

HUNTER RIVER W. M. S.

Mrs. George Smith entertained the members of the Auxiliary of the W.M.S. at her home on June 3. The theme was the second Assembly of the World Council of Churches which is to meet in Evanston, Illinois, U.S.A., August, 1954.

The president opened the meeting with "Take Time to be Holy" and readings from the Missionary Monthly in unison. This was followed by Scripture reading and hymn "O For a Faith That will Not Shrink." The study of the Book of Exodus was carried out with several of the members taking part.

The supply secretary reported the sale of clothing was ready to send. It was decided that Mrs.

MacLeod, Mrs. Cousins and Mrs. Bowman form a committee to look after a special service for the W.M.S. Mrs. G. Smith, Mrs. Seller and Mrs. Spence were appointed to the lunch for the Baby Band picnic.

Mrs. Fred Smith invited the members to her home for the next meeting which will be held on September 2. Study is to be the "Book of Leviticus" and the roll call word is "World." Lunch committee for September will be Mrs. Ira Rackham, Mrs. Lepage and Mrs. Jackie Bernard. The hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" and the Lord's Prayer closed the meeting. Lunch was then served by the committee in charge, assisted by the hostess, followed by a social hour.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

No tribe of humans has ever been found that does not possess a well-organized language; no community that does not know the use of fire and of weapons with which to defend themselves.

It is curious to note that Carus divides the human race into "people of the day, night and dawn." In our school days we were taught that there is a black, red, yellow, white and brown race. But does not the book of Genesis tell us "God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He them." This being the case, then we all belong to one group, or one race, no matter whether we speak different languages or have different colored skins.

By an Act of Parliament in 1745 barbers lost the right to perform operation and to dissect human beings.

And this Act calls to mind a strange story of a scene that took place at Tyburn, England and another equally strange, in the Barbours Hall. The year was 1740. The body of a notorious criminal had just been cut from the gallows. Silently the crowds melt away, satisfied that justice had been done.

In scene two we see the body of the criminal being carried into the barber's hall for dissection. But just as these crude surgeons were preparing their knives for the gruesome task before them, the corpse showed signs of life. First: there was a slight flickering of one eyelid, then feeble breath and lo and behold the "dead" man's heart began to beat again.

At this point the dissecting knives were laid aside and the barber surgeons looked over the body for some time. Finally the man began to breathe evenly and it became obvious that the hangman had been cheated. The dead man was alive.

The pailor gradually went out of his face as the blood began coursing through his veins, and, at length, his eyes opened!

What a situation for the criminal and the barbers! The criminal in that second when his brain began to function normally no doubt had a flash back of the gallows, the shouting, angry mob. The anatomists, too, must have felt strange queer. They had brought back to life a man whom by order of the law, should not be completely dissected. And what about the hangman? Would he still be able to collect his niggardly fee? Would the criminal still belong to the state or had the act of hanging set him free in the eyes of humanity?

What would society now do under similar circumstances.

But the barber-surgeons, sitting in the dissecting room with the man who was officially dead decided that his return to life must be kept secret. They reasoned that the fellow had paid the price for his crime, and that they were honour-bound to stand by him in his hour of need. So they clothed and fed and nursed him back to normalcy, and one dark night, they gave him money, wished him all the luck in the world, and shipped him to Germany.

The man who had been hanged and saved from a gruesome end, departed gratefully.

We should like to know if he left a mother to mourn him, a wife, or children who thought him dead. But details are scarce.

However our amazing story does not end here. The years rolled by. Then one day there arrived at the Barber Surgeon's Hall a person whose dress and bearing indicated one of wealth. He turned out to be the very man who had been hanged 13 years earlier, the man who barely escaped the dissecting knives of his fellow men. Under a new name the fellow had made good and was a rich and influential merchant in his adopted country.

There are few such stories to be found in the world. It stands a testimony of the quirks of fate, a proof that while there is life there is hope, a reminder to us that no matter how low a human being may fall he still is strong enough to turn over the new leaf if only society would give him a second chance.

It is sometimes claimed that the phenomenon of mixture of peoples in the world is unique, that a similar mingling has never occurred before in the world's history, and that as a result of two world wars the peoples of earth are destined to become what some writers choose to term a "mongrel" race in a sense that has never been seen before.

Should a third world war be loosed upon the world this process of mixture would increase measurably, for the two last wars have shown us that soldiers stationed for long periods in a foreign country take unto themselves wives who are natives of that country. Today we have many Canadian soldiers married to Chinese, Japanese, German and Russian girls to name a few countries from which these men have chosen wives. Should this process of mixture continue (and we have no reason to believe that it will not) the time may come when we may dismiss the assumption of the existence of a pure type in any part of Europe or America.

