Important Announcement!

A Grand Treat for Subscribers to The Examiner.

THE GREATEST WORLD'S FAIR BOOK IS READY!

We take pleasure in announcing that we have made arrangements with the publishers of

The Magic City

to supply this celebrated work in Weekly Parts to our subscribers at the very low price of TEN CENTS per number. It will be issued in sixteen consecutive Weekly Parts, each containing sixteen to twenty magnificent Photographic Views and Historical Descriptions of the WORLD'S FAIR and the MIDWAY PLAISANCE, by the famous American Author, MR. J. W. BUEL. The Photographs are the finest that have ever been offered to the public. They constitute a splendid series of

OVER 300 VIEWS

in NATURAL PHOTOGRAPH COLOR, embracing all the wonderful features of the World's Fair and its surroundings, and the famous MIDWAY PLAISANCE, with its curious and interesting character sketches of life in foreign countries and among wild and curious races of people.

IT IS The Greatest, The Grandest, The Most Beautiful, The Only Complete

History of the Fair that has been published. The Photographs, in natural colors, are while the historical descriptions give the work a value beyond all computation. The author spent nearly the whole summer at the Fair, preparing his notes and superintending the work of the corps of artists employed in taking views. These pictures are the finest in existence. They were taken by trained artists of more than national reputation, who knew how to secure the best results and the most favorable points of view. Their beauty and splendor will be a surprise to our readers. Nothing equal to them has ever been seen in pictorial representations; and the fact that they were obtained especially for THE MAGIC CITY, and will not be made common by promiscuous publication in other works, adds a hundredfold to their value.

Beautiful as a Dream,

There are other World's Fair Series being issued, cheap, unreliable, garbled affairs, but the price charged for them is no lower than for the magnificent "WHITE CITY" series. You only need to compare the specimen of "MAGIC CITY" with other books to show you that the "MAGIC CITY" will sweep the field and over-run the business being done by these inferior World's Fair Series in the field now.

The Examiner Always Gets the Best!

Watch Our Advertising Columns for the Announcement of the First Grand Portfolio of "THE MAGIC CITY."

THE AMERICAN

$8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all.
Writes just like a $100 machine.
No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct.
Prints on flat surface.
Writing always in sight.
Corrections and insertions easily made.
Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches.

Easy to understand—learned in 5 minute
Weights only four pounds—most portable.
Compact, takes up but little room.
Built solid and simple; can't get out of order.
Capital and lower case keyboard alike—easily mastered.
More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work.
Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost."

ART THAT WILL WASH.

A Chinese artist came here on an orient-steamship and has been selling some queer things in red, green and yellow to his admiring countrymen. He prints on silk and linen as a rule, but will turn out genre pieces on white paper. His taste, however, runs to large pictures on grasscloth, painted in a panoramic way, which permits him to sketch a scene along several linear feet of space. As accustomed as he has been to paint by the acre and with both hands, he is not dismayed by a huge canvas, but with calmness and industry will proceed to illuminate a whole set of bed sheets with blue elms and green roses and diabolical Chinese gods and women and lovers.

One picture that he showed a reporter was sold to represent a scene very early, though it needed some assistance in order to dispel the idea that it was a caricature at sea. What looked like the raging main, however, was really a Chinese turf, and the man and bedraggled object in the foreground was not a wreck, but a tree. An awful print of a lost Colonial maid in the grasp of a devilish person to be one of an ancient and damned tribe in the leaves and tendrils of a flowering shrub. Instead of slippery snails, as one might have supposed, were lambskins, and a rock in the boiling stage was only a jasper set in the heather and bushes.

A series of small paintings told a romantic story very dear to the Chinese heart. The hero of the pictorial tale was the strongest man in the empire, having become an athlete under the teaching of his wife, who was a female Sanson. Together they challenged the world without soft gloves and "bar none." In course of time, however, war came, and the wife was eventually taken away, leaving the husband very miserable. As the artist paints him standing mournfully at the door of his deserted and broken house, great vermilion tears roll down his manly complexion, stain his green vest and trickle along his chromatic trousers and sink into the scarlet and yellow earth.

Then 20 years go by, and another woman, 20 years old, and the strong champion goes forth for a preliminary combat. Boldly! The man and wife are set against each other, and the artist has to hold his distance and not get too close to the action. He shows the husband holding his distance and not getting too close to the action. He shows the husband holding his distance and not getting too close to the action.

DON'T CARRY A COUNTERFEIT COIN.

It is Contrary to Law and May Entail Disagreeable Consequences.

