HAPPINESS AS WELL AS RESPONSIBILITIES OF MOTHERS.

To be the mother of rosy, rollicking children, what happier fate could one desire? And yet there are those who out-Herod Herod in the determination to evade the responsibilities of child rearing. "How I envy your children!" said a kind-hearted Christian woman to me, "but, oh, I never could such a responsibility!"

Responsibility! Fiddlesticks! What a flimsy covering for selfishness in most cases. There is plenty of responsibility, but the thought is made too great a burden—too great a bugbear. When a mother has done all she can for her children—by example, precept and prayer—may she not leave the result to an All Wise Father, who knoweth and doeth all things well?

Aged mothers will tell you that at no time of life did they enjoy life so well as when their children were about their knees. We who are enjoying that period, with all the labor it entails, are inclined to be skeptical.

May they not be right? Best they are in many respects. Best for influence; best for opportunities; best for planting of good seed for the reaping by and by. Ah! we mothers have not far to look for our mission. The work is here. Then let us enter into it with heartfelt earnestness, but with none of the feeling of i-can't-shoulder-the-responsibility.

For the first ten years of a child's life mamma is everything to it, and in those years must most of the so-called training be done. For this I do not feel myself capable of giving any rules. My own shortcomings are manifold, but there is one thing I would like to say—send the children to bed happy. This may seem a small thing in itself, but its results for good are infinite.

At this hour the noisy play is hushed and they are ready to talk over the doings of the day reflectively; tender thoughts creep in unbidden and the plastic mind retains easily any impressions. See to it then that no attendant fills their little heads with ghost stories or other like recitals. If possible, attend them yourself, and if there are little ones, lie down beside them, and with their clinging arms about your neck, tell them tender, loving stories until their eyes close in sleep; you will feel well repaid and can go about your work with a lighter heart.

There are mothers and mothers, loving, sympathetic, spiritual mothers, and others who are mere physical mothers, and outside the ranks are those who dare not come in because of the responsibility.

A childless wife! Speak the words sadly; they know not what they miss. To be one with the Creator in the God given power of motherhood, to feel that we are objects of his special care, is it not sufficient? Let us then be glad of the responsibility.—Housekeeper.

FREDERICK THE NOBLE IN NORWAY.

During the summer of 1873, when the noble Hohenzollern was Crown Prince of Germany, he travelled incognito in the Norseland, with but two or three attendants. One Saturday evening he found himself in a remote mountain valley, where the inn was so dirty that he preferred to spend the night under the open sky. It began to rain, however, and the prince, upon inquiry, learned that the parson of the valley sometimes took pity on travellers. To the parson accordingly he went, explained his predicament, and was most cordially received.

"This is very fortunate, indeed," exclaimed the guileless gentleman; "for my daughters have been trying to teach themselves German out of 'Otto,' but they have no one to correct their pronunciation. My own German is very rusty, as you observe, so that I cannot be of much use to them. Now, perhaps you would be so kind as to talk with them and give them some hints as to pronunciation?"

The prince declared that he would be most happy to talk with the young ladies and afford them every assistance in his power. He sat down with his aide-de-camp at the parson's simple table, conversed in the most affable manner with all, and charmed them by his natural geniality and the interest he displayed in their rural affairs. The next morning he declared his intention to continue his journey; but the whole family united in urging him to remain over until Monday. He accompanied the three girls, with their mother, to church, participated in the worship, and spent the afternoon tramping with them in the woods and correcting their pronunciation. On Monday morning he took his leave, much to the regret of the parson and his girls, who had never before entertained so delightful a guest. And, moreover, they had obviously profited by his instruction. They now talked German with a glibness which astonished their parents. No persuasions availed, however, to detain the unknown gentleman; and they heard nothing more about him until a few weeks before Christmas, when a box arrived at the custom-house in Christiania (duty prepaid) addressed to our parson. It was promptly forwarded to him, and proved to contain a splendid piece of silver (if I remember rightly, a soup-tureen) and a letter which caused paroxysms of excitement in the parsonage. The writer thanked the clergyman for his hospitality (for which he had refused compensation), and begged him to accept this present as a souvenir of his guest, Frederick, Crown Prince of the German Empire. The letter also expressed the hope that the young ladies were continuing to make progress in German.—H. H. Boyesen in February Lippincott's.