When, furthermore, we are unable to discover any proof of the superiority of one race over another, more and more intermixtures will take place. Too, it seems obvious that intermixture, as soon as the social barriers have been removed, must go ahead at a rapid rate so that in say 100 years from now, in the bulk of our population, very few pure descendants of the present immigration will be found.

Plusville And Vicinity

—School pals of Miss Linda Gallant are sorry to learn she is confined to her home through illness. All hope to see her back to school again in the near future.

The June meeting of the St. Anne Club was held at the home of Mrs. Johnnie Gallant. The lucky winner of the free tickets to St. Annes, Quebec, were won by Mrs. William Gallant and Mrs. Phillip Gallant. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter E. Gallant. A delicious lunch was then served by the hostess.

Miss Angela Corcoran recently spent a few days in Mill River.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rooney, Mill River, were recent visitors to Plusville and Roseville.

Miss Yvonne Blanchard, returned to her home in Brocton after spending two weeks visiting in Toronto.

Mr. Leo Gallant, Plusville, was a business visitor to Moncton on June 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton McIsaac, Hebron, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corcoran, B.B.

River W. I. is hostess. Miss Grace Easter, vice-president and Mrs. Justin MacLellan, secretary-treasurer, will be the delegates to the district convention, as well as to the provincial convention.

The school committee supplied dustbins, and money for year-end prizes donated, as well as a treat, for the school closing! The ways and means committee have tickets on sale for a blanket. More concentrated effort and work will be done as soon as the school closes on the fencing lay-out etc. of the school grounds.

From One Cook to Another

Seasons come and go — bringing favorite recipes for cool drinks or hot soups . . . for summer-cottage meals, or cold-weather parties. But the recipes we really love, are ones adaptable to all seasons. Those are the kind of recipes I give you here. They all call for Carnation Evaporated Milk, of course. For Carnation does such grand things for foods. It's specially heat-refined for extra-smooth consistency, extra-rich flavor. And because it's concentrated to double-richness, Carnation can be used undiluted, to give miracle-cooking-results that just aren't possible with any other form of milk. Here's a recipe where Carnation's special advantages shine!

CHICKEN 'N' VEGETABLE LOAF
(Makes 4 servings)

3 cups diced cooked chicken
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1/2 cup soda biscuit crumbs
1 egg
1 cup diced cooked carrots
1 cup well-drained cooked peas
1 cup undiluted Carnation Evaporated Milk

Combine all ingredients until thoroughly blended. Line loaf pan (9 x 5 x 3 inches) with heavy wax paper. Spread loaf mixture in pan and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 45 minutes. Serve hot.

For spring-like freshness — serve Chicken 'n' Vegetable Loaf with fresh or frozen asparagus. For a bright touch for cold-weather meals, serve with a cream sauce to which diced pimiento and green pepper have been added.

FOR USE AS TOPPING: After sweetening to taste, add flavoring chosen from the following: Grated orange or lemon rind; vanilla; a hint of peppermint essence. Use on short-cakes, jelly desserts, fruit, puddings.

FOR USE IN RECIPES: Whip Carnation as above, including the lemon juice and light sweetening. Use in scrumptious charlotte russes, bavarian creams, fancy jellied salads, home-made ice cream.

SEASON IN, SEASON OUT

... there's one recipe that every woman treasures — the recipe for good coffee. Would you like yours to taste better? "Cream" it with Carnation Evaporated Milk. It's easy as that! Carnation gives coffee a richer, more satisfying flavor . . . smoother consistency . . . wonderful body. Yet it costs only half as much as lightest cream!

IF EVER THERE WAS A YEAR-ROUND FAVORITE, it's something dressed up with a whipped topping — or a dessert that calls for whipped cream. So, high on your list of all-season favorites, is sure

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JAMES L. WADE
Mrs. Helen Schurman Wade, 65, died on Thursday afternoon, June 10th, in the North Adams Hospital, Mass., U. S. A. where she had been a patient for one week.

Mrs. Wade, widow of James L. Wade, who died in 1949, was born in Central Bedouque, Prince Edward Island, daughter of the late Albert and Phoebe Schurman. She went to North Adams in 1914 and three years later graduated from the Nurses' Training School at the North Adams Hospital. She was married in 1918. She leaves to mourn a brother and two sisters living in Prince Edward Island. They are Howard Schurman, Central Bedouque, Mrs. Albert E. Baker, Charlottetown, and Mrs. John Lewis, Freetown. She is also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held at the Simmon's Funeral Home on June 12, with Rev. Ronald K. Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was in Southview Cemetery, North Adams, Mass.
