A Song of the Sea.

The hardy mariner whose cheek has been tanned by the sultry breath of the simoon, who (like Mr. Henry Mutch) has beheld the great sea serpentt in his native wilds, or who perhaps has scudded for days before the fury of a snowstorm, is often prone to depreciate the dangers of the fresh-water sailor. The following beautiful poem shows, however, that the lake navigator is exposed to no lesser perils than his brother of the boundless ocean. While in some respects it may be inferior to the more celebrated sea poems, it is second to none in force of expression, in vivid description, and the logical conclusion of its moral; while it loses nothing in dramatic effect from being written in the beautiful patois of Longfellow's (and Rice's) heroine, the language of the Canadian French:—

'Twas one dark night on Lac St. Pierre,
De wind was "blow," "blow," "blow,"
When the crew of de wood skow Jule La Plant
Got scare and run below.

For de wind she's blow like a hurricane,
Bimeby she's blow some more,
When de skow buss up on Lac St. Pierre,
One-half mile from de shore.

De captain she's walk on de front deck,
She's walk on de hind deck, too,
She's call de crew from up de hole,
She call de cook also.

De cook he's name was Rossa,
He's come from Moreal,
Was chambermaid on a lumber barge
On dat big Lachind canal.

De wind she's blow from nor, eass, wess,
De sou wind she's blow too,
When Rossa say, "Oh! captain,
Whatever shall I do?"

De captain she's throw de hank,
But still dat skow she drift,
For de crew he can't pass on dat shore
Because he lose dat skiff.

De night was dark, like one black cat,
De waves run high and fass,
When de captain take poor Rossa
And lash her to the mass.

When de captain put on the life preserve
And he jump into de Lac,
And he say "Good-by, my Rosa, dear,
I go down for your sake."

Next morning, very hearly,
About half-past two, three, four,
De captan, cook and wood skow
Lay corpses on dat shore.

For de wind he's blow like hurricane,
Pretty soon she blow some more,
For dat skow buss up on Lac St. Pierre,
One-half mile from de shore.

MORAL.

Now, all good wood skow sailor mens,
Take warning by dat storm,
And go and marry one nice French girl,
And live on one good farm.

Den de wind she may blow like hurricane,
And 'spose she blow some more,
You shan't be drowned on Lac St. Pierre,
So long you stop on shore.

He Defied the Deity.

A BOASTFUL PHYSICIAN'S HUMILIATIONS AND BEREAVEMENT.

(Middletown Argus.)

A gentleman residing in Middletown, who was visiting in Sullivan County last week, was attracted by eight headstones in a little grass-grown cemetery near Fallsburgh, all of which stood in a row and were exactly alike. He got out of his wagon to look at them, and found that they were all children of a well-known physician, and that all were grown when stricken down, and that the dates on the headstones showed that the first one died Nov. 22, 1861, and the other seven between that date and Dec. 15 following, or that the entire family of eight children had died within eight weeks.

When speaking of the matter to friends that day, he was told the history of the case, which is regarded in that neighborhood as a visitation of Providence in punishment for defiance of the Deity.

The story as told is that in 1861 there was a scourge of diphtheria in that neighborhood, and the physician was kept busy treating patients suffering from that disease. He was very successful, and gained such confidence in his skill that he began to boast that he could cure any case, and went so far that he "defied God Almighty to produce a case of diphtheria he could not cure." In less than a week his youngest child was seized with the disease, and although he exercised his skill to the utmost, having not only professional pride but a father's love to urge him to do his best, his boy grew worse and died. One after another his children sickened and died, until all were gone, and laid side by side in the little graveyard near Fallsburgh. But one child was left, a married daughter, but in a few weeks she, too, was stricken down and became a victim to the dread disease.

FOR WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN,

Where the digestive powers are feeble and the ordinary food does not seem to nourish the child, this acts both as food and medicine, giving flesh and strength at once, and is almost as palatable as milk. Take no other.

An Ottawa despatch says that French-Canadian explorers in search of mineral deposits on the French River, found human bones last week representing over two hundred bodies. They are the remains of a tribe of Iroquois Indians who, about two hundred years ago, went up Lake Ontario on a hunting expedition and were met at the head of French River and massacred in a midnight attack by a tribe of Huron Indians.

Thunderbolt on the Rampage.