Deafness Caused by Cattarrh.

Capt. S. F. Belyea, of Greenwich, King's Co., N. B., suffered from an aggravated form of catarrh which had in his case induced serious deafness, closed the nasal passages so that he could scarcely breath and caused him great pain and trouble. He tried many remedies, but all failed until he got Hawker's Cattarrh Cure, three 25 cent packages of which effected a cure. "I can honestly say" says capt. Belyea "that I am practically well, and I take great pleasure in recommending Hawker's Catarrh Cure to those who may be suffering from this very troublesome disease."

ON THE FRONTIER.

Two giant minds have stamped the world,
Instructors of our times and them to be;
Toiling to bring mankind to harmony,
Smoke from each study on the frontier curled.
They searched more for finality than growth,
Not for the footprint but the thought of God.
They worshiped wisdom in the chastening rod
That scars transgressors, and yet both
Felt beauty as she moves through cycles vast,
And knew the hopefulness that cheers us here
In our promotion toward the perfect sphere:
They loved the future and esteemed the past.
Revere their lives, O man, for never again
Will this old world contain two lovelier men!

A Ruined Wedding Cake.

An English gentleman residing in Calcutta brought an action against a firm of Paris pastry cooks and confectioners under rather interesting circumstances. The plaintiff was about to be married and ordered what has been called a phenomenal wedding cake from the defendants. A sum of $120 was paid down for the cake on delivery. The colossal and expensive article of confectionary was packed by the plaintiff's order, and he took it with him to Calcutta. On opening the case containing the cake when he arrived in India, the Englishman found that he had literally nothing but a shapeless mass of crumbs. The splendid gateau had been hopelessly bruised and broken during the voyage.

An action was then brought against the Paris firm for a sum of $135, which included, besides the price paid for the cake, the cost of packing and transport. The defendants maintained before the Paris tribunal of commerce that they had no more responsibility after they had delivered over the cake to the person who ordered it. It was true that they recommended a packer, but that expert acted under the orders of another individual, who had been selected by the plaintiff to superintend the operation. The tribunal decided in favor of the defendants.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Two Convincing Reasons.

Lord Peterborough, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne, was very frolicsome, and one day seeing from his carriage a dancing master with pearl colored stockings lightly stepping over the broad stones and picking his way in extremely dirty weather he alighted and ran after him with drawn sword in order to drive him into the mud, but into which he of course followed himself.

This nobleman was once taken for the Duke of Marlborough and was mobbed in consequence. The duke was then in disgrace with the people, and Lord Peterborough was about to be roughly handled. Turning to them, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can convince you by two reasons that I am not the Duke of Marlborough. In the first place, I have only 5 guineas in my pocket, and in the second they are heartily at your service."—Sala's Journal.

Reproved by the Prince.

Not long ago the Prince of Wales was one of a house party, his host being a well known peer. After dinner the royal guest, the host and the other male visitors repaired to the billiard room. On a table at the side were two or three boxes of cigars, and the prince was helping himself to one, when an ambitious millionaire approached him, and taking from his pocket a cigar case held it out to the prince, saying, "I think, sir, you will find these better."

"Mr. ——," replied the prince, "if a man's dinner is good enough for me, his cigars are good enough for me."

The millionaire was unexpectedly called away to town next morning on business.—Detroit Free Press.

Newspaper Advertising.

How much money is spent annually in newspaper advertising? Probably any estimate less than $200,000,000 would fall short of the facts. Some single firms have spent as much as $500,000 in a year. To put out such enormous sums requires a large machinery in and out of the advertisers' offices, and the business—or the art, as you may choose to consider it—commands the services of men of a high order of ability.—John Irving Romer's Lecture.

The Bones Were All There.

An auctioneer in a New England city recently sold a horse at auction for 50 cents. The horse was so bony that the auctioneer said, by way of explanation, that "they (the bones) were exhibited intentionally, for the purpose of showing that none had been extracted."—Profitable Advertising.

Hopeless.

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I thought I would try it. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less, the inflammation of the bladder had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel hungry. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to
