

Nehru In Britain For Two-day Talks With Eden

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nehru flew here Friday night after visiting Italy and Russia and drove to the country residence of Prime Minister Eden for two days of talks.

The Indian leader arrived in London only 10 days before the beginning of the Geneva conference of Eden, President Eisenhower, Russian Premier Khrushchev and French Premier Faure.

Friday morning, Nehru had driven to Vatican City where he had his first meeting with the Pope. The Pontiff told his guest he wished him success and the effective realization of your high ideals.

He also met with President Giovanni Gronchi.

AWAIT ARRIVAL. Smiling under his white Gandhi cap, Nehru was welcomed at London airport by Eden. The Statesmen immediately drove off to Chequers, Eden's country estate.

This morning they will be joined by India's United Nations representative, V. K. Krishna Menon who is believed to have discussed the Geneva dispute with President Eisenhower during his talks in Washington this week. Nehru arrived here from weeks of high-level talks in Moscow, Warsaw, Belgrade and Rome. He spent two weeks in Russia during which he conferred with nearly all of the Kremlin's top men.

Eden and his position have been considering the position they will take in talking with the Russians at Geneva. They have anxiously looked forward to the arrival of Nehru, fresh from his meetings with the Soviet leaders.

HOPE FOR PEACE. "Allowing for my own tendency to wishful thinking," he said, "I definitely came away with the impression that there was more hope for peace and peaceful settlement than ever before."

Referring to the Geneva conference he said he believed the four powers there could produce "hopeful results" and that the conference "might be one of a series."

Length Of Parliamentary Session May Be Record

OTTAWA (CP) — Length of the present session of Parliament will approximate or better the modern 139-day record established in 1953-54.

Prorogation depends almost entirely on how long the Progressive Conservatives intend to continue their filibustering attack against indefinite extension of the wide powers of Defence Production Minister Howe.

The debate goes into its 11th day Monday. Since it started there have been 106 speeches, 73 by Conservatives.

The Commons completed its 124th sitting day Friday. The record length of the last session equaled it July 29. However, if Saturday sittings are instituted this week, the record will be matched by July 27 and broken the next day.

Current speculation is that the session will end in about two weeks, or by July 22. However, it may not be realized if the Opposition takes advantage of the rules of the House to prolong further debate on the Defence Production Act.

The House now is debating a motion proposed by Finance Minister Harris that a vote be taken on second reading — approval in principle — of a bill to make the defence production department permanent and continue indefinitely powers under the act.

All members are entitled to speak for 40 minutes on Mr. Harris' motion and the Opposition may use this opportunity to keep the debate going. Once a vote has been taken on the motion the House must vote on second reading.

However, when the bill is receiving clause-by-clause study the Conservatives again can register opposition by debating the various sections. They also can discuss the bill and move amendments when the legislation reaches the final reading stage. But the government at this time can take measures to cut off the debate.

OTHER BUSINESS. The Defence Production Act is the most controversial item of legislation still before the Commons. However, extended debate is expected on some estimates of government department still to be approved.

The discussions will centre on Canada's foreign trade policies, particularly the sale of wheat to Communist countries, and on Revenue Minister McCann's role in a political controversy caused by the failure of Ontario Conservative James Dempsey to report election campaign contributions in 1951.

Eisenhower To Report On Plans For Conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will report in a TV radio address Friday night on his plans and hopes for the summit conference.

Two hours after the broadcast he will take off for Geneva for the conference with Sir Anthony Eden, French Premier Edgar Faure and Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin.

The broadcast will give him an opportunity to do some diplomatic stage setting for the meeting and to counter Russia's pre-Geneva propaganda line.

The heart of this propaganda, as shown in a new Izvestia editorial, is that the Soviet government is working vigorously for world peace and that the Western powers must do a lot more than they have done to help produce East-West settlement.

HOPEFUL OUTLOOK. The White House announced that Eisenhower will make his 15-minute broadcast at 8:15 p.m. EDT (6:15 p.m. MDT).

Eisenhower has indicated in recent press conferences that his approach to the Geneva meeting is one of hopefulness. But he said Wednesday that his hope "has got to have greater food" before it can become expectation.

This line, which has also been taken by State Secretary Dulles, is the opposite of Soviet propaganda. Dulles has asserted that Soviet concessions, which they actually things which should have been done long ago.

At the heart of the developing propaganda argument is the aim of marshalling public opinion over the world to put pressure on one side or the other to make concessions. Eisenhower has declared there will be no "appeasement" but that he will negotiate in good faith to improve relations between the Western powers and Russia.

TWO DISTINCT VIEWS. Western preparations for the conference have produced two distinct views of what Russia's real purpose is. One widely held opinion here is that the Soviets are suffering from agricultural and industrial weaknesses at home as well as severe foreign policy reverses abroad—notably the decision of the Western powers to make the Western Germany sovereign and rearm it.