On the 13th inst., the State Grain Inspector's branch office at Central avenue and Sixteenth street, narrowly escaped being destroyed by a thunderbolt during a rain storm. The bolt struck a telegraph pole which stood against the wall of the building, ran in on the switch board of the telegraph instruments and went out of the window on the other side of the office, taking the glass, sash and all with it. A messenger boy, who was sitting on a table, was thrown ten or twelve feet through the open door and knocked insensible, and the telegraph operator, whose hand was on the key at the time, had his right arm paralyzed and was partially stunned. The telegraph apparatus was melted, the table thrown across the room and all of the occupants of the apartment were partially deafened by the shock. The bolt looked like a round ball of fire about as large as a man's head. It shot as far as the table and disappeared with a flash, leaving the crowd standing bolt upright with their limbs rigid and their ears ringing painfully. The office took fire, but the flames were speedily extinguished.

A Curious Blunder.

Writing about Canada's products at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, a writer for the Westminster Review falls into a curious blunder in this statement: "There is a grand trophy of furs and the wild animals from which the hunters and trappers of the Northwest have so long supplied the European markets, and which still form the largest item in the exports of the Dominion, amounting to upwards of £5,000,000." The reviewer has assumed that the item "animals and their produce," which appears in the classification of the exports of Canada, refers exclusively to the wild animals of the Northwest, an error betraying very crude knowledge of the character of our trade. Fully nine-tenths of the exports of animals and their produce consist of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, meats, dairy produce, etc., and a very insignificant portion of the furs and wild animals with which the reviewer imagines the Northwest yet to abound.

Revolt in San Domingo.

A letter published at Boston from San Domingo gives the first details of a revolution that broke out there attending the late presidential elections. The letter is dated San Domingo City, 8th, and reads as follows:—The presidential election took place here on the 26th of June, General Ulysses Hereaux being elected by a large majority. General Mayer, the defeated candidate, left for Savager two days after the election and raised an army of 3,000 men and attacked Santiago and was defeated by the Government forces. General Hereaux, the president-elect, left here to-day, leading 5,000 men to reinforce General Duperon at Santiago. Gen. Scaraman left Port-au-Plat on the north side with 5,000 men and will join Hereaux, making an army of 10,000 men. This is the strongest insurrection that has started in San Domingo for some years, but the revolt will be of short life, as Hereaux is a brave man and understands how best to deal with such difficulties.

A Love-sick Youth (?)

An Ottawa despatch says: James Armstrong, aged 83, who had been crossed in love and whose attentions had been rejected by a spinster seventy-six years of age, committed suicide on the 15th, at Lourc, about ten miles from Ottawa, by hanging himself to a beam in the barn of a neighbor where he was found twenty minutes after life had become extinct. He was a well to do farmer, and before committing the rash act made a will bequeathing to his fair intended all his property, real estate and personal. He had been attending Salvation Army meetings during his visit in Ottawa, and it is believed that owing to his weak mind being easily influenced he became a religious fanatic, which, with his love escapede, led him to take his own life.

A Bullet in the Temple.

About one o'clock Saturday morning patrolman Lester heard the report of a pistol near the corner of Sandwich and Church streets, Windsor, Ont. He started in that direction and met a man whom he arrested on suspicion, after a hard struggle, and found a revolver with one chamber empty and a mask in his pocket. About six o'clock Saturday morning Albert John, an old citizen, was found lying in the gutter at the corner of Pell and Church streets dead, with a bullet hole in his temple.

A Double Elopement.

A double elopement, which occurred on Thursday evening, caused considerable excitement at Concord, N. H. The parties were Geo. L. Maxam, a livery stable keeper; Geo. W. Blake, freight conductor; Mrs. Alma Dickerman and Mrs. H. T. Dickerman. Maxam is married and has a son 17 years old; Blake is married, and the women married brothers. The wife of A. Dickerman leaves three young children, and the other woman one child eight years old. Both men took all the money, leaving their families destitute.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

ONE OF THE BEST TONICS.

Dr. A. Atkinson, Prof. Materia Medica and Dermatology, in College of Surgeons and Physicans, Baltimore, Md., says: "It makes a pleasant drink, and is one of our best tonics in the shape of phosphates in soluble form."

"I'm looking for employment," said a young man entering a merchant's office. "You are, hey? Well, you'll find it in the dictionary over there—er—among the E's."
