absolutely cut off. It was supposed that the snow, having melted during the day and again frozen at night, had created a moisture, which, in conjunction with the salt deposit underneath, had affected the insulation of the wires. After several unsuccessful attempts to remove the cause of the trouble, an engine with a pump and a long hose was sent over the line, and the deposit was thoroughly washed off the poles and insulators for a distance of forty miles. It was suggested at the time, as an explanation of the facts, that salt had been raised in vapor over Great Salt Lake and carried by the wind and deposited across the country for many miles to the eastward. This, of course, could not have happened, as salt could not be raised in vapor. It seems likely, however, that the white residue may have had the appearance of salt without being actually salt. It is now suggested by an English scientific journal that a more reasonable explanation of the phenomenon would be that fine white dust in the region about the lake may have been carried into the upper regions by the wind, and, after traversing some miles, brought to earth again owing to the condensation of the vapor surrounding them.

ITS FAMOUS SPREADING.

A New Remedy in General Use in Manitoba and the Northwest. WASHINGTON, July 27.—The effects of the regular wave of sickness which sweeps over this portion of the Dominion in the spring are noticeable in the increasing amounts of the "druggist's" sales. There has been quite a run on the kidney remedy now so well known under the name of Dodd's Kidney Pills. The recovery from Bright's disease of Mr. Arthur C. Gley, of Somerset, through the use of an account of which appeared in the papers, gave considerable impetus to the sale, and the remedy has become indispensable in many Manitoba households, its fame having penetrated into the remotest parts of the province and North West Territories.

HOLIDAYS OF THE ANCIENTS.

It Was Fashionable to Leave the Towns at Certain Seasons.

Leaving town at a certain season is by no means a modern practice, for abundant evidence of periodical holidays among the ancients is found. The wealthy had their town mansions and also their country villas, to which they regularly resorted at certain seasons of the year. From Egyptian monuments it is gathered that the leading members of the aristocracy had large estates, in which their mansions stood, and upon these were kept horses, cattle, poultry, and a large number of servants. Cicero and his contemporaries not only dwelt in Rome, but at certain seasons left the city and resided in their villas on the shores of the Mediterranean. The games at Olympia, Delos, and elsewhere served as periodical holidays, and many left their town residences and took up their abode in the neighborhood where the contests might be within easy reach. Horace shows how he and Heliodorus visited Cocceius' villa at Candium; but Cocceius did not always reside there. He visited Candium at certain seasons. He also tells that the Eastern Mediterranean was a favorite touring ground, especially for Roman nobility, who visited Greece as Americans visit Europe, and because it was fashionable to stay in Rome at certain times, just as it is now to stay "in town."

Household Hints.

A cake of magnesia and a clothes brush are a frugal woman's best friends. After brushing a dusty gown and then with magnesia rubbing both sides of any soiled spots, it should be hung away for a day or two and then brushed again. The spots will be found to have disappeared.

Dip a cloth moistened with sweet oil into pulverized rottenstone and rub your harness with it. The polish them with dry rottenstone and a piece of dry flannel. When brass utensils are not in use thoroughly clean them with rottenstone and oil, wrap up tight in papers and keep in a dry place.

Water bottles and decanters may be cleaned and stained inside of them removed by shot, lead or potato peelings and a little water. Wine bottles are best cleaned with charcoal, broken in small pieces, and a little powdered charcoal left in bottles for a day or two will effectually remove any unpleasant odor.

Light colored evening gloves may be dry cleaned easily at home in a very short time. The gloves may be put on the hands or on wooden dummy hands, then rubbed all over with fine fuller's earth and next with a dry flannel and finally shaken to get rid of the powder. Wash a little French chalk with sifted bran and rub the gloves with this after the former process.

Bake cottage pudding in gem or pop-over pans, thus giving to each person an individual pudding. This way not only adds to the attractiveness of this simple but popular dish, but conserves its lightness, if, as often happens, a careful hostess attempts to cut the pudding with a steel knife when hot from the oven. The usual sauce accompanies the individual serving.

Inexpensive and most nutritious soups for growing children who only have a short time at home for the noonday lunch are made from kidney beans, black beans, white beans, peas and celery, potatoes and tomatoes in the form of cream soups. Meat soups containing vegetables may also be used once or twice a week. Serve with this soup bread or rolls made of whole wheat, preferably the latter, as they have more crust than the bread. Potatoes baked in their skins should have a piece cut off the ends before baking in order that the steam may escape. Prepared in this way they are light and dry when eaten. When boiled they may be prepared in the same way, and the skin removed just before serving to each individual. Potatoes are unquestionably drier and finer of flavor when boiled in this way than when pared before cooking. The utmost care is necessary to prevent their being cold when eaten, as they grow cold rapidly after their skins are removed, and of all things potatoes should be hot in whatever form they are served, unless it be in a cold salad.

Medical Value of Ice. To the already multitudinous methods of utilizing ice in therapeutical practice, Dr. Barthold Brae, a German physician, is now credited with its successful use for inducing respiration by placing the article in contact with the lips, the method consisting in rubbing slowly with a piece of ice the mucous membrane of the lips and the mouth, the rhythm of the motion corresponding as much as possible to that of normal respiration. In the cases observed by Dr. Brae the result was a return of respiration, very strong at first, but with the continued application of the ice becoming very regular, quiet and deep. The ice used in this way is said, moreover, to have a general sedative effect, and its quieting action has also been employed with success in the treatment of cerebral troubles. A Vienna physician is said to have obtained equally favorable results with this treatment in cases of apoplexy.

"Why Some Succeed"

The shrewd advertiser is the one who knows how, when and where to advertise. The merchants who advertise in THE EXAMINER are not the ones to make mistakes, as you can see for yourself. But you may get the benefit of their experience by watching how, when and where they advertise. Some papers pay advertisers, some do not, many do not. Only a few pay, and they can be picked out by the large amount of advertising they do.

People find just the help they so much need, in Hood's Sarsaparilla. It furnishes the desired strength by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and thus builds up the nerves, tones the stomach and regulates the whole system. Read this: "I want to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health ran down, and I had the grip. After that my heart and nervous system were badly affected, so that I could not do my own work. Our physician gave me some help, but did not cure. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I soon I could do all my own housework. I have taken