According to this view the Soviet problems are not in any sense desperate or an immediate threat to Russia's military power. But they are severe enough to make Soviet leaders want a breathing spell, an end to the international slugging that marks the cold war.

At the other extreme is the belief that what the Soviets are really after is not an easing of their problems but the disruption of the Western alliance. According to this view they're trying to achieve, by a show of friendship and talk of peace, what they find it difficult to do by force—that is, to prevent by threat—that is, the Western world against the Reds.

Eisenhower and Dulles do not expect any solutions of great problems at Geneva. What they do hope for is agreement on future ways of tackling such issues as international trade, disarmament, German unification, peaceful uses of atomic energy, and the like.

the meeting said "the discussions covered a wide field of topics of common interest, including the situation in the Far East and the impending four-power conference at Geneva."

Nehru, completing a five-week swing through Asia and Europe during which he talked with Russian leaders, is believed to have given Eden some idea of what he might expect from the Soviet Union at the Geneva meeting.

He is reported to have given the British leader an account of his Moscow discussions and is believed to have said he believes Russia wants a live-and-let-live arrangement with the West. Nehru is understood to have advised Eden of his reasons for thinking that Russia will be negotiating not from weakness but from strength at Geneva.

Sees Canada Heading For Crisis In Road Financing

OTTAWA (CP) — The average motorist, howling along on the well-paved highway, may not realize it but Canada is heading into a crisis on road financing.

The reason is that the roads are becoming crowded with more and more motorists, jamming into traffic lanes that were planned for one-half their numbers.

By 1960, says the Canadian Tax Foundation, the number of vehicles on Canadian roads may rise to 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 from the 3,400,000 in 1953.

With this huge army of drivers demanding bigger and better roads and more of them, the annual cost may rise possibly to $900,000,000 in 1960 from $600,000,000.

Who is to pay for these huge outlays? Where is the money to come from? How much is to be borne by the motorist, and how much by the taxpayer?

POINTS TO MOTORIST. In a 158-page survey, called Taxes and Traffic, the foundation, an independent tax research organization, suggests that perhaps the motorist should pay a little more.

It suggested that as a working rule, the motor vehicle users' share of costs should range from about three-quarters in provinces like Ontario where road transportation has developed on a large scale to about one-half in provinces like Newfoundland where it is less important.

The foundation suggested that in some provinces, it should be possible to increase motor vehicle registration fees, particularly for passenger cars, and in other provinces, the gasoline tax could be raised.

It also suggested that toll roads be built if roads cannot be financed in the usual manner.

Generally, says the foundation, there is a need for broad studies to establish the responsibilities of motorists and other taxpayers toward roads and streets. There also

Nehru Talks With Eden

By ARTHUR GAVSHON. LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru, on a 36-hour visit to Britain, is reported to have told Sir Anthony Eden Saturday the Soviet Union intends to raise the Far Eastern question at the Geneva Big Four conference starting July 18.

Diplomatic informants said the Indian leader told the British prime minister that Premier Bulganin is expected to call for early high-level talks on the Far East with Red China represented and Nationalist China barred. Russia is also expected to demand again Red China's admission to the United Nations.

Nehru and Eden met with their aides at Chequers, the prime minister's residence outside London. Attending were Mrs. Pandit, Nehru's sister and ambassador to Britain, Krishna Menon, Nehru's foreign policy adviser, Sir N. R. Pillai, Indian minister of external affairs, British Foreign Secretary Harold MacMillan, Lord Home, the Commons' health secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, Britain's high commissioner to India.

A terse communique issued after the meeting said "the discussions covered a wide field of topics of common interest, including the situation in the Far East and the impending four-power conference at Geneva."

Nehru, completing a five-week swing through Asia and Europe during which he talked with Russian leaders, is believed to have given Eden some idea of what he might expect from the Soviet Union at the Geneva meeting.

He is reported to have given the British leader an account of his Moscow discussions and is believed to have said he believes Russia wants a live-and-let-live arrangement with the West. Nehru is understood to have advised Eden of his reasons for thinking that Russia will be negotiating not from weakness but from strength at Geneva.

Seeks Aid For French Islands. ST. PIERRE, St. Pierre et Miquelon (CP)—Governor Pierre Sicard left Saturday for Paris where he will seek financial assistance to bolster the French colony's two principal industries.

Governor Sicard, who replaced unpopular Jean Davier in January after island residents had pleaded for his recall, is said to be after government funds to enlarge the port here and provide island fishermen with small trawlers to increase their catches.

It is not known when he will return. The islands 12 miles south of Newfoundland are the only French possessions in North America.
