Business Women's Week To Be Observed October 4-10

The week of October 4 to the 10th, will be observed as Business Women's Week by the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The purpose of Business Women's Week, being observed nationally for the fourth year in Canada, is to call attention to the achievements of business women and women in the professions and to give the public an opportunity to become acquainted with the program of the Canadian Federation of B and PW Clubs. Since the formation of our Federation twenty-nine years ago, our objectives have broadened and deepened to meet the ever increasing and demanding needs of employed women in Canada's rapidly expanding economy. Our numbers as employed women increase steadily. So do the problems in relation to the welfare of working women and we must therefore develop within our country and community conditions whereby women will achieve wider recognition of their place in its development and will desire to fulfill their public responsibilities in it. During Business Women's Week we are provided with the opportunity of making known that purpose and what we have done to achieve it. It is our hope that all clubs in the Federation will avail themselves of the opportunity thus provided to further the aims and objectives of our Federation through a more widespread recognition of it and our purpose.

Autumn Beauty Arrives As Last Vacationists Depart

The thrashing—that has been our work-of-farm this week, together with the storing of straw-bales. "You should take a snap of the grainlands in stook" we suggested to Granddaughter before the thrashing commenced. "You could get a nice picture of them from this or that hilltop about. "But why?" she asked. "Won't we always have harvest-stocks?" "You never know. Methods of farming change. Old ways are discarded. We never dreamed there could come a day when we would be farming without horses. And there'd always be farm-carts and wagons and buggies! Now these of the golden years are almost museum-pieces! Why, even the rail-fences of the farms, have disappeared. Western Canada's sections once had their miles of stooks where there are none now they say. Instead they have the swath and combine. It's likely the Island too will be the same before long. This week the thrashing. And one evening of it we went with James, and others of the principals' kin and friends to a fore-gathering which celebrated a recent marriage. We welcomed a niece to the family. She was once a schoolmate of Jamie. Later, a nurse by profession she brings now her enviable skills and her charms to a farm where, we can appreciate by our lengthy experience, all will be called into play. Indeed with few exceptions, every art and craft mattered, every knowledge and grace acquired, can find a time and place and use in farm-life, in the home and church and community about. From this old home at Alderlea, we wish this young couple, and all the Autumn-weds who face life on a farm, that measure of content and happiness we have found in our day by day round with James, children, grand-children, and in-laws, here on that which runs from the mill-stream below in the valley up the gentle rise of fields to level farmlands above. This week too brought us that regret which is occasioned when last vacationists to the neighborhood and community, face away from Island scenes, turning hearts towards home. We shall miss them because they have helped brighten the summery season for those of us bound to Island farms. Mr. and Mrs. A. who summer at the farm in the road from us, have drifted away too, gone to spend a holiday with loved ones in the States. Lovely holidays may they enjoy, gathering up pleasant memories of their visit to keep all through the year! Now it is the week that picks up to go-gathering parting souvenirs as do humans: a scarlet October leaf, a yellowing fern, a feather lost from a migrating wing, a fish hook, a gaudy fish-lure, gold of grain-seeds, a miniature potato—memories of beautiful scenes along vale and hill. Beauty is the watchword of this season, for: "Within the loom of God above. He weaves with strands of light: The glistening threads of silver The threads of gold so bright. He uses in His pattern A skein of crimson too: And in His greater judgement The background all of blue." Until Monday — Diary — Good-night.
