(For The Examiner.) Our Ever Present Friend.

I.

When wandering afar from our kindred and friends,
And vainly we seek for a face that we know,
What comfort to feel there is One condescends
To cheer us and guide us wherever we go.
Then let us remember our dear Friend and Brother,
Who ever is ready to come to our side,
And let us not slight Him for sire nor mother,
Or fall in our praises where'er we abide.

II.

When we think of the dear ones who in love and in truth
Have labored and watched o'er the infantile head,
And guided our footsteps in childhood and youth;
We sigh for the joys which so quickly have fled:
But remember that He who has wisely bequeathed
Is able to comfort and amply repay,
And in His great book He has graciously left
Sweet comforts to cheer us along on our way.

III.

How often when sickness and trials surround,
We sigh for the health which we never learned to prize;
Tis then that the love we despised will abound
To cheer us and wipe every tear from our eyes:
Then let us, when blessed with his goodness and treasure,
Remember His love ere our trials begin;
And thus we will calmly submit to His pleasure,
For the cross we must bear if the crown we would win.

IV.

How oft when temptations and sorrows assail,
We bow 'neath the weight and are quickly brought low,
Because we have trusted our own strength so frail,
And looked not to Him who can crush every foe:
Then let us remember our Helper is ready
To give us the victory over the strong;
And when the vile tempter comes let us be steady,
And He will defend us and crown us ere long.

V.

Thus oft should our voices be raised to His throne
For mercy and aid, as we journey along;
And thus we will never be sad or alone,
For praise to our Helper will be our glad song:
Then let us remember on every occasion
To lean on the strong arm stretched forth to sustain,
And spread the glad tidings to every nation
Of Him who rewards, and the Lamb who was slain.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Arithmetic of the Chess Board.

SIR,—While investigating a chess problem, which I need not explain here further than that it was on the movements of a fugitive knight pursued by another over the board, I came upon a curious fact in regard to their combined numerals—that is to say, the board, which was numbered 1 to 64, showed the added number of each double move (each knight having stepped on 32 different squares) to be uniformly the sum of 65. The white knight following a backward series from 32 to 1, and the black knight taking the forward series of 33 to 64. There must be some simple way of explaining this curious uniformity, but what is it? The following tabulated form of the figures further explains the question, but the principle of it does not seem to be confined to the number of squares on the chess board:—

PAWN-EE.

A Stranger's Opinion of Our Public Garden.

SIR,—Passing into the Public Square recently, and finding the mail-sorting not concluded, I took a seat outside where I could enjoy the beautiful flowers by the weird light of that twilight hour. Very soon a stranger dropped into a seat on the same bench and asked how long it would be before the mail was ready for delivery. I told him I thought about fifteen minutes, as it was at least half an hour since it arrived.

"This is a pleasant evening," said he, "and we ought not to complain if we had to wait even longer, in such a beautiful public garden."

"I suppose," I asked, "you have seen it in the day time, for its beauties are best observed when the sun is toying with the colors in their harmonious blending."

"Yes," said he, "I have walked over the ground several times, and I made up my mind that the ladies of your city must have had a hand in the selection, at least, of the floral adornments."

"Doubtless," I replied, "we are indebted to our lady friends for securing the fund that pays for the labor; but, next to them we are indebted to a young enthusiast, a born genius at the business, who in former years devoted both his time and money for the public pleasure, and still kept at it, under some unappreciative discouragements; to him the city is indebted for carrying out what you see now."

The stranger pressed his gloved hands together, and with a motion of applause gave a loud "Bravo" for the young enthusiast, and I only wish Arthur Newbery had been there incognito to hear that "Bravo." It was from a gentleman (whose name I may not give) accustomed to the best Ottawa society.

Noticing the people coming out of the Post Office with mail matter, I knew the wicket had been swung open and that he could now get his letters; so I said to him: "The letters are on delivery now, Sir, if you wish to rise." On our way to the building I asked him not to forget a good word for the Charlottetown Public Square when he reached Ottawa. "No fear," he said, "it is the one redeeming feature of your city, and would be a worthy adjunct to our own Parliamentary grounds."

AT REVOR.

Cavendish Items.

On Thursday evening, the 26th inst., the Rev. L. G. McNeill delivered a lecture in our hall, the subject being, "The Battle of Waterloo, or a Great Irishman's greatest fight." The Hall was crowded with an attentive and appreciative audience, who listened eagerly while he discoursed to us of the events which led up to and culminated in that fearful struggle. He also drew vivid pen pictures of the two great commanders who were brought face to face on that occasion; and with the aid of a chart of the battle ground explained to us the positions of the contending armies, and the different manoeuvres gone through on that ever memorable 18th of June, 1815. The rev. lecturer was well qualified for his task, as he has visited the field of Waterloo and viewed it from its different strategic points. Mr. McNeill is a very popular lecturer, and never fails to draw a crowded house in this his native place. At the close of the lecture, complimentary remarks were made by several of our citizens, and also by the Rev. Allan Simpson, of Halifax, who is at present visiting his friends and relatives here.

Our farmers are busy haying, and the merry clatter of the moving machine rings out on the clear morning air. The season, so far, is favorable; but the crop is light, though the refreshing rains of the early part of the month have improved it considerably. Other crops in this section look exceedingly well, and are maturing rapidly.

Fishing, so far, is a total failure. There has not been any mackerel taken yet.

Military Blundering.

(India correspondence of London Times.)

A very bad case of gross military blundering, attended with disastrous consequences, has recently attracted public comment in the press. When the 2nd Battalion of the Queen's (Royal West Surrey Regiment) returned from Burmah in the last cold season a detachment was absent on service with the Southern Shan column. The party suffered great privations on the return journey from Mandalay to Umballa. When the detachment left Mandalay it was 75 strong, but on the way to Calcutta it was reduced by deaths from enteric fever and Cholera, and though leaving sick men at various places to 62. The remainder of the detachment was then ordered from Calcutta in the terrible June heat to Umballa by train, though there are distinct orders against soldiers travelling during this season except in case of unavoidable necessity, and then only on the certificate of a medical officer. The 62 men marched from the front to the station at 4 p. m. The unfortunate soldiers arrived at the station thoroughly exhausted, many of them being in a fainting condition. The heat of the journey to Allahabad was very great, and on their arrival one poor fellow was taken out dead, while nine more were sent to the hospital too ill to travel any further. The remaining 52 men were sent on to Umballa, and shortly after reaching there another man was attacked by sunstroke, while several others had to be taken into the hospital suffering from the effects of the journey. Thus out of 75 men who started from Mandalay but 52 arrived in Umballa, many of these being in a most critical condition.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste, it soothes the child, softens the bowels, and relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. [April 1 '88]

The Emperor Francis Joseph is one of the baldest men in his dominions. He has a ragged face, half hidden under a mass of wild moustache and whiskers, and his features at a first glance are repulsive. He has a hard brown, a strong, rasping voice, and his habitual expression is one of intense seriousness.