"A man better have a live rattlesnake in his pocket than a counterfeit dollar carried as a pocket piece," said Inspector Lawrence of the treasury department when talking about the carrying of coins or bills which one knows to be counterfeit. "A great many men don't know the danger they run in this thing," he said. "Suppose, for instance, that a man has a counterfeit dollar which he has had for years—one that he has picked up somewhere and carries as a pocket piece. He goes into a store one day and buys some article or other and gets a 1/4 of silver coin in change. He goes from the store, say to a saloon where he buys a drink, or to some drug store to get something or other—it matters not where he goes, provided there is one of these 'smart' young fellows behind the counter who is always ready to take a run-up on something or other. 'Paying for his purchase with one of the dollars, the man behind the counter says to the clerk, 'That is a counterfeit. The clerk, somewhat abashed and not liking the crying of the crowd around, begins to make excuses to the effect that he did not know it was counterfeit, and so on, and the clerk, who is anxious to make a record as a counterfeiter, detects and calls in the police, and the man is arrested and searched. On his person is found the only counterfeit dollar, and the possession of the two dollars is proved. The fact is evident that he intended to pass both of them, and that man hasn't got enough friends in the world to keep him out of the penitentiary. True, he looks hard, but that man had no business carrying around a counterfeit coin for a pocket piece or any other reason. It is a plain violation of the law to carry counterfeit money about with you, something which many people do not realize.

"Suppose I happen to know that a man, a cashier in one of the well known banks of Minneapolis or St. Paul for instance, has a $50 bill in his possession. I go into that bank, and I call him by name and ask him for that bill. He says he hasn't got it. 'But,' I reply, 'you did have such a bill yesterday last night, because I have the testimony of two reputable men that they saw you show it around to some parties. Now, I want that bill. You have no business with it, and you must make various excuses and does not give me any satisfaction. What do you suppose I do? I get up and get a search warrant, and I go through every dollar of money in that bank, dollar by dollar, or bill by bill, until I find that counterfeit $50 bill, and then I confiscate it. Then used to be no law against this sort of thing, but there is one now, and the public generally ought to know the facts in the case. And formerly it was not a crime to make the dies which are used in counterfeiting—anybody could make them, and anybody could have them in their possession so long as they were not used, but that has all been changed now."

Many are the uses to which the counterfeit is put, but one of the queerest is the which prevails in Cape Town, South Africa, where certain leaves are made to serve the purpose of visiting cards. It might occur to the reader that a pack of thick leaves covered with prickly spines would not be easily accommodated in an ordinary card case.

The leaves of the special kind of cactus used for this purpose are not very prickly, however, and I furthermore these unique cards are not carried about, but are fastened growing on the plant which stands at the foot of the front steps. When a lady calls, she has only to take a "50" or "100" card, and scratch her finger on the glossy surface of the leaves, while a gentleman accomplishes the same end with his sharp nails. The lines thus scratched turn silver white and remain clear and distinct on the leaf for days.

On New Year's day these cactus cards are put in the card boxes, and popular hostesses often appropriate a large branch of their cactus plant to the registry of their respective day.

There is one cactus which is not especially plentiful, which not only has smooth leaves, but has spines so large and stiff that it makes excellent pointers. Visitors are saved even the slightest trouble of drawing out a hatpin or a penknife.—Youth's Companion.

Taught a Lesson. A certain pompous lady, after teasing the shopman of a millinery establishment for the forbearance limit, pompously ordered a spoon of cotton to be sent to her house. It was agreed she should be made an example of and a warning to her kind. She was surprised, and to her indignation intensely interested, soon after the arrival home. A common dry, drawn by four horses, proceeded slowly to her door. On the dry, with bare arms, were a number of stout laborers. They were holding on vigorously to some object she could not see. It was a most puzzling affair. The neighbors stared. After a deal of whip cracking and other impressive ceremonial, the lady was backed against the curb. There, reposing calmly, end up, in the center of the cart was the identical spoon of cotton she had ordered. With the aid of a plank it was finally rolled, barrel fashion, to the pavement. After a mortal struggle it was upended on the purchaser's doorstep. The fact that the purchaser came on a little later and kicked her property into the gutter detracted nothing from it.—London Million.

Diamond Cut Diamond. Two queer looking creatures sat at a cafe table "toasting their coffee. One of them, while the other played carelessly with his spoon—a silver spoon. He turned it over and over, dropped it, picked it up again and, lost of all, when he thought nobody was looking, he stuck it into the sleeve of his boot. But the other man saw it, and, deliberately lifting a spoon in his turn, he said, "Goodness, what I saw you a pretty conjuring trick! I bet that I will place this spoon in my pocket!"—he stuck it into the word—"and will take it out of this gentleman's boot." This he does. Whereupon he gravely took up his hat, bowed to the company and walked off.—Franklin Trustee.

Big Elevators. The largest elevator in the world—in fact, there are three of a size—may be seen at Wheeling, where the passengers for the West Shore line are lifted by hydraulic power 165 feet to a trestle structure, where they take the train. Each car will accommodate from 150 to 200 people. Immense elevators on a similar plan are being built at Glasgow for the tunnel under the Clyde. The highest single elevator is the one in the Washington monument, which is worked by steam, the chain being run upon a drum. It makes up in safety what it lacks in speed.—Boston Globe.

For Over Fifty Years. An Old And Well Tried Remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays the pain, cures the colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhoea. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.—m. v. f. w. k. y. l.

Deaf for a Year

Catarrh in the Head
Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read: "Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attend to me, but no improvement was apparent. I could distinguish no sound, and I was almost entirely helpless under the care of a specialist, who some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me some good. I began taking it without the expectation of any lasting help. To my surprise, and great joy, when I had taken three bottles, that my hearing began to return. I had not taken more than a very little with the catarrh. I consider this remarkable case, and cordially recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have catarrh."
